Jack Kirsch, president of Allied of Illinois, in a letter addressed to Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, New York, this week said that "immediate changes back to the single features and distributors is the only salvation for independent exhibitors, and for the producers and distributors as well." The letter explained that 95 per cent of Chicago's independent exhibitors will go back to single features in 24 hours if the large circuits will do likewise.

Story Purchases

During the past month, Hollywood's story vaults were increased by the addition of 53 stories and plays, bought by 15 producers, with one property purchased by Katharine Hepburn for future film use. This season of product announcements for the coming year kept the average of purchases high, although it was the lowest number recorded for any of the three months of 1939.

"Abe Lincoln in Illinois," Broadway stage success written by Robert E. Sherwood and starring Raymond Massey, has been acquired for production as a motion picture by the Max Gordon Plays and Pictures Corporation with distribution through RKO Radio. The Max Gordon company previously had acquired "The American Way" for production and release through RKO. According to the terms of the contract, Max Gordon the latter is to produce two films yearly for release by RKO.

Mr. Sherwood, who is president of the dramatists Guild, defended the sale of the play in the current issue of Equity, organ of Actors Equity. He also said: "We believe that the manager or playwright who sells a play prematurely to the movies is betraying the theatre's best interests and his own.

Mr. Sherwood said the sale was made on condition that the play's producers participate in the film on a sharing basis and thus exercise a reasonable control and that Mr. Massey be the star, and that the selling of the play was influenced principally because "we were convinced that in this play a means had been found to restate the fundamental principles of the democratic faith."

An analysis and listing of the month's purchases will be found on page 16.

Government's Latin America Film Drive to Start Soon

Motion pictures will play an important part in President Roosevelt's plans for strengthening the tie between the United States and the Latin-American republics, embodied in a report of an inter-departmental committee transmitted by him to the Senate in Washington this week.

The report, made public last November, provides for a film project to cost $176,000, and includes the dubbing of six motion pictures of Government activities in Spanish and Portuguese; production of a picture on the American republics to be shown in this country; production of a film on the United States to be shown in South America, and equipment of embassies in the Latin-American capitals with projection equipment.

The inter-departmental committee report provided for utilization of the United States Film Service as a coordinating agency and clearing house for motion picture matters of interest to the 21 American republics.

It was estimated that the cost of preparing the six Government films for use in South America would cost $30,000, and the production of the proposed United States and Latin-American films would cost $45,000 each; $6,000 would be required for distribution and exploitation of the six films; $6,500 for a film library and exchange serving Latin-America, and $38,000 for installation of projection equipment in the embassies in Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Cuba, Mexico, and Peru; and $10,000 for expenses in connection with the preparation of films.

The committee also recommended that Coast Guard vessels make a "goodwill" tour of South American ports, carrying pictures showing the activities of the service.

Steffes Retiring

W. A. (Al) Steffes, one of the oldest in point of service in exhibitor organizations and now the president of Allied of the Northwest, will retire from that office after national Allied's convention in Minneapolis, June 13th to 15th. He intends to devote his entire time after the Minneapolis convention to his personal business—as an independent Minneapolis exhibitor.

Al Steffes for 20 years has been a leader in exhibitor organizations, and led the "bolt" from the MPTOA which resulted in the formation of the present Allied States Association, of which he later was president.

5,077 Theatres

The South American market, presently looming large in the attentions of American film companies bent on exploiting new fields in compensation for the contracting opportunities on other continents, now numbers 5,077 motion picture theatres, distributed through 19 countries. The audience which they serve is showing increasing interest in Hollywood product, although domestic production is sharing in the spreading motion picture habit.

Analysis of trade figures on the South American market and its theatres can be found on page 13.

Higher Education

The history and art of motion pictures is recognized as a major subject in the new catalogue sent out by New York's Columbia University. A course is to be conducted by Dr. Duncan E. M. Emerich and will be limited to 15 students. Prerequisites are 18 academic points from English and Literature courses.

Engineers' Meeting

Meeting for their semi-annual discussion of technical progress in motion pictures and allied fields, the Society of Motion Picture Engineers this week gathered in Hollywood to hear committee reports and scientific papers, watch demonstrations and consider in convention the sum of developments of the year. Significantly one afternoon and evening were devoted to minute discussion of television during which apparatus design, lighting studio technique, program production and application to motion pictures were topics. Imminent plans for the sale of receivers to the public and for the use of films in television programs were announced by RCA representatives. Also, in addition to the accustomed program topics concerned with cinematography, projection and sound reproduction, there was discussion of the growth of the documentary film field.

The sessions are reported on page 19.

STUDIOS' BUDGET INCREASE ESTIMATED AT 23 MILLIONS

Hollywood's Estimates Turn on Plans to Add to "A" Pictures and Reduce "B" Product in New Season

Giving effect to promises made to date by distribution executives to exhibitors of the country that 1939-40 will see an increase all along the line in the number of "A" pictures and a sharp decrease in "B's," and a greater number of "high-budget" productions, production executives of the majors in Hollywood now estimate a raise in production budgets for the new season of from $23,000,000 to $30,000,000 over 1938-39.

Eleven large companies whose new budgets are in at least tentative form estimate that their 1938-39 expenditures, which the studios placed at approximately $153,470,000, will be met by expenditures ranging from $176,050,000 to $183,050,000 in 1939-40. Hollywood's own estimates of average annual budgets run from $135,000,000 to $150,000,000 over the last few years. The companies cite further evidence of increased investment per unit by decreasing the number of pictures from 445 in 1938-39 to 438 in 1939-40.

All budgetary figures, of course, are "round," as made by Hollywood in Hollywood.

Columbia Awaits Convention

Columbia Pictures is the only large company from which no approximation of 1939-40 budget was forthcoming, this because the studio still is calculating pending the company's convention May 8th. For this year, a $9,000,000 expenditure was listed.

MGM's $42,500,00 figure for 1938-39 will run approximately the same for the new year, although the company would not disclose an exact amount due to the attention given recently in the press to star and executive salaries.

At Monogram, as with Columbia, a final figure is to be determined in time for its convention, May 4th. It was learned. however, that the $1,770,000 budget of 1938-39 will be increased next season by at least 50 per cent.

Paramount, too, will decide prior to the convention, June 12th, but the total will not be less than this year's $26,000,000.

Republic's $5,000,000 for 1938-39 will be jumped to $7,500,000; RKO's $16,000,000 is expected to be increased by at least $4,000,000, and Twentieth Century-Fox's 1938-39 figure will be met by an increase of from $4,000,000 to $6,000,000 in 1939-40.

Other Budgets Compared

Comparative budgets of the United Artists producers will all be higher, as explained in the detailed comparison appearing herewith.

At Universal, no figure was available either for 1938-39 or 1939-40, but at the company's annual convention this week in Cincinnati, the management announced an increase of $5,000,000 for the new year. The company's product announcement appears on page 24.

Warners' budget of $27,000,000 for 1938-39 will be increased $3,000,000.

1939-40 Production Budgets of Hollywood Compared with 1938-39

Company-by-company analysis of production budgets reported from Hollywood for 1939-40, compared with those for 1938-39, and a comparison of feature pictures promised for both the 1939 and 1940 seasons, follows:

COMPANY	1938-39 BUDGET	FEATURES PROMISED FOR 1938-39	1939-40 BUDGET	FEATURES PROMISED FOR 1939-40
COLUMBIA	$ 9,000,000	56(w)	Undetermined increase(a)	56(w)

NOTE: Total features listed for 1939-40 for Columbia, Monogram, Paramount, RKO and United Artists are tentative, pending formal announcements to be made at annual sales conventions still to be held.

(a) Although Columbia is expected to increase the 1939-40 budget—with increases going mainly to Frank Capra's and several other higher-budget pictures, final budget will not be determined until convention of May 8th.

(b) MGM's 1939-40 budget was reported to be approximately the same as 1938-39; the studio would not disclose official figures.

(c) Monogram's 1939-40 budget will be determined by convention time, on May 4th, but it was said that the new figure will be at least 50 per cent more than 1938-39.

(d) Paramount's 1939-40 budget likewise will be determined by convention time, on June 12th, but it will not be under last year's total.

(e) Goldwyn's 1939-40 budget has not been estimated because of lawsuit the company has pending against United Artists.

(f) Universal would not disclose total budgets for 1938-39 or 1939-40, but at the annual convention, this week, in Cincinnati the management reported it would raise the new budget by $5,000,000.

(w) Totals include westerns.

Expenditures for Grand National are still to be determined.

Warners, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, Republic and Universal already have had their annual sales conventions; Monogram is set for May 4th and Columbia's and United Artists' will open on May 8th. Paramount, last of the large companies to make convention arrangements, this week set June 12th through 14th and Los Angeles as the dates and place. It will be the company's first national sales convention in seven years, regional conventions having been held in the interim.

David E. Rose, managing director for Paramount in Great Britain, will hold his first general sales convention in London, May 5-7.

A new cartoon series, "Stoneage," featuring the "adventures and romance of prehistoric characters," will be made by Fleischer Studios for Paramount release next season.

The third of Republic's regional meetings got under way at the Drake Hotel in Chicago Thursday. Al Adams, director of advertising, H. J. Yates, J. R. Grainger, president, and Al Adams, director of advertising, spoke, and Max Roth, central district sales manager, presided.

5,077 THEATRES SERVE 120 MILLIONS IN 19 SOUTH AMERICAN COUNTRIES

Motion Pictures Helping to Break Down Illiteracy in Provinces and So Expanding Market, Say Sales Executives

Nineteen countries, with approximately 5,077 theatres serving a population of 120,000,000, constitute the Latin American market to which Hollywood and New York now are turning, to recoup some of the losses suffered in the upsetting of the European and Far East selling field.

Foreign sales managers agree that the peoples of Latin America are becoming nationality-conscious, and are turning to modern thoughts in a desire for those things which North America has had so long. Motion pictures have played an important part in this "awakening" and their role is to be intensified.

A Changing Condition

At the same time sales executives said that, excepting the coastal cities, Latin Americans have a comparatively low standard of education and economy, but this is rising, enlarging the audiences for product and making more available the money for purchase of American equipment.

Both the English language pictures and the growing native output are called powerful factors in this change.

An insight into the exhibition possibilities in South America is facilitated by reports sent by U. S. commercial attaches in the various countries to the Department of Commerce at Washington.

The Argentine Situation

Of the approximately 1,200 theatres in Argentina, only about 800 may be considered "active," and of these, many in the country districts are operated only on weekends, or infrequently. The total seating capacity of all theatres in the country is approximately 550,000. Buenos Aires, the capital and key city from the viewpoint of theatre grosses, has approximately 178 houses, seating about 131,000 persons.

First-run houses charge up to 2.50 and three pesos, but the average is about two pesos. In the so-called "popular priced" theatres, admissions range from 0.40 to 1.50 pesos.

Two features and shorts are the fare in the first-run houses, but the situation in the subsequent runs is similar to that obtaining in certain sections of this country: three, four and even five features to one program.

The Argentine taste shies from musicals, and prefers romance, adventure, history, and comedy. Though American pictures lead in the metropolitan first-run houses, the preference in the smaller theatres is for native production, this meaning Argentine production, which is increasing, and not Mexican or Spanish production. Mexican films, apparently lacking Argentine locale, dialect and the parochial flavor inseparable from purely native production, have thus far met with little success.

Virtually all of the Argentine theatres are wired for sound; however, only about 300 of these have modern sound equipment. If it were not for the price differential and the unfavorable exchange situation, this would mean a market for American equipment companies.

Bolivia has about 20 theatres, seating about 15,000 persons. These display an interest in about every type of picture except those of too "polite" a nature and with too much dialogue.

GOVERNMENT RADIO TO SOUTH AMERICA

The establishment of a Government radio station for the broadcasting of American programs to Latin-America will be recommended in a report to be handed to President Roosevelt by a group of officials headed by Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, and including representatives of the State, Interior, Justice and Commerce Departments, it has been reported.

The results of the investigation conducted by the officials, it is said, will reveal that Germany and Italy are extremely active in spreading the totalitarian philosophy in South and Central America in news broadcasts sent out two and three times a day.

About 19 of the theatres are wired for sound.

There are about 1,450 houses in Brazil, of which all but about 200 are wired for sound. All but about 50 of the latter are reported closed. The seating capacity of Brazilian theatres is around 700,000. The admission price in first-run houses in key cities is 4$000; in second and third runs, 1$000 (one milreis); while the average throughout the country is 2$000. Brazilian audiences prefer action pictures.

In Chile, there are about 277 theatres, of which it is estimated about 243 are in fairly continuous operation. These latter have an estimated seating capacity of 200,000. About 200 are wired for sound. Those not wired are reported unsuitable for such installation. There is a small amount of construction, the chief market for equipment.

The average admission price is 3.40 pesos for orchestra seats; 1.50 for balcony; 0.80 for gallery. Spanish language pictures are preferred, except in key city "class" houses.

50 of 204 Sound Sets Portable

Information from Colombia, as from many Latin American countries, is incomplete. However, latest statistics indicate about 225 theatres, of which about 204 are wired for sound. Of this number, it is reported that 50 are "portable" sound units;

Complete data on seating capacity are lacking, but a recent checkup showed 45 theatres in seven key cities had a seating capacity of 68,525.

Costa Rica and Cuba

Costa Rica has about 40 theatres, seating 23,887; all are wired, and most of the equipmetn is obsolete. Average admission prices are from 0.60 to 1.00 colon for first class houses and from 0.30 to 0.60 colon for others. Audiences seem to prefer pictures with serious plots.

There are about 375 theatres in Cuba, virtually all equipped with sound, and 90 per cent of them are in the Havana territory.

The Dominican Republic has 28 theatres, seating 12,000 persons. All theatres have sound, most of it inferior. Admission prices, from five to forty cents, depend upon the picture, not the theatre, none of the latter having fixed prices. Women pay five to ten cents less admission than men. In some cases, they are admitted free, if escorted by a male who pays five cents admission. This is in last run houses. Spectacular, historical dramas have first preference, with musicals second.

In Ecuador, there are 37 theatres, seating 40,400 persons. All houses are wired. The equipment is mostly old. There is some theatre building in Guyaquil and Quito, the key cities. Admission prices range from 40 centavos for gallery seats and two sucres for box seats, in the first run theatres, to 20 and 30 centavos for gallery seats to 50 centavos and one sucre for orchestra seats in second and third class houses. The seasons exercise influence on attendance; also the various holidays and local customs. Super feature action pictures and musicals are liked best. Except when good, Spanish language pictures lose to American films in popularity. Mexican films are popular with the laboring classes.

El Salvador has 34 theatres; these seat 38,450; 30 are wired. Generally, American films are preferred; however, the poorer classes like Mexican films.

Honduras has 27 theatres, all wired. Hondurans prefer action pictures.

In Guatemala, there are 34 places in which films are shown, including 18 theatres. Total seating capacity is 18,000. Admission prices range from five to 50 cents. The upper classes prefer American comedies, romances and musicals; the lower prefer simple romances in Spanish language.

Twenty-eight of the establishments mentioned are wired for sound. There are also several exhibitors who use portable equipment.

Mexican Product Competing

In Mexico, there are 823 theatres; 437 with sound, 386 silent. Most of the latter are in small towns, run only occasionally. The average admission price is 0.40 pesos. Action films are preferred. Mexican production is competing heavily with American in backwoods districts.

Nicaragua has 24 theatres, seating 21,750. All are wired. Average admission is estimated from 15 to 20 centavos. "Wild West" pictures are liked best.

Panama also has 24 theatres, of which most are wired. Their seating capacity is about 13,700. There is some theatre building, with two new ones, of American equipment, constructed this year in Panama City. Most theatres in the Republic are poorly designed and ventilated.

Only eight of the 15 theatres in Paraguay are wired for sound; six of these are in Asuncion, the capital. Total seating capacity is estimated at 7,000; the average admission price is 50 pesos. One exhibitor uses a portable projector. Musical extravanganzas are favorite.

205 Theatres in Peru

Peru has 205 theatres, all wired, seating 108,600. The average admission price in the Lima-Callao district is S/0.80, in the provinces it is S/0.50; patrons prefer musicals, comedies, dramas and thrillers, the criterions being action and good stories.

In Uruguay, there are about 80 theatres, all but two of them in the capital, Montevideo. The total seating capacity is about 20,000. All the Montevideo theatres are wired for sound.

Statistics on Venezuela are incomplete, but it is estimated that there are about 147 theatres operating on a "regular" basis. Shows are given in bull rings, halls, petroleum camps. Nine of the 147 are in petroleum camps or clubs. There are about 37 theatres in the Caracas territory and 26 in the Maracaibo district. Inasmuch as parts of the country are inaccessible during the rains, picture shows are seasonal there. When the dry season comes, itinerant salesman set up portable sound and picture equipment.

ASCAP CASES RETURNED TO TWO LOWER COURTS

U. S. Supreme Court Rulings on Washington and Florida Laws Concern Amount Involved

Without any indication of its views as to constitutionality, the United States supreme court on Monday sent back to the lower courts cases involving the socalled anti-ASCAP laws of Washington and Florida, which, enacted but not enforced, would virtually put ASCAP out of business in both states.

Both cases came before the court largely on the issue whether the sum involved was more than $3,000, the minimum necessary to establish jurisdiction of the federal courts. In the Florida case, appealed by the state authorities from a district court order refusing to dismiss a bill of complaint filed by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers but granting an interlocutory injunction against enforcement of the state law, Associate Judge Stanley Reed, delivering the majority opinion, held that the Society had shown the necessary amount was involved. In the Washington case, the same associate justice returned the suit with instructions to permit the Society to present evidence to support its contention that more than $3,000 was involved.

Commends Lower Court

Justice Reed commended the lower court for its refusal to dismiss the Florida bill of complaint, declaring that "where an attack is made upon the constitutionality of a state statute, supported by factual allegations sufficiently strong to raise 'grave doubts of the constitutionality of the act' in the mind of the trial court, the action to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action should be denied."

"This bill sets out that the exercise of rights granted by the Federal Copyright Act to control the performance of compositions for profit is prohibited by the statute; that existing contracts are impaired; property taken without compensation; recovery on extra state contracts denied and the equal protection and due process clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment violated in manners specifically pleaded," he said. "Drastic penalties for violation of the act are provided. The manner in and extent to which the challenged statute offends or complies with the applicable provisions of the Constitution will be clearer after final hearings and findings."

The Washington Case

In his decision on the Washington case, before the court on appeal of the Society from an order refusing an injunction against enforcement of the state law, Justice Reed pointed out that there is a difference between the Washing and Florida statutes, in that the Washington statute does not completely prohibit copyright pooling and allows copyright holders from combining so long as they follow the per-piece system of fees, and file annually a complete catalog of their entries.

The Washington court, he held, erred in refusing to receive testimony from ASCAP as to the amount involved.

Associate Justice Felix Frankfurter, appointed to the court after the issues had been presented, took no part in consideration of decision of the two cases. Associate Justice Hugo L. Black dissented in the Florida case and, in his dissenting opinion, outspokenly voiced his view that persons who challenge legislation and obtain the benefit of a suspension of a law should not profit in the event the court finally held the law is valid, nor should they be encouraged to continue in violation of a statute during the time it is pending before the courts.

Holding that the injunction obtained by ASCAP should have been dissolved, Justice Black asserted that the result of the Florida court's action is to give the music society the privilege of operating as it pleases.

Charges Monopoly

Suggesting that it would have been better to have waited until effort was made to enforce the law and then bring suit to test its constitutionality, the dissenting justice, declaring that ASCAP includes probably 95 per cent of American and foreign copyright owners controlling the rendition of copyrighted music for profit in the United States, declared:

"Not only does this combination fix prices through a self-perpetuating board of 24 directors, but its power over the business of musical rendition is so great that it can refuse to sell rights to single compositions and can and does require purchasers to take, at a monopolistically fixed annual fee, the entire repertory of all numbers controlled by the combination. And these fees are not the same for like purchasers even in the same locality. . . .

"Since it appears that music is an essential part of public entertainment for profit, radio station or other businesses arbitrarily compelled to pay discriminatory fees and faced with price-fixing practices that could destroy them, because the society has a monopoly of practically all—if not completely all—available music. . . .

"We have here a price-fixing combination that actually wields the power of life and death over every business in Florida, and elsewhere, depending upon copyrighted musical compositions for existence. Such a monopolistic combination's power to fix prices is the power to destroy."

Anti-ASCAP Measure Is Killed in Connecticut

Connecticut's anti-ASCAP bill was killed by the Senate Saturday.

Bill had been opposed by Sara B. Crawford, Secretary of State; Louis D. Frolich and Herman Finkelstein, of counsel for ASCAP, at hearings before the Judiciary Committee of the House and Senate several weeks ago.

Secretary of State Crawford told the committee that she saw no need of creating a Department of Copyrights in Connecticut while the Federal Department was functioning in Washington, that it delegated functions to her office which it was not geared to handle, and that it could become an undue burden on small composers.

New York Regents View Two Rejected Pictures

A revised version of "Ecstasy" and the original version of "Sunset Murder Case" were screened before a committee of the New York Board of Regents in the State Office Building, New York City, Monday. Eureka Productions and Grand National are appealing from decisions by Irwin Esmond, chief censor, that the films are objectionable. A decision is expected Friday.

Richey Hits at State Censors

State censor boards were handed a verbal "lambasting" by H. M. Richey, director of Exhibitor Relations for RKO, in an address Monday night to a "town meeting" on film censorship, at the Y.M.C.A., in Columbus, Ohio. "Purity For Profit" being the title of his speech, Mr. Richey impugned the motives of state censors, likened censorship to the authoritarian practices in Europe, and praised the Motion Picture Production Code and Code Administration for supervising production so that, "not a single picture that has been given the production code during the past two years has been kept off the screens of the United States by any organized disapproval of the finished product."

This was a record " that can't be touched by any other industry in the world," he added.

Mr. Ritchey's attack was directed at the censor boards remaining in six states. Said he, after noting that America remains the "guardian" of democratic principles:

"It is, therefore, startling to know that right here in our own United States, a system that is the enemy of democracy, liberty, and the freedom of human expression—a system used by despots from time immemorial to bind people into intellectual slavery—a system that is intolerant and intolerable, is still retained in six states of the union. That system is political state censorship of motion pictures."

"That censorship, political censorship, can continue in these United States, in a country that from its inception has so violently resisted any suggestion of censorship, is a startling example of what can be done in the name of politics," he added.

Mr. Ritchey noted that a censor's determinations can be dependent upon personal whims, upon money considerations, and upon politics; and surely this is not desirable for product upon which care and money has been spent, he pointed out.

"Censorship is the world's most dangerous experiment," he said, "because so many times our sense of right and wrong is derived from the kind of society we live in. Censorship can never improve our moral standards, since it represents an external, fractional, and negative attack on mere items in the whole total equasion. . . . a decent society cannot be erected on an edifice of fear. And fear is the basis of all censorship."

"In this manner, the industry guards against the use of material that might be either locally or internationally in bad taste—not censorship, not just as personal opinion, but conforming to a carefully worked out code of fair ethics based on the rules of common honesty and decency."

"The production code in itself is, many newspapermen say, unreasonably severe," Mr. Richey said, "but it is self regulation designed because of the conviction of the motion picture industry that, dependent as it is on public good will, it wants to please the greatest number."

Hotels Revise Actor Rates

New York actors faced with a rise in hotel room rates as a result of the forthcoming New York World's Fair, which opens on April 30, were this week offered new lodgings at "equitable" rates by the Independent Hotel Association, Actors' Equity has revealed. The association is comprised of the smaller hotels in the Times Square district.

NEWSREELS VOTE POOL ON VISIT OF BRITISH MONARCHS; NO "SPECIALS"

Seven Crews for Each Company Will Combine Material in Coverage of Tour of King George and Queen Elizabeth

The American motion picture industry's five competitive newsreels have entered into a friendly pooling arrangement for covering the visit to Canada and the United States of the English King and Queen, beginning with the arrival at Quebec on May 15 and on into the U. S. in June. The idea is to effect, "without unnecessary expense," one of the most elaborate coverages ever made of the arrival and tour of foreign dignitaries.

Meeting Radio and Press Rivalry

The arrangement also is motivated by the desire to obtain coverage comparable to that given by the radio and the press, two of the newsreels' potent rivals, and to give the exhibitor the best out of all pictures taken by newsreel cameramen.

Going even further, the arrangement provides that no "specials" be issued, that all pictures of the visit and tour be included in the regular two issues a week. This contrasts with the period when the newsreels engaged in expensive competition to obtain "scoops" on headline events. There will not even be use of private planes to transport film—always in days gone by a most costly item. Regular commercial lines will be used.

Not even the arrival of the royal pair at Quebec on Monday morning, May 15, will be a subject of a "special," and the hour is expected to give all companies time to fly the reels down to New York in time for the Monday evening "makeup." The royal pair's schedule has been studied to time the shipments of reels for the Monday or Wednesday makeup.

"Specials" for Canada

"Specials" for Canada will be allowed, and some companies are sending their New York "makeup" men to Quebec for that purpose.

Evolution of the coverage plan was the result of conferences between American newsreel officials and Frank Badgley, director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau, under that country's Department of Trade and Commerce.

Approximately seven crews, for each company, will cover the tour of King George and Queen Elizabeth from Quebec to Toronto. Each crew consists of two men, but of the seven crews a certain number will be "shooting" for all the companies; and there is expected to be cooperation on the shots taken by the newsreel companies' own crews. In addition, the Associated Screen News of Montreal, through which the American companies heretofore have obtained most of their footage on public events, in view of the Canadian government's restrictions on American equipment and cemeramen will also cover the event, and the companies will examine this organization's footage for any material not included in that taken by their own cameramen.

The waiving of restrictions on American cameramen and equipment was expected because of the propaganda value of the visit. While no newspapermen and cameramen are expected to be allowed on the royal train there will be a "pilot train" ahead for the newsreel cameramen, still cameramen and journalists.

The American newsreel companies, while appreciative of the Canadian government's offer of the use of such a train, are making certain that the coverage is complete. Officials in New York have pointed out that it is virtually impossible to cover the departures of the King and Queen from a railroad station, when their cameramen are on a train which already has departed. The result is that, while each company will have a crew or two on the "pilot train" or will use the services of a crew under the pooling agreement, they also will have their other cameramen, who covered the arrival from ship at Quebec, at strategic locations in the cities and town which the royal pair will visit. While sound crews will be used wherever possible, there will be several making only silent product.

The Canadian government has allotted locations from which pictures may be taken and has given considerable leeway, elsewhere, so that the coverage presents no greater difficulties than a parade.

The newsreel companies had suggested covering the automobile ride of the King and Queen from the boat at Quebec to hotel and train, from a preceding car, in which there would be cameras. This was promptly vetoed, but is said to be the only outstanding veto issued on newsreel company suggestions. A restriction that all will observe is one which forbids anyone to come closer than 20 feet to King or Queen, or to speak to either unless spoken to.

Must List Cameramen, Equipment

The five newsreel companies were to send their acceptances of the Canadian Government's offers and suggestions this week and to include their own recommendations. They also were to submit a list of those cameramen attending, and the amount of equipment they would bring.

When the King and Queen leave Toronto on May 22, for Vancouver, most of the cameramen from New York will return, leaving a few of their fellows on the "pilot train." At Vancouver, and during the visits to West Canadian towns, crews from the companies' west coast headquarters will assume coverage.

The King and Queen will be in the United States from June 9 to June 11, under present plans. They are expected to visit Washington first; then Hyde Park, N. Y. (the President's home); and the New York World's Fair.

TAX STAMP TRAILER MADE FOR OHIO I. T. O.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio has prepared a short trailer to be attached to newsreels and provided to exhibitors without charge, in which Governor John W. Bricker urges Ohio citizens to cooperate in saving retail sales tax stamps, redeemable at their face value of $3.00 for each $100 in stamps, beginning May 1st. The redemption plan is designed to stimulate retail sales and minimize evasion of tax collections.

The exhibitors' interests lie in the fact that the greater the sales tax yield to the state the less likelihood of an increase in the admission impost, it has been pointed out by the I. T. O. A. bulletin.

Discuss Giveaway Ban in Cleveland

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association is currently holding meetings to discuss the abolition of giveaways and elimination of newspaper copy on premiums. The meetings are also being held to consider the elimination of Sunday duals and a plan to pass the Ohio three per cent tax on theatres to the public. A majority voted to eliminate newspaper ad copy on premiums and two for one admissions.

In Galveston, Texas, the Ministerial Association has petitioned law enforcement officials to close Bingo games along the Galveston beach front. Officers were reminded that such games are in violation of the law. In addition to the protest against Bingo, Sheriff Biaggne said he had been receiving letters urging him to close film theatres on Sundays.

Bingo games have been declared illegal in Indianapolis and the Board of Safety has ordered police to halt all such games.

Despite a New York grand jury's refusal to indict in the lottery case against the Jewel theatre in Harlem, Paul Moss, license commissioner, is going ahead with other court actions to test the legality of chance games in New York. One of these actions, involving the Momart theatre in Brooklyn, has been set for trial May 10th.

The recent announcement by Claude M. Hunter, Mayor of Mansfield, Ohio, that arrests would follow initial awards, has caused William Dworski, manager of Warner Brothers' Madison theatre, to abandon Bank Night.

Canadians Disapprove

With indications in Toronto of the possible return of giveaways, the Independent Theatres of Ontario has determined to advise all film exchanges of the organization's disapproval of the trend. At a meeting, it was brought out that certain exhibitors are offering premiums without the socalled service charge or other fee.

The Delaware State Police last week made the first arrest involving Bank Night since the game was declared illegal in Delaware. Floyd Shear, manager of the Laurel at Laurel, was arrested and released under $500 bail charged with giving away a ticket to the New York World's Fair in, it is charged, a lottery. Donald Mitchell of Laurel, who authorities said drew the "lucky" number, was held in $200 bail as a witness.

R. G. Harvey, district attorney of Racine, Wis., has given Warner Brothers' Venetian theatre permission to pay a $1,500 Bank Night award won March 30th, the night the theatre was raided. Preliminary hearing of Don Nichols, manager, charged with operating a lottery, has been postponed to Tuesday, because of expected action by the Wisconsin legislature on the Paulson bill to outlaw Bank Night.

Litigation between Edward Goldstein of Rae-Ed Amusement Enterprises, and Kallet Circuit of upstate New York, which involved payment for use of Bank Night, has been settled, according to Mr. Goldstein.

A Decatur, Ind., jury has acquitted Roy and Isadore Kelvers, theatre operators there, of charges of operating a lottery and acting as agents of a lottery for holding Bank Night in their theatres. The case was the first court test in Indiana of theatre chance games.

53 STORIES AND PLAYS ARE ADDED TO PURCHASES FOR NEW SEASON

Wells and Kipling Among Sources of Material for Films; Warner Leads in Acquisitions; 30 Originals Bought

With the sales convention season well under way, Hollywood's story scouts, in March, kept up the high average of purchases established for 1939 by buying a total of 53 properties, divided among 15 producers. In addition, Katharine Hepburn accounted for one of the properties, buying screen rights to the play in which she is now appearing in New York, Philip Barry's "The Philadelphia Story." This is reported to be the first instance of a stage player acquiring film rights to a legitimate play.

Edward Small purchased the H. G. Wells novel, "Food for the Gods." Paramount will bring to the screen Rudyard Kipling's "The Light That Failed" and "The Road to Mandalay."

Robert E. Sherwood's play, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," has been acquired by Max Gordon Plays and Pictures Corporation for RKO distribution.

The Month's Purchases

Abe Lincoln in Illinois, play by Robert E. Sherwood, bought by Max Gordon Plays and Pictures Corp. RKO will distribute.

Address Unknown, magazine story by Kressmann Taylor, purchased by Felix Young, independent purchaser, for possible Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release.

All Night Program, original by Lester Koenig, purchased by RKO. Cliff Reid will produce.

TNEC May Probe Films After Oils

Investigation of alleged monopolistic conditions in the motion picture industry may follow a similar investigation of the oil industry to be initiated next month by the Administration's Temporary National Economic Committee, it was disclosed in Washington this week.

Assured of an additional $600,000 appropriation which will maintain it until the end of the current calendar year, the committee is preparing now to again swing into action.

Unlike the industry investigations of "big business" made by the committee heretofore, the oil inquiry and those to follow will be thrown open to dissident members of the industries, who will be invited to appear before the committee and reveal their complaints.

As a result of the committee's change of policy, the question of divorce of production from marketing will be injected into the oil investigation and, presumably, into the film study—if and when.

That the TNEC is preparing for a film probe was disclosed last week when it became known that a representative of the committee was sitting in on the Neely bill hearings as an observer. It was also disclosed that the report on the film industry under the NRA, prepared several years ago by Daniel Bertrand, had been brought up to date factually and the files of the Department of Justice ransacked for motion picture data.

It was said, however, that the film investigation has been soft-pedaled, not only because of the temporary lack of funds which recently halted the committee's activities, but also from a desire to observe what might transpire at the Neely block booking hearings, which ended Monday (see page 25), and the possibility of a trial of the New York anti-trust suit this spring.

End of Wisconsin "Divorce" Bill Seen

The State Affairs Committee of the Wisconsin Assembly has recommended that Assemblyman Alex Nicol's bill to bar motion picture producers or distributors from owning or operating theatres in the state, be killed.

A similar measure, introduced in 1937, had also been killed. The Nicol bill proposed punishments for violations by fines up to $1,000 and imprisonment up to one year.

Lamson Concern Acquires Peter Clark Company

Peter Clark, Inc., designers and manufacturers of theatre stage equipment and effects, who installed the stage equipment in Radio City Music Hall, has sold its name, goodwill and patents to the Lamson Company, New York, in order to permit the Estate of Peter Clark to retire from active management of the company. A new corporation has been formed under the same name to carry on the business.

The officers of the new corporation are Carl E. Dietz, president, who is also president of the Lamson Company; Arthur Clark, vice-president; L. M. Barnes, secretary; Francis D. Weeks, treasurer, and J. A. Smith, assistant treasurer. The business will continue to be under the active management of Arthur Clark, son of the founder. The Lamson company manufactures pneumatic tubes and elevators.

THE NEELY BILL AND THE TRADE PROGRAM

While state exhibitor organizations continued this week to analyze the contents of the industry's trade practice program self-regulating distribution-exhibition, as submited by the majors to owners some four weeks ago, the majors on Monday concluded their opposition to the Neely anti-block and blind selling bill, before a Senate subcommittee, and during which their formulation of the program was used as the biggest reason to defeat the bill. (See page 25.)

Meanwhile exhibitor organizations were meeting or setting meeting dates to officially act on the program, with the objections to parts of the program expected to bring a renewal of conversations between distributors and owners pointing toward possible revisions of the pact. Distributors are expected to start meetings next week on elaboration of the machinery and procedure of arbitration.

Government Bill Expected by May 1

Developments in pending anti-trust suit this week centered chiefly around continued examination before trial of United Artists officials by the Department of Justice in the Government's New York action, and the expectation that the Government will file its bill of particulars by May 1st in answer to the petition of the majors which was granted four weeks ago in District Court, New York.

The only other trust suit activity consisted of minor court moves in Chicago actions.

The examination of Harry J. Muller, treasurer of United Artists, and Edward Raftery, secretary of the corporation, by Robert L. Wright, special assistant attorney-general, were adjourned last Thursday to Thursday of this week. The examination of Mr. Muller last Thursday centered around long term contracts held by United Artists with producers, and the types of contracts made with exhibitors. The company turned over to the Department of Justice copies of its long term producer contracts.

Examination of Charles Stern, UA eastern district sales manager, began on Wednesday with Mr. Stern outlining exchange functions.

It was indicated that Harry Gold, Jack Schlaifer and Paul Lazarus, U. A. executives, would be subpoenaed for examination. The Government expects to file its bill of particulars not later than May 1st.

The Government's case against Balaban and Katz in Chicago will either be referred to a Master in Chancery for hearing, or the records will be handed over to special examiners. Federal Judge Woodward has suggested that attorneys on both sides confer as to which they prefer.

Lawrence Wingham, MGM's Seattle manager, is handling the San Francisco branch during Ira Furman's illness. Maurice Saffle, Salt Lake City manager, takes over in Seattle while Sam Gardner, Indianapolis salesman, steps into Mr. Saffle's post at Salt Lake City.

Several Units Approve Code

Excepting the Intermountain Theatres Association, Salt Lake, and Allied States Association, the executive committee of which still insists it considers itself without power to examine the latest draft of the trade practice agreement because it does not abolish block booking, blind buying and circuits with production affiliations, the exhibitor organizations are lining up behind the new draft. In any event, individual exhibitors will have the opportunity of accepting the provisions of the agreement, which will be incorporated in the new contracts offered for 1939-40 product.

William F. Rodgers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales manager and distributor spokesman, said Monday that where further clarifications were desired, he would welcome suggestions such as those offered last week by the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, and that when enough suggestions have been received, further committee meetings on arbitration procedure will be held.

In addition to the I.T.O.A., which called the draft "A step in the right direction," the pact has been approved to date by representatives of the Theatre Owners and Managers of the Rocky Mountain Region, Inc.; the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Nebraska and Western Iowa, and the Independent Theatre Owners of Virginia.

While groups affiliated with Allied States Association are not voicing any opinions as to their reactions to the draft, out of deference to the parent organization, it is understood that several of the groups are in favor of accepting the plan.

The Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska opened their two-day spring convention Monday. The trade practice code was discussed, with president L. F. Wolcott presiding.

Clearance Relief Asked by 2 Groups

Two groups of exhibitors this week asked distributors for relief from existing clearance and zoning schedules, with such relief forthcoming immediately in Cincinnati, and exhibitors in upper New York state starting to work on a plan of adjustment.

Following a resolution in second and third clearances in Cincinnati, arranged at a conference there between RKO city officials and the Greater Cincinnati Independent Exhibitors' Association, attended by H. M. Richey, RKO director of exhibitor relations, independent theatremen have withdrawn their complaint to the Department on "oppressive clearances."

The negotiations involved 64 theatres in the greater Cincinnati area.

The adjustment of clearance and zoning arrangements in several upstate New York cities is being worked on by committees appointed by New York Allied in Albany, out through conferences rather than by litigation or legislation. After agreements are worked out with the first runs and large circuits, the pacts will go to the distributors for approval.

TELEVISION TAKES CENTER OF STAGE AS ENGINEERS MEET IN HOLLYWOOD

Discussion of Opportunities and Apparatus for Participation in Medium by Film Producers Features Semi-Annual Session

Television's present-day technical status and "marked state of flux" received a large part of the attention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at their semi-annual convention to consider technical progress being made in the motion picture and allied fields.

Technical Practice Sessions

The regular spring meeting, held this year at the Roosevelt hotel in Hollywood, opened on Monday morning with the registration of some 400 members and others from all over the country. It ran through Thursday with special sessions on technical practice in production, distribution and exhibition. The semiannual banquet was held Thursday evening, and all of Friday afternoon was turned over to television, concluding the convention.

Designing problems in television telecasters and receivers, television lighting, studio technique, scanning, production and application to motion pictures were all taken up, with a report on the subject submitted by the SMPE's special television committee, of which Alfred N. Goldsmith, New York, is chairman.

Active little more than a year, the television committee reported that the result of its work is not forthcoming at this time in specific form, for three reasons: The committee must adjust its viewpoint with respect to the relation between the motion picture industry and television; most of the subjects engaging the attention of the committee are long-term subpects, and, third, the television art is in so marked a state of flux that great care must be taken to differentiate between accepted practice and transient developmental steps.

Film Participation Planned

It is now squarely up to the motion picture producer to determine what part motion picture film is to play in television, according to E. W. Engstrom of RCA, whose paper on "Application of Motion Picture Film to Television" was the highlight of the program set for the concluding session Friday night of the SMPE meeting in Hollywood this week. Mr. Engstrom made it clear in an exclusive interview with Motion Picture Herald that the required mechanical facility for applying standard or specially produced motion picture material to television purposes has been made available to producers and final steps toward supplying the public with adequate receiving sets have been taken.

RCA will offer receiving sets to the public this week in four models ranging in style and capacity from an attachment for standard radio sets, by the use of which telecasts may be picked up, to a de luxe console model embodying a 12-inch cathode tube providing an image roughly 9 by 11 inches.

OPTICAL PRESTIGE "EQUAL OF ANY"

The American optical industry has reached the point at which its raw materials, including optical glass, and its technical skill "recognize no superiors in Europe or elsewhere," W. B. Rayton of Bausch and Lomb, lens manufacturers, told members of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers during the Hollywood convention this week. America formerly had to depend on Europe for optical material "and bowed to the superior technical prestige of its lens makers," Mr. Rayton said.

Simultaneously, RCA is making available to motion picture producers a number of recently perfected mechanisms by use of which films produced for standard entertainment purposes may be tested for television quality within a film studio projection room. Only by such actual test, according to Mr. Engstrom, has it been found practicable to determine the television suitability of motion pictures produced primarily for standard theatre exhibition. RCA tests have established, he said, that there is no need for change in the basic constituency of standard film stock to accomplish satisfactory adaptation to television uses.

With these and related mechanical facilities now at his disposal the motion picture producer's problem, Mr. Engstrom said, is analogous to the basic problem which has always been his, the production of picture material to suit the demands and tastes of his potential audience. Mr. Engstrom declined to predict the extent to which the product of present film producers will comprise the output of telecasting stations, saying this rested largely with the disposition of the producers toward cultivating the television audience. But he referred to motion picture film as the most practicable "storehouse for television material."

At Friday's television session, a paper by Harry R. Lubcke, of the Don Lee (Radio) Broadcasting Company, Los Angeles, disclosed that the Lee television transmitter, Station W6XAO has been on the air daily, "without notable exception," since Dec. 23, 1931, and that in this period over 11,000,000 feet of motion picture film has been telecast. The paper described at length the manner and method of television production technique, the rehearsing of actors, and so on.

Other papers were: "Continuous Type Film Scanner for Television," by P. T. Goldmark, Columbia Broadcasting, New York; "Television Studio Technic," by A. W. Protzman, National Broadcasting, New York; "Television Lighting," by William C. Eddy, NBC, New York, and "Design Problems in Television Systems and Receivers," by A. B. Dumont, television affiliate of Paramount Pictures, Passaic, N. J.

Projection Practices

One of the important regular SMPE convention reports was that made by the Projection Practice Committee, Harry Rubin, New York, chairman. This disclosed that the committee now has in preparation for exhibitors "a comprehensive report" on the matter of theatre lighting and power equipment operating characteristics, the relation of lighting and power equipment installations to total energy costs —intended to show to managers and projectionists whether their equipment and methods of operation confirm to present day trends and the use and final cost of equipment and operations.

The committee also is engaged in studying instruments for measuring screen brightness.

Tuesday afternoon the SMPE members visited the Paramount studios to inspect projection background shooting, usually done in secret.

Foreign restrictions on American motion pictures in 1938 assumed varied "but generally vexatious and embarrassing forms," and intensification of political and economic difficulties abroad has brought about a decline from 70 to 65 per cent in American domination of the world's motion picture screens, N. D. Golden, chief of the Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Department of Commerce, told the convention.

"Documentaries" Discussed

Tracing the generations of effort toward a common goal: to express, to communicate, to dramatize reality by mechanical means, A. A. Mercey, of the National Engineering Council of the U. S. Film Service, Washington, turned to the subject of the present day "documentary" film, suggesting the following topics as subjects for treatment: Conservation of natural resources, production and distribution of food, communication, transportation, health and medicine, scientific research, economic and trade relations, television and "Democracy."

Report of the Progress Committee, of which J. G. Frayne is chairman, disclosed some general motion picture technical progress in the past half year. W. C. Kunzman's Convention Committee reported, as did E. R. Geib's Membership Committee, C. W. Handley's Studio Lighting Committee, A. L. Schwalberg's Exchange Practice Committee, J. K. Hilliard's Academy Research Council Committee on Theatre Standardization, and D. E. Hyndman's Laboratory Practice Committee, which submitted some factors governing the design, construction and operation of a film laboratory.

J. A. Maurer of Berndt-Maurer reported on the present status of 16mm sound-on-film.

Mayor Welcomes Delegates

The convenion opened on Monday with an address by E. A. Williford, president, followed by a luncheon at which Fletcher Bowron, mayor of Los Angeles, welcomed the delegates to the city.

Electrical Research Products gave the delegates a reception at the Roosevelt Hotel, followed by a tour of Erpi's Hollywood plant and laboratory.

Monday afternoon, James I. Crabtree presided at a general business session, at which G. T. Stanton, of Erpi, described "the polyrhetor," a new 150-channel film reproducer; G. Giroux, of Technicolor, described the field service of his company; A. L. Williams, of Brush Development, described further improvements in lightweight record reproducers; C. R. Veber, of Rutgers University, described "The Time Telescope," and T. K. Peters, Oglethorpe University, discussed "The Preservation of History in the Crypt of Civilization."

Photographic Session

K. F. Morgan was chairman Monday night at a photographic session, where papers were read as written by G. E. Inman and W. H. Robinson, of General Electric (on fluorescent lamps); G. Cave, Technicolor (mobile color photography); D. B. Joy, National Carbon (improvements in carbons for motion picture set lighting); W. W. Lozier, National Carbon (carbons for rear projection in studios); G. Laube, Twentieth Century-Fox (new silent camera), and L. D. Grignon, Paramount (flicker in motion pictures).

H. W. Remerschief conducted a special projection session Tuesday morning, where papers were presented on screen color and brightness, written by W. C. Harcus, Technicolor; motion pictures in education, by A. Shapiro, Ampro Corporation; lamps and optical systems for reproduction, F. E. Carlson, General Electric; sound-track projection microscope, by G. M. Best, Warner Brothers.

A special shortwave transmitter, as part of the train equipment, will make possible continuous broadcasts of the train to the cities it is approaching. There will be another big-time broadcast from Schenectady. A Hollywood preview of "Union Pacific" is planned for each city where the train stops. The train will be open to the public and Mr. DeMille and the stars will be available, where possible, for personal appearances at previews.

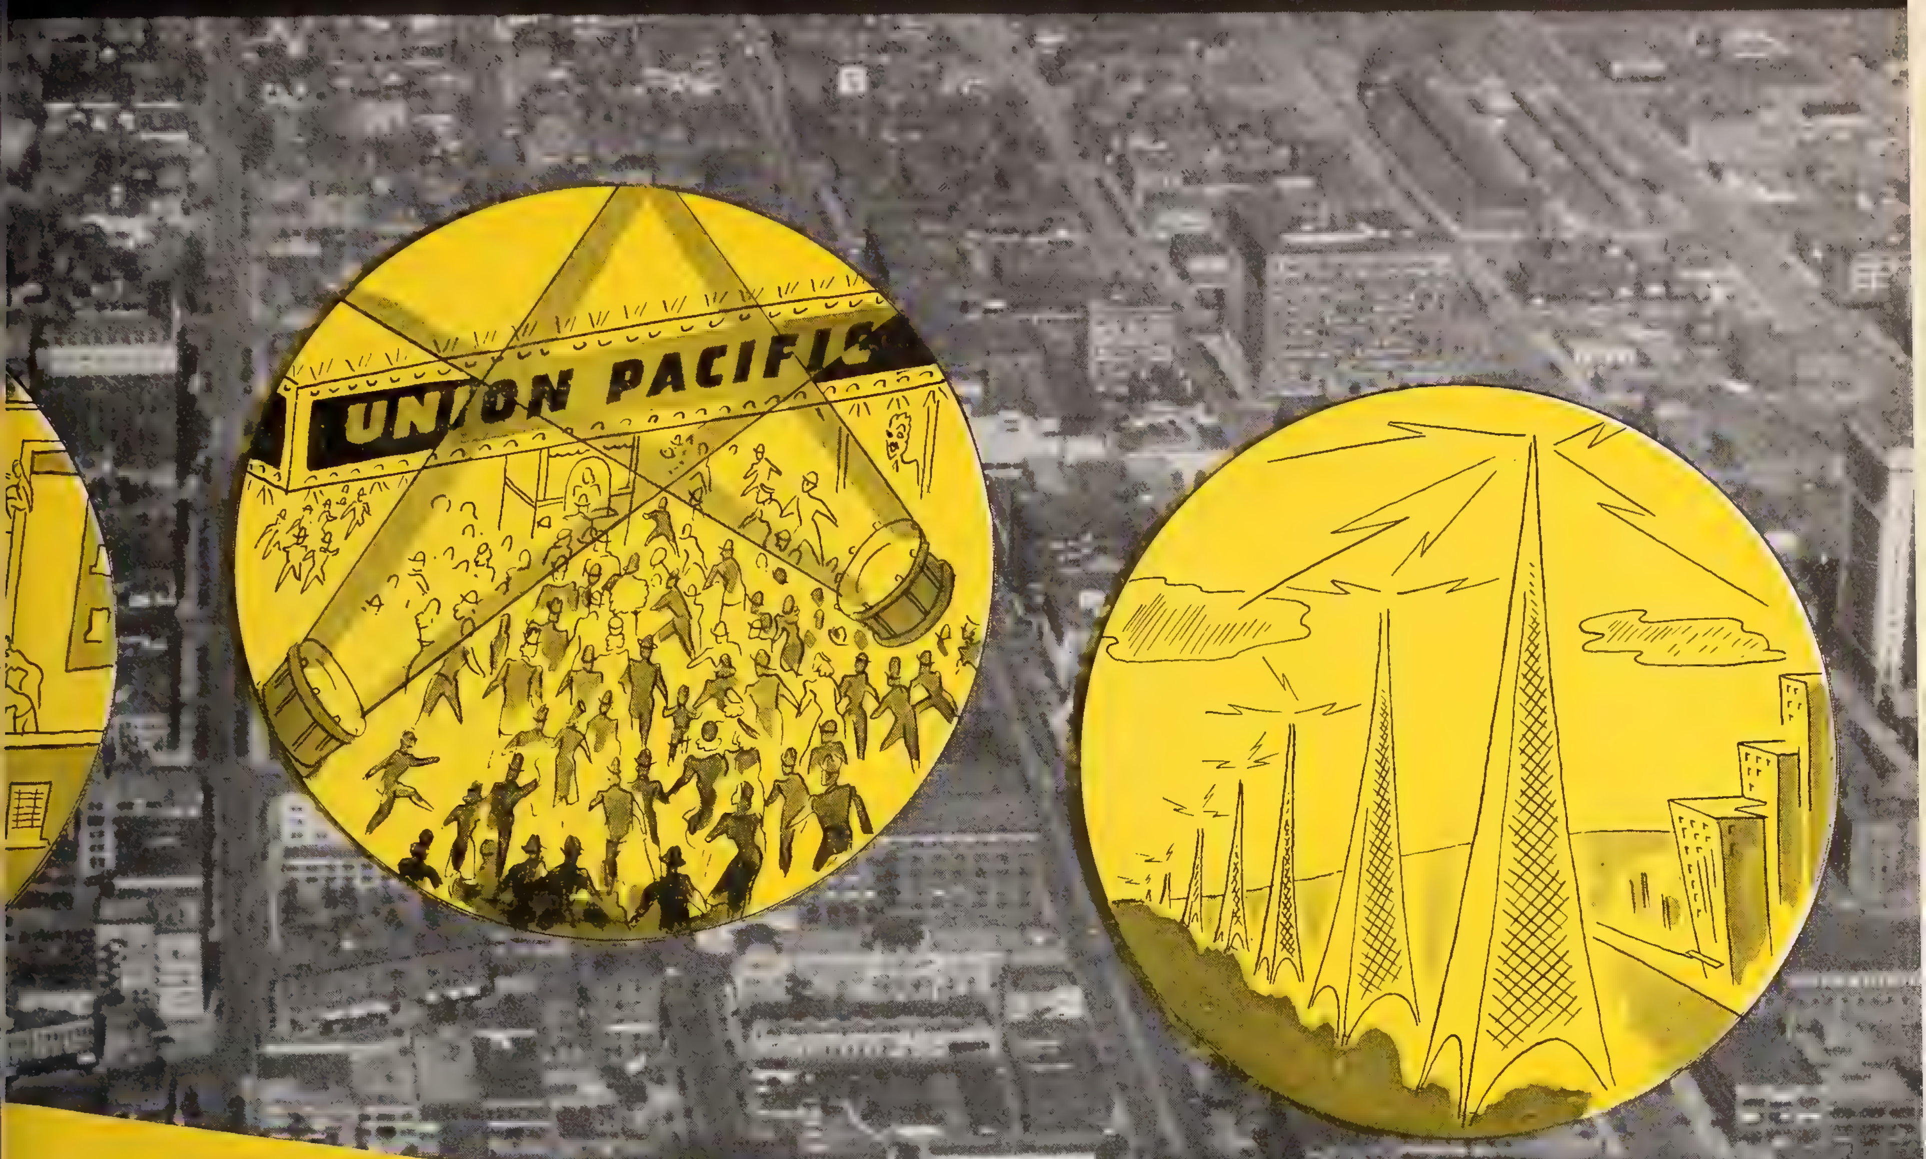
IERICAN EPIC OF THEM ALL!



From Wednesday, April 26th through Saturday, April 29th the great city of Omaha, Nebraska will give "Union Pacific" the greatest send-off in motion picture history. Two blocks of city streets will be made into replicas of the 1869 period. Only horse-driven stage coaches, prairie schooners, and Civil War Cavalry will be allowed in the streets. 52 blocks, including the business section, will be elaborately decorated. A tribe of 35 Sioux Indians will camp on the Court House grounds.

On Thursday there will be a huge military parade. Mr. DeMille and the Paramount stars from the Coast will be guests of the city and of he State. Other celebrities will include the governors of Nebraska nd neighboring states, as well as 12 presidents of America's great ailroads.

On Friday there will be another tremendous parade starting off another day of city-wide celebration leading up to the official world premiere of "Union Pacific" at the Omaha Theatre to be broadcast over the Mutual Network of 125 stations. Portions of the celebration will be picked up by the N.B.C. Red network on Thursday night over 51 stations, and on Friday night over 52 stations.

The size of the celebration is quickly shown by such figures as these: 34,000 Nebraskan males now growing beards for "Union Pacific" celebrations, 60,000 men, women and children will be in costume, 325,000 Nebraskans will be present during the four-day celebration. Space does not permit further details—you will hear them on the radio, you will read them in your paper, as this greatest of all world premieres takes place.

UNIVERSAL ANNOUNCES 58 FOR 1940, TO COST FROM 17 TO 20 MILLIONS

Fourteen Westerns, Four Serials and 57 Short Subjects, Sales Forces Are Told at Cincinnati, Chicago and San Francisco

by E. H. MAYER
in Cincinnati

Highlighting plans for 1930-40 with a $17,000,000 to $20,000,000 budget (an increase of $5,000,000) and a feature commitment of 58 features, including 14 westerns, plus four serials, 57 short subjects and the newsreel, the management of Universal Pictures opened the first of its three regional sales conventions at the Netherland Plaza hotel, Cincinnati, Saturday morning.

By train and plane, more than 90 home office and studio executives, district managers and field sales members arrived in Cincinnati in an all-day rain that set a new record for the city, which was sporadically in complete darkness.

Blumberg Addresses Meeting

Nate J. Blumberg, president; W. A. Scully, general sales manager; F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager; W. J. Heineman, western sales manager; Joseph H. Seidelman, foreign sales manager, and Louis Pollock, eastern advertising and publicity director, addressed the meeting, then went to Chicago to conduct the midwestern convention. On Saturday morning the final convention opens at the St. Francis hotel in San Francisco. It will be attended by Mr. Scully and Mr. Heineman.

An advertising budget of $1,000,000 was announced at the second convention in Chicago Wednesday.

Mr. Blumberg also said sales had increased 20 per cent over last year.

Highlights of Universal's 1939-40 program, as announced by Mr. Scully, were as follows:

Release of four special attractions of "road show caliber" plus 40 other features. Three of these four will be produced by Famous Productions headed by Harry Edington. The fourth is the color "Mikado," starring Kenny Baker and the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company players.

The naming of Joe Pasternak, Henry Koster, John M. Stahl, Anatole Litvak, David Butler, Richard Wallace, Rowland V. Lee, Lester Cowan, Ben Stoloff and Joe May as some of the men already assigned to make the company's top-bracket product and the announcement that negotiations are now on for other outstanding directors in the industry.

Mr. Scully emphasized that several features still to come would be among the strongest of the company's product. He said Charles Boyer had been signed to play opposite Irene Dunne in a picture to be produced and directed by John M. Stahl for 1938-39. Further, he said, Robert Cummings, who had made a bid for stardom with Deanna Durbin in "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," would play opposite the star in her second new picture, "First Love," instead of Charles Boyer, as previously announced. A deal had been made with George Raft, he said, whereby he will play the featured role in "I Stole a Million," to be directed by Frank Tuttle.

Winners of the bookers' contest, Arthur Young of Cleveland and Mark Holstein of Oklahoma City, were called to the dais to receive awards from Mr. Scully, and the award of Ferdinand Fortunati of Philadelphia was accepted in his behalf by M. Koppleman.

UNIFORM ADMISSION BILL IN PENNSYLVANIA

Under the provisions of a bill which has been offered in the Pennsylvania House, no motion picture theatre or other place of amusement would be permitted to charge a larger admission fee on a Saturday, Sunday or holiday than on weekdays.

F. T. Murray analyzed and explained new sales contract forms for the new selling season.

Mr. Seidelman discussed the problems incident to the fast-changing world conditions. He pointed out that, despite fresh and unexpected handicaps, his department had shown an improvement over the preceding year, although, he said, conditions abroad as they now exist, and are likely to arise, will impose a greater burden of responsibility on the domestic departments in addition to affecting his.

Louis Pollock, eastern advertising head, for John Joseph, director of advertising and publicity, discussed the advertising and publicity policies and laid special emphasis on cooperative advertising with theatres.

The picture and star list as presented by Mr. Scully confirmed a convention message sent to Nate Blumberg, president of Universal, by Cliff Work, studio head, that "the new season would see the greatest number of top ranking pictures ever released by the company in any one year."

Full production plans and commitments to assure this release have been completed, Mr. Blumberg told the home office executives, district managers and salesmen.

According to the announcement, Universal will have, in addition to the program of 40, a series of seven "outdoor" pictures, starring Richard Arlen and Andy Devine; a series of seven Westerns, starring John Mack Brown; four serials; 13 two-reel and 43 single-reel subjects and a special two-reel subject, "March of Freedom." There will be 104 issues of Universal's Newsreel (twice weekly) in 1939-40.

The Features

The complete product list presented to the convention by Mr. Scully follows:

Two Deanna Durbin Pictures, to be produced by Joe Pasternak.

"The Ocean Between," directed by Henry Koster, to be produced by Joe Pasternak, from the story by Bruno Frank. Screenplay by Bruce Manning.

NEELY HEARINGS END; FIGHT SEEN IF BILL REACHES FLOOR OF SENATE

Sponsor of Measure Sits Alone at Final Session; Senator Sheridan Downey Threatens to Lead the Fight on Floor

by FRANCIS L. BURT in Washington

Ten days of hearings by the interstate commerce subcommittee on the Neely proposal to outlaw block and blind selling by distributors, came to a conclusion Monday evening in the Senate Office Building at Washington with a last-minute attack by Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States, principal proponent, upon witnesses who had testified against the measure.

Mr. Myers further suggested amendment of Section 4 of the bill, which provides for advance submission of synopses by producers, the acceptance or rejection of which by the distributors, he said, would demonstrate their sincerity. It was the synopsis clause which caused the most protest by the majors.

Neely Alone at Final Session

Final sessions of the hearings saw the sponsor, Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely, sitting as the lone member of the five-man subcommitte in charge of the bill, although last week Chairman Ellison D. Smith had requested that final argument be postponed in order that he might be present. There were indications last week that the four committee members other than Senator Neely were probably against the bill.

The last witness to testify at the close on Monday was Senator Sheridan Downey, of California, who told Senator Neely that he would lead the fight against the legislation should it ever reach the floor. At the last session, the Senate passed the bill without a hearing and without a record vote, but the measure never emerged from a House committee for a vote on the floor there.

The case of the proponents was further weakened when the Motion Picture Research Council, which, with Allied, has been sponsoring the measure, suggested that the industry's new trade practice be given a trial in place of legislation.

Kuykendall Blames Lawyers

Nine reasons why the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America opposes the bill were detailed to the subcommittee on Thursday by Ed Kuykendall, president of the association, who blamed the present plight of the industry on the lawyers who have "taken it over."

Mr. Kuykendall declared his organization is opposed to block booking and blind selling, but believes the industry's new trade practice agreement a better method for dealing with the situation than the proposed legislation.

A suggestion that the industry be given an opportunity to try out the agreement was made to Chairman Smith by Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, national president of the Motion Picture Research Council, for years the "ace" support of proponents of federal control.

"My attention has been called to certain changes in the sale of motion pictures proposed by the industry to this committee which, it is said, would eliminate block booking," Dr. Wilbur wrote to Senator Smith in a letter which the Senator read into the record.

"What some of us would like to see is a real answer to the present abuses and alibis. If the motion picture industry has presented practical plans to eliminate block booking and give the local exhibitor a much wider choice of subjects, and a sufficiently higher percentage of cancellations to assure that he can meet the requests of those interested in sound, sane and wholesome pictures for our youth, it would in my judgment be better to have the industry handle the problem than to have it compelled to do so by legislation.

ASSISTANT MANAGERS' SCHOOL INAUGURATED

Lon Cox, district manager for Fox Midwest in Greater Kansas City, has introduced a program of educational meetings for assistant managers. The meetings, to be held every two weeks, have the principal purpose of acquainting the assistants with the fundamentals of theatre mangement.

"When the assistants are ready to move up to a managerial position, they'll know the fundamentals," Mr. Cox said, adding that "manpower, always important, is becoming even more so."

"There are indications that legislation may be the only answer, but if a workable plan to meet the situation has evolved from the industry and will be put into prompt and general effect, it should be given a fair trial."

"The lawyers have taken over the motion picture business," Mr. Kuykendall said, with the result that now it is in "a mess of trouble" and mired down in litigation, antitrust suits, threats of prosecutions, court decrees, conflicting legal opinions and charges and countercharges which have imposed a tremendous burden of unproductive expense.

"I am convinced that in many respects the Neely Bill to prohibit block booking and blind selling is an amazing example of misleading, deceptive and confused legislation, prepared and sponsored by people who are inexperienced in our business," Mr. Kuykendall said. "In this bill, with its clever and subtle provisions, they see a great opportunity for private censorship, through organized pressure on the management of the local theatre.

Denominating the bill an "experiment, noble in purpose, but just the same purely an experiment," Mr. Kuykendall declared his organization's objections were that it would not insure right moral standards in production; would not prevent any exhibitor from showing any indecent or objectionable film he wanted to show; would not help a theatre man who might be persuaded to cancel an announced picture, because his contract would be firm and without any cancellation clause; would force distributors to increase prices; impose the constant threat of fines and imprisonment on every person in the business; invite misuse of the criminal penalties by unscrupulous exhibitors to secure commercial advantages; compel the production of mediocre pictures; take responsibility from the producer and place it on the exhibitor; and destroy business methods which have proved satisfactory for an untried experiment.

Mr. Kuykendall introduced a number of exhibitors, not all affiliated with his organization, who testified as to their satisfactory operation under block booking. Among those who spoke were Stanley Sumner, Cambridge, Mass., treasurer of the Allied Theatres of Massachusetts; Lyle M. Wilson, Roanoke Rapids, N. C., president, and Henry R. Berry, Hartsville, S. C., vice-president, of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina; Harry E. Hogan, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Frank H. Castle, St. Louis, president of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Owners Association; Oscar C. Lam, Rome, Ga., representing the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association; Leo Brecher, New York, representing the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, and William F. Crockett, Virginia Beach, Va., president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia.

As evidence that the women of the country are not unanimously in favor of the bill, opponents presented five women who, while members of important national organizations, speaking for themselves only, detailed the methods whereby their communities cooperated with exhibitors in getting beter pictures. Those who testified were Mrs. E. M. Barsham of the Wilmington, Del., Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. James R. Horgan of the Worcester, Mass., PTA; Mrs. S. A. Ellsworth of the Worcester, Mass., Motion Picture Board of Review; Mrs. Fred Stephenson of the Springfield, Mass., school board and motion picture council, and Mrs. Charles W. Swift of the Elmira, N. Y., motion picture council.

Milliken on Quality

The final witness was Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Hays organization, who outlined the work which the producers are doing to improve the quality of their pictures.

Blasting the idea that elimination of block booking would guarantee improvement in quality, Gov. Milliken pointed out that five years after England adopted its quota law in an effort to develop selective selling, a commission of inquiry found that little improvement had been accomplished in films and that only through the influence of the code which the American producers were putting into operation.

Prices of admission have increased in England while they have gone down in the United States, he said, although, he added, it could not be definitely held that the increase was a reflection of higher distribution costs.

Gov. Milliken pointed out that when the Catholic review group first began its work in 1922 it was able to approve only 25 per cent of the picture reviewed. By the time the Legion of Decency came on the scene, it was approving 77 per cent. As a result of the impetus given the movement by the Legion, he said, pictures improved to a point where, last year, 99 per cent were approved, in whole or in part, and only one per cent condemned.

The success of the Production Code, the witness conceded, has been due in no small part to the cooperation of the civic groups. He held that film betterment is a local problem, because the tastes of the public vary in different sections of the country and under differing conditions of living, and suggested that the women's organizations, libraries, schools and churches should take the lead in meeting the problem.

Downey Cites Progress

As had industry witnesses, Senator Downey, last to testify, on Monday declared the bill would not conduce to improvement in the quality of motion pictures, but, he said, "I am positive that in the past five years there has been a tremendous turn of the films away from indecent and suggestive features that we would not want to see."

FILMS' OWN IMPROVEMENT CITED

No other art in the history of the world has made as much progress as has the motion picture industry in the 30 years of its existence, he said; the number of good pictures, rather than bad, is "amazing," and, he declared, in the 30 years he has been practicing law, while he has had many cases involving minors, he has never had an instance where motion pictures had been the cause of demoralization.

"Let me suggest that if the movies at the present time are improving their type from the standpoint of standards and morals, should not serious consideration be given to leaving it in their hands?" he asked Senator Neely.

"It would be tremendously difficult for any Government to impose censorship on art and secure a better product by that censorship.

Pettijohn Reviews Arguments

Winding up for the opponents of the legislation, C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the majors, made a plea that the proposed trade practice agreement be given a trial, pointing to the reforms which it will bring about without necessitating any major reorganization of the machinery of production and distribution, in contrast to the new practices which would be forced by the Neely bill which, he contended, would not reach the objectives aimed at but would make it impossible for independent producers to stay in business and would deprive exhibitors of cancellation and other important privileges.

The bill would tend to monopolize business in the hands of a very few large companies, and would destroy the option to cancel, and selective contracts, he said.

Representatives of the industry were told by Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman that the legislation might have been much worse had it not been for a desire to cause as little hardship as possible.

Summing up for the National Motion Picture Research Council, Mrs. Bannerman declared that "community organizations will exercise the opportunity to aid exhibitors in the selection of films" and that the bill, which was drafted by the council, is a compromise in many respects in order that the financial strain upon the producers may be eased.

Defends Wilbur Letter

Mrs. Bannerman defended the letter written by Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of the council, to Senator Smith, suggesting that the trade practice agreement be given a trial before legislation was enacted, explaining that the council head had taken the proposals "in good faith when he wrote the letter" and that he still feels that if they do not accomplish the purposes of the bill, the measure should be passed.

The summation by Miss Catherine Lyford of the Massachusetts Civic League was largely an attack upon the credibility of opposition witnesses and in part a more or less humorous "skinning" of the industry, whose "monopolistic stranglehold," she said, "throttles" community choice of pictures.

"The machinations of the industry for profit make it impossible for exhibitors to select or reject pictures on merit alone," she declared.

The testimony of company officials was characterized as part of the "Will Hays smoke screen." Linking the recent printing of salary figures and the claim that the bill would injure the industry, she suggested that "'there is no proof that if the bill were passed Louis B. Mayer would have to go on the WPA."

"You (the committee) will decide whether sheer monopolistic power shall continue to prevail or whether there shall be restored to cities and towns all over the United States real community freedom," Miss Lyford concluded.

Myers Last Heard

The final voice to be heard was that of Abram F. Myers, who explained he first came in contact with the film industry in 1912 when, as a clerk in the Department of Justice, he assisted in the preparation of the "first of the twenty-odd suits brought by the Government under the Sherman antitrust act to curb the motion picture monopoly" and has since been in constant touch with the situation.

Admitting that there are provisions in the trade practice proposals which the independent exhibitors feel are good, and expressing the hope that eventually a satisfactory arbitration provision can be worked out, Mr. Myers declared that lack of enthusiasm for the agreement was due to Allied's lack of interest "in any program which had for its purpose merely hindering the Government in the prosecution of its suit or embarrassing the public groups sponsoring the Neely bill." Later, he said that Allied also viewed with suspicion the fact that MPTOA leaders were called into the negotiations, designating that exhibitor organization as the "step-child" of the producers and distributors.

Summarizing the various proposals and Allied's stand thereon, he declared that the distributors' suggestions "in their present form are not fair substitutes for the Neely bill or for the Government's suit," and suggested that since the distributor representatives had devoted much of their argument to an attack on Section 4, dealing with synopses, their "reasonable criticisms" could be met by amendments to that section which he submitted, which would eliminate the requirement for a very specific synopsis in favor of a provision for an "accurate" and more or less "general" outline of story and action, together with descriptions of the principal characters.

"Despite efforts to establish opposition to the bill on the part of public groups and independent exhibitors, it has been revealed that this opposition comes from one source and one source alone—the Big Eight, united through the Hays Association."

National Decency Legion Classifies Twelve Films

Of 12 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week five were approved for general patronage, four were listed as unobjectionable for adults and three were cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Dodge City," "East Side of Heaven," "The Family Next Door," "The Hardy's Ride High," "Housemaster." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Back Door to Heaven," "Broadway Serenade," "The Lady and the Mob," "Women in the Wind." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "L'Alibi" (French), "Unmarried," "Wuthering Heights."

A farewell dinner for Joseph Kauffman, Universal branch manager in Pittsburgh, who is being transferred to the Celeveland exchange, will be given by the Pittsburgh Variety Club and the exhibitors of Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia at the William Penn Hotel on Monday.

Universal Plans 2-Reel Musicals

"Combination-Show" Reissue of "My Man Godfrey" and "The Old Dark House," with stars including Carole Lombard, William Powell, Charles Laughton, Melvin Douglas, Mischa Auer, Raymond Massey.

Short Subjects

Thirteen Color Cartoons feature Universal's short product production plans.

There will be 15 each made of the Going Places and the Stranger Than Fiction series.

Another innovation for Universal includes 13 special two-reel musicals. Using its complete studio facilities, the company will utilize these pictures as a medium of introduction for the budding talent in Hollywood not immediately suitable for feature pictures.

"The March of Freedom," a special two-reeler, is included on the shorts program.

There will be 104 issues (twice weekly) of the Universal Newsreel.

In his discussion on sales policy, Mr. Scully said it was designed to conform with the proposed fair practice code when adopted.

Stars who will appear in the 1939-40 product, as announced by Mr. Scully, include: Deanna Durbin, W. C. Fields, Bing Crosby, Edgar Bergen and "Charlie McCarthy" and "Mortimer Snerd," Irene Dunne, James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Basil Rathbone, Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew, Danielle Darrieux, Mischa Auer, Gloria Jean, George Murphy, Vincent Price, Boris Karloff, Little Tough Guys, Bela Lugosi, Joy Hodges, Richard Arlen, Dorothy Arnold, John Mack Brown, Larry Crabbe, Robert Cummings, Andy Devine, Virginia Field, Preston Foster, Nan Grey, Hugh Herbert, Irene Hervey, Samuel S. Hinds, William Lundigan, Constance Moore, Jerry Marlowe, Helen Parrish, Juanita Quigley, Frances Robinson & "Sandy."

The complete list of directors and producers includes the following: David Butler, Lester Cowan, Max Golden, Ken Goldsmith, Edmund Grainger, Burt Kelly, Henry Koster, Rowland V. Lee, Anatole Litvak, Joe May, Henry McCrae, Joe Pasternak, Ben Pivar, Al Ray, Phil Rosen, Joseph Santley, John M. Stahl, Ben Stoloff, Richard Wallace, George Yohalem, Harold Young.

Herman G. Weinberg, World Pictures Corporation publicity director, has resigned. He will retain offices at the World Pictures address in New York however.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Spring Fever

Odds and ends, a certain cinch and a hopeful or two tell the story of Hollywood's production activity in the post-Easter week. Several companies already had announced next year's plans and some were getting ready to announce them. Meanwhile six pictures were started and nine were finished.

Terry Kilborn, remembered for his performance in "Boys Town," is a notable addition to the cast of "The Hardys Get Spring Fever," in which W. S. Van Dyke will direct the regular members, Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford and Sara Haden, instead of George B. Seitz, who made the six preceding pictures of the series.

"Golden Boy" Cast

For a long time Columbia made publicity capital of who was going to be in the screen version of the stage play, "Golden Boy." When it went before the cameras Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou, Peter Holden, Sam Levine and Beatrice Lynn were listed as principals.

With Ed Finney producing, Monogram started another Tex Ritter picture, "Down the Wyoming Trail." Mary Brodell, Bobby Lawson, Charles King, Bob Terry, Horace Murphy, Ernie Adams, Jean Southern and Jack Ingram also will be concerned.

Universal, not knowing who the leading woman would be, nevertheless started "Tidal Wave." Fred Stone, Ralph Burd, Marc Lawrence, Frank Jenks and Dorothy Lee were working while executives were making up their minds.

Over at Paramount, where all you can hear is how San Francisco raved over a "secret" preview of "Union Pacific" while Los Angeles was so interested in bowling and other things that they had to take out a new Paramount picture and revive an old one in the downtown Paramount theatre, Harry Sherman started one picture and Charles R. Rogers, lately of Universal, started another. The immediate "Hopalong Cassidy" crew, William Boyd, Russell Hayden and George Hayes, is busy with "Lawful Outlaws." Mr. Rogers, on returning to the studio, wherein he made "70,000 Witnesses" and five or six others a few years ago, started "The Star Maker." Working in it are Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks, Walter Damrosch, Linda Wayne and a lot of aspirants who one day, who knows, may be stars.

Each Completes Two

Universal and Columbia each completed two pictures that have been taking up stage and location space. The first named company has great hopes for a picture called "Ex-Champ." For names it will offer Victor McLaglen, Nan Grey, Tom Brown, Constance Moore, William Frawley, Donald Briggs, Samuel S. Hinds and Marc Lawrence. Joy Hodges and William Lundigan are starred in "They Asked for It."

TRAGIC ENDINGS PLAY NEW ROLE

About once every year, production indulges itself in a round of pictures which conclude with a note of sadness. The sad ending, even though it created the illusion that a greater happiness was to be found in the future, was natural to such picture stories as "Dark Victory" and "Wuthering Heights". Similarly the electrocution of his brother added much to the tragedy-tinged sympathy for Jackie Cooper in "Streets of New York".

The anti-climax of "Juarez" will include a pointed bit of sadness, with Paul Muni, as the Mexican patriot, standing at the bier of Emperor Maximilian (Brian Aherne) whose execution he had ordered.

As "Back Door to Heaven" had a sad ending, so will "Goodbye, Mr. Chips". The finish of "On Borrowed Time" will picture a grandfather and his grandson choosing death to go on and find happiness with a grandmother who died earlier.

When "Tarzan and His Mate" was started, it was announced that this would be the last picture in which Maureen O'Sullivan would appear with Johnny Weismuller and the script was so written that she would die in the finale. However, Miss O'Sullivan, changing her mind, expressed a desire to continue in her Tarzan mate role and the story was changed so that she will live.

Columbia is credited with two pictures. A Larry Darmour production, "Power to Kill," features Jack Holt. "Arizona Cowboy," with Charles Starrett and Iris Meredith, is the second. RKO-Radio finished a cowboy picture, modernized. George O'Brien is the star of "Racketeers of the Range," which also will present Marjorie Reynolds, Chill Wills, Gay Seabrook, Bob Fiske, Frank Marvin and Monte Montague.

Jack London Story

John Carroll and Movita are the headliners in Monogram's adaptation of Jack London's story, "The Wolf Call." Walter Pidgeon, Rita Johnson, Paul Kelly and Nat Pendleton will be most concerned in the prison melodrama, "6,000 Enemies," which MGM completed.

Some time they may have another showmanship designation, but until then the "Dead End" kids, as such will have to include "The Battle of City Hall" among the pictures they were in. Ronald Reagan, Ann Sheridan, Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas, Berton Churchill, Eduardo Ciannelli and Franklyn Pangborn are in it too.

Republic completed "Headin' for Texas," in which will be seen Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, George Hayes, Wade Boteler, Lane Chandler and Tom London.

Charles Skouras Feted

Returning from a European vacation, Charles P. Skouras, directing head of Fox West Coast Theatres, was the honor guest at a home-coming dinner tendered by 350 friends and associates at the Elks Club, Los Angeles, April 11th.

Relating experiences encountered on his trip which carried him to his native Greece, Skouras drew a grim sketch of production and exhibition conditions in Europe. Only French exhibitors seem to be prosperous. Italy and Greece hardly know what to expect, he said, and English exhibitors are seriously worried over television.

While doubting the commercial success of television in America, Mr. Skouras was of the opinion that it will not be long before television broadcasts become a part of domestic theatre programs. He sees television as a novelty in theatres that will substitute for second features and a departure that will ultimately solve the double bill problem.

Dr. A. H. Giannini, who served as toastmaster, praised Mr. Skouras for the efficient job he has done with Fox West Coast Theatres, and presented him with an illuminated scroll signed by everyone present. Other speakers were George Smith, Pacific Coast district manager for Paramount; Alfred Galston, president of the California ITO, and Jack Brower, Los Angeles exchange manager for Warner Bros.

More Than 1,200 Expected At Clubs' Detroit Meeting

The National Variety Clubs' annual convention and banquet, to be held in Detroit April 27, 28 and 29, will see an attendance in excess of 1,200 of America's exhibitors, production and distribution executives. Among the national figures who have accepted invitations to attend the banquet are Governor Julius P. Hyle of Wisconsin; Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio; Governor Arthur James of Pennsylvania, and Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago. Edgar Guest, poet, has also accepted an invitation and will be one of the speakers at the banquet He will read publicly for the first time the creed he has composed for the National Variety Clubs.

20th CENTURY FOX
THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

MAKE THE GREATEST PICTURES!

FILMS ON FIRST FAIR TELECASTS; FCC URGES "DEFINITE STANDARDS"

NBC Will Use Commercial Pictures; Shorts, News Events from World's Fair and "Live" Subjects; No Feature Films

When television takes to the air for its first regular public telecasts, under the National Broadcasting Company's sponsorship, on April 30th, in connection with the opening of the New York World's Fair on Long Island, motion pictures will form a substantial source of supply of material to be telecast.

No Features or Newsreels

The schedule will comprise commercial films, short subjects, news events from the Fair and "live" subjects. C. W. Farrier, NBC's television coordinator, said that features are too long for inclusion, and that no newsreels will be used inasmuch as the newsreel companies themselves are planning coverage of the Fair. The shorts which NBC will televise will come from "all major film companies," according to Mr. Farrier, who added that the rental fees were to be nominal, approximating $10 to $15 a subject, with NBC expecting to pay more when circulation increases. (A technical discussion of films on television and further NBC plans in the field was a feature of the SMPE convention in Hollywood, reported on page 19.)

The subjects on the first program will include the opening parade and President Roosevelt's address, while the remainder of the program will consist of films and will come from Radio City. Regular evening programs will be given on Wednesday and Friday of each week, from eight to nine p. m., beginning May 3rd. Outdoor pickups of news events will be offered on Wednesday, Thursday or Friday afternoons, with a minimum of two hours of programs a week over the NBC station, W2XBS. The programs will be visible for about 55 miles from the Empire State building tower, in which the NBC transmitter is located. There will also be a special program of commercial films offered five days a week.

Dumont on Same Wave Length

DuMont Laboratories will use the same wave length as NBC, coming in when NBC is not using it, with a schedule of Paramount News and trailers.

The Columbia Broadcasting System plans to start its programs in June.

The filing of applications for permission to establish two television stations in Washington by the DuMont Laboratories has been revealed by the FCC. The Commission's five man tour of inspection of leading television plants was finished last Saturday.

A report on the findings will be made in about a month. Mr. Craven and the other commissioners, Thad Brown, Norman Case, George Payne and Paul Walker, agreed that it was "absolutely imperative" that television be inaugurated under definite standards, in order that technical factors would not prevent any owner of a receiving set from using it.

Developments in television are being closely followed by the War and Navy Departments and considerable friction has arisen between the Government and the radio companies as a result of the Government's demand that more consideration be given the possible perfection of methods of military use of the picture, it has been learned in Washington.

At the War Department, it was said that Signal Corps officials have kept in constant touch with developments in the industry with an eye to the possibility that some of the methods evolved may be adapted to military use. Up to the present time, however, it was declared, little has been found which would be of value to the armed forces, and the department at present places more faith in facsimile, which it has perfected to a high degree for military use.

With the use of facsimile, it was explained, pictures taken from planes can be distributed to commanding officers in the form of fixed prints within ten minutes. No equally efficient method of using television has yet been devised.

METROTONE RELEASE IN HOLLAND BARRED

A request from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for permission to distribute its newsreel, Metrotone News, in Holland has been refused by the Netherlands Bioscoop Bond on the ground that five newsreels now occupy screen time in Dutch theatres. The five are Paramount and Fox Movietonews; two Dutch newsreels, Polygoon and Profilti, and the French Eclair News

Urge Military Experiments

While television development abroad is closely veiled in secrecy, it has been reported that the totalitarian countries have been doing a great deal of work and that Japanese military experiments are bringing to perfection methods of televising out-door material from and to mobile units.

American companies approached by Government officials with suggestions that they undertake a general program of research valuable from a military standpoint are understood to have countered with an offer to do so if financed by the Government but indicated no willingness to invest several million dollars of their own money in such work.

Department officials, however, appear to have no intention of asking Congress for such an appropriation, particularly as both War and Navy Departments maintain communications laboratories of their own at which such experiments could be undertaken.

Embassy Theatre "Interested"

No negotiations have been completed for the installation of television equipment in American theatres as yet, but the Embassy Newsreel theatre in New York is reported "interested" by W. F. Githens, president of Newsreel Theatres, operators of the Embassy.

The Roxy Theatre in New York has also been mentioned as a possibility for television, using the Baird screen.

Gilbert Seldes, CBS television program head, plans to leave for England Friday with Donald Hunter Munro, television production manager of British Broadcasting Company, who came to America to assist CBS in television production. Mr. Seldes will study developments in England. Both will return to New York, May 12th, with Munro returning to BBC permanently in June.

Pool Proposal Reported

In London, it is reported that Gaumont-British and Odeon are considering pooling their respective interests in Baird and Scophony television companies, with Baird's stockholders having approved the issuance of a $2,000,000 stock issue. Jack Davis, proprietor of the chain of Monseigneur newsreel theatres, has said that there will no longer be increased prices for additional television showings, but that television will be part of the regular newsreel program. The Monseigneur Cinema uses the Scophony large screen system, which is also being installed in the Odeon Theatre.

The first installations in the United States of Baird television apparatus will be in the New York offices of GB. I. C. Javal, commercial director of Baird, arrives Friday in New York with engineers and equipment. Demonstrations will be held of Baird home television apparatus at the office.

The British postmaster general, acting for the Government, has informed the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Kinematograph Renters Society that he will not receive their joint deputation to discuss television until he has consulted the television advisory committee. The distributors' groups had asked that commercial television be allowed to operate independently of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Isidore Ostrer, Gaumont-British head, has arranged to screen the British Broadcasting Corporation telecast of the Derby, racing event. It will be shown at the Central theatre in London and one suburban house.

Confers with FCC

Robert Robins, secretary and treasurer of the Wald Radio and Television Laboratories, Inc., this week claimed that "we've got television" after conferences with Federal Communications Commission officials, but T. A. M. Craven, chairman of the FCC television committee which has completed a survey of eastern experimental plants, said last Saturday that television was not yet in the stage where it can support itself or become a medium of wide public use or entertainment.

Mr. Robins conferred with FCC officials at their request for further information on the Wald system, which is said to include a method of broadcasting television over present radio transmitting equipment on regular radio wave bands, without the use of cathode ray tubes, at low voltage; a method of sending programs, by the utilization of present frequencies, without recourse to relay stations, and a receiving set, planned to sell for about $50, which may be hooked up with any radio set, and which will show a 24 inch picture containing up to 2,000 lines. The average lineage now is 441.

The Officers

Officers of the company, in addition to Mr. Robins, include George Wald, president, and Ralph Vatner, vice-president. The company plans to file a construction permit for a transmitting tower, which it has been invited to do by the FCC. The new construction, which probably will take place in Newark, is planned for some time within the next six weeks. The basic patents held will be utilized to present non-commercial programs, and a licensing policy will be followed on sets and transmission outlets, in order not to disturb motion pictures, radio or newspapers, according to Mr. Robins.

The New York offices of the Wald Company are in the New York Paramount building, in the law offices of Max E. Levine, David Krauss, Ralph Vatner, William Krauss and Louis Kipnis.

The Stewart-Warner Corporation, automobile accessory manufacturers, will enter the television field this spring with receiving sets.

Governors Attack Chain Store Taxes

Anti-chain store legislation, which in some states affects motion picture theatres, was denounced as a barrier to interstate trade by the governers of 44 states last week.

Repeal of Oklahoma's wages and hours law is the goal of a bill recently introduced in the Oklahoma senate by Senator Leslie Chambers. A strong sentiment in both the house and senate is reported against the law, which is applicable to motion pictures.

Seat Tax on Circuits

Besides these legislative moves this week, activities elsewhere were as follows:

The Connors bill, now before the Wisconsin senate, would levy an occupational and seat tax upon all theatre circuits with more than two units, and is being fought by exhibitors and labor representatives, who are appearing before the senate committee on corporations and taxation. Theatres would be assessed from $5 to $100 per unit, and 1 to 15 cents a seat, depending upon the number of houses in a circuit. There is a companion measure in the assembly.

In Florida, the state legislature has completed the second week of its 60-day bi-annual session, with, to date, no mention made of theatres or other places of amusement.

Action is expected within the next few weeks in the New York State legislature regarding the 20-year-old fight to restrict billboards and advertising along roadways. While Governor Lehman has reiterated the need to restrict outdoor advertising, the unions are expected to provide strong opposition to any measures opposing their interests.

A bill has been passed by the Delaware senate limiting the showing of trailers, as well as advertisements, to three minutes. All film theatres in the state come under the measure, which is designed to protect patrons from long previews, according to Senator Paul Renard, its sponsor. Violators would be fined $50 for a first offense and $100 for a second. Independent theatremen are organizing to oppose the bill before it reaches the House.

Would Restore Blue Laws

A bill introduced in the Pennsylvania House by Assemblyman Gates calls for restoration of the provisions of the ancient blue laws banning all forms of Sunday amusements. Assemblyman Johnson has introduced a measure amending the act of 1935 to make it unlawful for children under 15 to be admitted to motion picture theatres on Sunday. Assemblyman Malloy has introduced a bill requiring theatre employees to report to the police immediately whenever a woman becomes ill in a theatre.

In Connecticut, the legislation remaining in the Capitol which is of film interest has been reduced to the Bingo bill, which proposes to legalize the game for charitable organizations. The Judiciary Committee may revise its former unfavorable report if the bill is revised.

Governor George Aiken of Vermont has signed a bill passed by the legislature placing additional restrictions on billboard advertising.

The Board of Aldermen and the Mayor of Humboldt, Tennessee, have received a petition for the approval of Sunday films in the town.

In Norton, Virginia, W. A. Byers, theatre manager, was acquitted on a charge of operating his house on Sunday. He was the first Wise County case involving the Sunday laws to go before a jury.

Two Lund bills were before the Illinois House. The anti-block booking bill received its second reading and the bill prohibiting double features was heard before the House committee.

RKO Officers Leave New York for Coast

George J. Schaefer, RKO Radio operating head, left New York for the coast over the weekend to spend several weeks at the studio in new season production conferences. He was accompanied by S. Barret McCormick, advertising and publicity director for the company, and Gordon Youngman of the home office legal department.

Mr. Schaefer was reelected chairman of the board and president of Keith-Albee-Orpheum, principal RKO theatre operating subsidiary, along with all other officers at the annual meeting of the company's board on Friday. Other officers are Malcolm J. Kingsberg, vice-chairman; Leon Goldberg, treasurer; William F. Whitman, secretary; O. R. McMahon, W. J. Kernan, William Murray and H. E. Newcomb, assistant treasurers, and Louis Joffe and H. M. Pimstein, assistant secretaries.

Board members, all of whom were reelected earlier, are Mr. Schaefer, L. P. Yandell, N. Peter Rathvon, Donald K. David, Monroe Goldwater, Mr. Kingsberg and John J. McCaffrey.

The directors declared a dividend of $1.75 per share on the seven per cent cumulative convertible preferred for the quarter ended September 30, 1936, payable July 1st to holders of record on June 15th.

All of 20th-Fox Officers Elected

At the annual stockholders' meeting of Twentieth Century-Fox Film held at the home-office of the company on Tuesday, all of the directors were unanimously re-elected, as follows: H. Donald Campbell, Chase National Bank; John R. Dillon, Hayden Stone and Company; Wilfred J. Eadie, Twentieth Century-Fox; Daniel O. Hastings, Industrial Building, Wilmington; Felix A. Jenkins, Twentieth Century-Fox; Sidney R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox; W. C. Michel, Twentieth Century-Fox; William P. Phillips, New York; Hermann G. Place, Chase National Bank; Seton Porter, National Distillers Products; Joseph M. Schenck, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Sydney Towell, Twentieth Century-Fox.

There were represented at the meeting 340,782 shares of preferred stock and 1,100,990 shares of common stock, out of a total of 935,514 shares of preferred stock and 1,741,985 shares of common stock outstanding.

At the annual organization meeting of the newly elected board, held immediately following the annual stockholders' meeting, the following officers were unanimously reelected:

Chairman of the board, Joseph M. Schenck; president, Sidney R. Kent; executive vice-president, William C. Michel; vice-president, Darryl F. Zanuck; vice-president, William Goetz; treasurer, Sydnew Towell; comptroller and assistant treasurer, Wilfred J. Eadie; secretary, Felix A. Jenkins; assistant secretaries, John P. Edmondson, J. Harold Lang, George F. Wasson, Jr.; assistant treasurers, Walter S. Bell and Read B. Simonson.

Emil Feldberg has been named Connecticut representative of National Screen Service.

500 at Showing Of 16mm Films

Eight motion pictures, produced by amateur cinmatographers in the 16 mm. size, were shown Friday evening to an audience of 500 persons at the tenth annual "Movie Party" given by Mr. and Mrs. Duncan MacD. Little. The show was held in the auditorium of the Barbizon-Plaza hotel, New York, and was conducted, for the first time, as a benefit for the Peabody Home, an institution for elderly women in the Bronx. Previous to this year the Littles had conducted the show for their friends and amateur enthusiasts free of charge.

The films selected for the showing were chosen by an independent jury from 24 entries. Films made by amateur photographers in Poland, Japan, Australia and the Philippine Islands were included. The jury was composed of Dan Anderson, feature writer, New York Sun; Wladysaw T. Benda, artist and illustrator; Eileen Creelman, film critic, New York Sun; Mack C. Gorham, Museum of Modern Art Film Library; Charles R. McLendon, city editor, New York Herald-Tribune, and Frank S. Nugent, film critic, New York Times.

The films were "Nation Builders," James A. Sherlock, Sydney; "Ritual of the Dead," Richard H. Lyford, Glendale, Cal.; "Climbing in the Dolomites," Christine L. Reid, Brookline, Mass.; "Ski Legs," Charles and Robert Coles, New York, all black and white, and "Beyond Manila," W. G. Hahn, Philippines; "Archbishop of New Jersey," Photo-Patrons Club, East Side High School, Newark; "Still Waters," Fred C. Ells, Yokohama, Japan, and "Une Noce a la Campagne," Ing. Tadeuz Jankowski, Warsaw, Poland, all in color.

The Movie Party began in June, 1929, when the Littles in a spirit of "show off," to use their words, screened six films, all their own, to 12 invited guests. The next year they showed only contributed films.

$2,000,000 Billings in Week Ends Sears Drive

Warner Brothers announced this week that over $2,000,000 in billings were made by the company in the United States and Canada for the week ending last Saturday, which was the final week in the company's 16 week Gradwell Sears Drive. The last week of the drive marked the greatest business ever done by Warner Brothers, the announcement said. The entire drive was also the most successful in the company's history of sales drives.

Australian Managers Arrive

Harry Hunter, Paramount manager in Australia, and Cecil Mason, Columbia's Austrailian manager, arrived on the west coast this week from Australia for company conferences. Ralph Clark, Warner Brothers; Clay V. Hake, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Bernard Freeman, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Australian managers, have been in New York for several weeks conferring with home office officials. Mr. Hake is scheduled to sail to Australia Wednesday from San Pedro.

IATSE STRIKE THREAT SUSPENDED AS AUTONOMY SETTLEMENT NEARS

District Attorney, NLRB, Labor Heads Hold Continual Conferences on Coast in Effort to Solve IATSE, Local Differences

Clarification of extramural and intramural turmoil of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, which has brought threats of a national strike of projectionists and of production crafts in Hollywood, seemed possible this week as conferences on several fronts sought solutions to the problems.

Strike Threat Suspended

While representatives of the International, NLRB officers and the Los Angeles County district attorney were holding continuing conferences in an attempt to bring about settlement of the intramural dispute arising from the International's suspension of autonomy for Studio Technicians' Local 37 and ousting of its officers, executives of the four studio unions, including Local 37, for which the International is demanding new contracts with producers, on Tuesday asked George E. Browne, IATSE president, to withhold a general strike call pending successful consummation of new bargaining agreements. Meetings were set on these.

Indication of the progress made in arbitration of the internal dispute in the IATSE also was had early this week when the scheduled grand jury investigation of charges of labor racketeering involving two per cent assessments imposed by the IATSE in 1936 and 1937 was postponed for two weeks and continuance for one week of Alliance and Local officers' counter injunction suits in Superior Court was announced.

IATSE officers have denied emphatically charges made by Local 37 leaders that the threatened strike call was connected in any way with the dispute over autonomy.

On Wednesday it was reported that the intramural dispute was near settlement. IATSE leaders were said to be insisting upon withdrawal by Local 37 of all charges made to the district attorney, apologies and expulsion of several members whom Alliance heads consider Communists.

The controversy between international leaders and Local 37 officers has been raging since March 12, when autonomy for the Local was suspended by Frank Stickling and John Gatelee, representing George Browne, IATSE president, but the dispute with the producers came late last week, after an all day conference with Victor Clarke, aide to Pat Casey, labor contact man for the producers, when business representatives of the four locals involved asked Mr. Browne, in New York, to issue a strike call.

Mr. Browne immediately wired to some 900 projectionists' locals the following message:

"Upon receipt of further telegraphic advices you are instructed to immediately withdraw from service all of your members employed in all theatres owned, operated or controlled by any major circuit. This is occasioned by refusal of major producing companies to agree to contract demands made by west coast studio locals. Stand by. Regards."

District Attorney Summons Leaders

Late Thursday night, following the strike threat, Buron Fitts, district attorney, called John Gatelee, Frank Stickling and Harold V. Smith, all international representatives, to his Duarte home. Mr. Fitts had been investigating charges of "labor racketeering" at the request of the ousted officers of Local 37.

Early Friday morning, the district attorney conferred with Joseph M. Schenck, E. J. Mannix and attorney Mendel Silberberg, attorney for the producers, but did not confer with Joseph Carpenter, Local 37 president, and Guy Cooper and Ed Heim, other local officers, although he had arranged for them to be at a nearby hotel awaiting his call.

PROJECTIONISTS' CONTRACT SIGNED

A 35-hour week and an average wage increase of 15 per cent were the terms of the victory won last week by the New York projectionist union, Local 306, by its strike against the major companies in New York home offices and exchanges, and signalized by the signing of a new contract, retroactive on paper to September 1, 1938, and in effect, to September 1, 1937. The wage increase retroactive from 1938 to 1937 is identified as a "bonus"; this unusual action permits the new agreement, for two years as is the usual practice, to expire on September 1, 1940, instead of September 1, of this year.

The strike had been called, ostensibly to force the majors to refuse film delivery to theatres employing non-306 members; when the Department of Justice intervened on anti-trust grounds, it ended in the wage and hour victory for the union. The New York independent circuits, Cocalis and Century, this week were still employing members of the Empire State, rival union; and plans for absorption of Empire by Local 306 have been delayed.

New Contracts Demanded

Mr. Gatelee told a Motion Picture Herald representative that unless the producers accepted, in principle at least, the contracts demanded by the four locals, the Alliance strike would start in Hollywood and spread throughout the country via projectionists' locals.

"We have waited since March 15," he said, "for the producers to give us their answer to our contract demands. The studios have been operating on an open shop basis, since our withdrawal from the basic studio labor agreement. Yet they continued to use the IATSE seal on the main leaders of their film.

"Thursday, we—Mr. Stickling, Mr. Smith and I along with the business representatives of the locals, Herbert Aller, Lew Blix, Thomas Bryan and David Lory—demanded an answer immediately. Mr. Clarke turned us down.

"The business representatives then telephoned George Browne in New York, asking him to issue the strike call."

The locals affected are Studio Photographers 659, Studio Technicians 37, Sound Technicians 695 and Laboratory Technicians 683. No information of new wage scales and working conditions was given by Mr. Gatelee, nor by any other international officers, but it was known that in addition to closed shop demands, they insisted upon a general wage increase and a minimum work call of six hours. The latter condition would cost, according to reports from studios, $2,000,000 a year additional in salaries. The minimum work call at present is three hours.

While conferences continued over the week-end, Mr. Carpenter issued the following statement pointing out the basis on which he and other officials of Local 37 would settle the dispute with international leaders:

"Our peace proposals have been submitted to Mr. Fitts, which were as follows:

"That complete local autonomy be immediately restored to Local 37.

"That the only charges to be submitted to the arbitration committee, composed of one representative from Local 37, one from the international and one representative of either Governor Olson or Mayor Bowron, be those which the international made in calling the 'emergency' and our defense thereto.

"That the so-called 'emergency' clause be inoperative or suspended for a period set by the arbitration board.

"Immediate removal of International Representative Harold V. Smith and business representative Lew C. G. Blix and immediate withdrawal of John Gatelee and Frank Stickling.

"That the Kibre case before the National Labor Relations Board be settled immediately along lines already indicated and which have been generally approved by the parties involved."

New Election Offered

Mr. Gatelee declared that the International was bound by bylaws and its constitution, but would make exception in Local 37's case and call a new election of officers, declaring radical minority leaders were at the head of the organization.

On learning of the strike threat, leaders of Local 37 issued a statement charging that Mr. Browne had threatened the strike only in the hope of preventing a grand jury investigation of the International's management and policies. The statement mentioned the recent resignation of William Bioff as Mr. Browne's personal representative, and recalled the New York exchange strike which it called a "fiasco," and the pending indictment against John P. Nick, head of the St. Louis projectionists' local.

The Local 37 officers later renewed their request to Attorney General Frank Murphy for a probe of labor racketeering in the Alliance ranks, in the following wire:

"Confirming our prediction in previous telegram, George E. Browne, president of the IATSE, has now threatened to call nation wide strike of motion picture projectionists. This threat is attempt to give producers an excuse to exert pressure on local authorities to drop grand jury investigation of labor racketeering. . . . It is significant that Joseph M. Schenck, president of the producers association, was in all night conference with District Attorney Fitts while representatives of workers were allowed to cool their heels. Situation demands you send an investigator by airplane. Awaiting immediate reply."

E. H. Fitzgerald of the Federal Labor Conciliation Bureau, this week was investigating the entire situation on orders from Washington.

Agreement on Kibre Charges

Another conference was called for Friday by Dr. Towne Nylander, Regional NLRB director, between Alliance and Local leaders over charges of company unionism and bribery brought by Jeff Kibre, Local 37 minority leader, against the Alliance and major producing companies. Dr. Nylander said Wednesday that an agreement in principle had been reached and that every prospect was in sight for an early settlement.

Human Interest Story

The name value of the cast to be presented in this picture seems to be of more than ordinary strength. The story also seems to be more than ordinarily interesting. Basically, it is a human interest story of an old champion prize fighter, and it will have much to do with fighters and fights, but its real substance is a father-son story plus two appealing love stories.

For names it will offer Victor McLaglen, now in "Gunga Din" and "Let Freedom Ring," Tom Brown as a young boxer. Brown recently was featured in "The Storm" and "Duke of West Point"; Nan Grey, remembered for many pictures including "Three Smart Girls," "Sutter's Gold," "The Storm" and "Three Smart Girls Grow Up"; Constance Moore, featured in "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," William Frawley, lately in "Huckleberry Finn"; Donald Briggs, Samuel Hinds and Marc Lawrence.

Racketeers of the Range

(RKO Radio)

Western

Most western pictures picture the west as it used to be. While "Racketeers of the Range" is being made up of story and background elements which, it is anticipated, will produce a wealth of action, suspense and thrills as well as the necessary love interest and comedy, it will tell a story of the west of today, a single handed battle by a lone cattle raiser against the unscrupulous forces of a big packing corporation which has the help of rustlers, crooked attorneys and modern racketeers.

The star is George O'Brien, making his twelfth RKO-Radio adventure production, and his 62nd feature. The heroine is Marjorie Reynolds, recently in Monogram's "Skv Pirate." The main source of comedy will be Chill Wills, his fourth appearance with O'Brien. The supporting cast includes Gay Seabrook, who is making a screen comeback, Robert Fiske, Monte Montague, Bud Osborne, Frank Marvin, John Dilson and Ben Corbett.

Oliver Drake, who did the screen play based on Bernard McConville's story, has prepared the adaptation of many O'Brien screen stories. D. Ross Lederman, who has made many adventure melodramas, succeeds O'Brien's regular director, David Howard, for this occasion.

Tragic Romance

This picture will tell the story of a man who sacrifices his life that the woman he loves, and who loves him, may find happiness. Subjects of this nature generally have strong appeal to women and exploitation should be so pointed. Although the story culminates with a tragedy, as in the case of "Dark Victory" and "Back Door to Heaven," much that is inspiring transpires in the meanwhile. An accident which paralyzes a producer frustrates his plan to marry his star. For years the girl, wanting a home and children, remains loyal to him, but her wish to adopt a child leads her into romance with another man. Her lover, resenting this at first, soon realizes that his selfishness is depriving the girl of happiness. Yet when he fails to convince her that he no longer loves her, he resorts to heroic self-sacrifice.

While a large number will appear in the cast, the show will feature Frieda Inescort and Otto Kruger. The other man is newcomer Don Douglas and the principal feature players are Jane Darwell, Adrienne Ames, J. M. Kerrigan and little Ann Todd.

The basis of the production is an original screen play by Garrett Fort, which Sidney Salkow is directing under Sol C. Siegel's production guidance.

Release date: To be determined.

Wolf Call

(Monogram)

Melodrama

The stars of this modernized adaptation of Jack London's "Wolf Call" will be John Carroll and Movita. They were together in "Rose of the Rio Grande" and Carroll subsequently appeared in "I am a Criminal." Peter George Lynn, who contributed a vivid performance in "Sky Pirate," and George Cleveland, outstanding in "Streets of New York," will be featured. The supporting cast includes Wheeler Oakman, Guy Usher, Polly Ann Young, John Sheehan, John Kelly, Roger Williams, Pat O'Malley and the dog, Grey Shadow.

Thematically the picture will portray a story of a man's regeneration against backgrounds of thrilling adventure. The major locales are the Canadian mountains, to which comes a New York play boy to discover that unscrupulous partners are endeavoring to defraud his father out of a valuable radium mine. He beats the rascals at their own game. A highlight is the crash of a plane from which the passengers are rescued and defended from wolves by a police dog. In addition to finding manly self reliance in the north country, the hero also finds true romance.

The screen play is credited to Joseph West and the songs which Carroll will sing were composed by Flemming Allen. George Waggner is the director.

Release date: May 8, 1939.

The Jones Family "In Hollywood"

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy

Production of "In Hollywood" celebrated the third anniversary of the "Jones Family" series. The regular cast members, Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, who is in "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell," Ken Howell, George Ernest June Carlson, Florence Roberts, Marvin Stephens, and Billy Mahan, have appeared as a unit in fourteen films. For this picture their name values will be supplemented by those of William Tracy, who was featured in "Angels with Dirty Faces," June Gale, who has been seen in several 20th Century-Fox films, Hamilton MacFadden, onetime director, and Matt McHugh.

Unlike the usual Hollywood picture, "In Hollywood" will approach its subject from the viewpoint of the "visitor" and not the "professional." Prouty, delegated to the American Legion convention, takes his family to the film capital. Movie-struck Lucy, falling in puppy love with juvenile star Tracy, gets a screen test. Jack is smitten by a siren actress, played by June Gale. The trip to Hollywood is an eye-opener for the family that makes all more than willing to remain home in the future.

A John Stone production, "In Hollywood" is based on the Katherine Kavanaugh characters, with story by Joseph Hoffman and Buster Keaton and Harold Tarshis' screen play. Direction is in the hands of Malcolm St. Clair, maker of "Everybody's Baby" and "Down on the Farm."

Return of the Cisco Kid

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Romantic Western

Some years ago Warner Baxter won the Academy's best actor award for "In Old Arizona." A little while later Fox Films followed up that picture with "The Cisco Kid." If you remember those shows, remember if your patrons liked them. If they made money for you, you know what to expect of "The Return of the Cisco Kid."

For the oldtimers, this show is a chip off the old block. For the newcomers, to whom the "Cisco Kid" character is strange, it's something refreshingly different in the line of western romances.

Many may have wondered why 20th Century-Fox so long delayed in representing Baxter in his prize winning part again, for when good westerns appear there is always a tendency to compare them with the precedents mentioned.

Results at the box office may prove the delay was worthwhile, for as O. Henry's lovable bad man comes back, it is a case of a new story, new thrills, romances, comedy and adventure with one of the most picturesque characters the screen ever has seen.

"The Return of the Cisco Kid" has all the depth, romantic swing, natural comedy, surprises and sensations of its sires. Of course, this one is similar in aspect to its immediate parent. But who, remembering, would want it any differently? As it is, the swashbuckling caballero veritably arises from the grave to resume his career as a rogue who loved to romance with women and to terrorize men. Immediately the show becomes as full of action as a rodeo, and as full of love as a warm spring night. When not concerned with those two elements, its comedy pops like a bunch of firecrackers.

Typical western land grabbing crooks, "McNally" and his cohorts are set to give a trio of tenderfeet a trimming, but he hasn't reckoned with the "Cisco Kid," who would rather make love than fight, steal, kill or anything else. The "Kid" loves "Ann" and he is a little menacing towards her friend "Allan." Grandpa "Bixby" supplies a lot of dizzy comedy. While that of "Lopez" and "Gordito" leans to the sinister side. "Cisco" prepares to beat "McNally" at his own game. Robbing the man's bank, the "Kid" defies the gang in its own stronghold, gets the deed to the ranch and returns to his friends, considering himself very much a conquering hero. Then he learns "Ann" loves "Allan" and, though he puts his rival on the spot, his romantic heart gets the best of him and he shows up again to whipsaw "McNally."

As a matter of exploitation interest, Baxter has the support of two persons, Chris Pin-Martin and Soledad Jiminez, who were with him in "The Cisco Kid." All the rest are new, and Lynn Bari, Cesar Romero, Henry Hull, Kane Richmond, Robert Barrat and C. Henry Gordon turn in performances that match Baxter's work.

In preparing the screen play, Milton Sperling put together a lot of situations that make for days of adventure and nights of romance and here and there moments of honest humor. Herbert I. Leeds directed those incidents and the players participating in them in ways that endow the film with showmanship and entertainment significance. The grandeur of the natural scenic effects emphasizes the picture's various moods.

Big Town Czar

(Universal)

Crime Melodrama

Columnist Ed Sullivan frequently advises youths to shun temptation and lead honest lives. "Big Town Czar," based on Sullivan's story, "Czar of Broadway" and in which he appears, is a graphic illustration of the creed he occasionally preaches. While Sullivan, who makes no pretensions to being an actor, has an important role, the real screen names available to exhibitors are Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Eve Arden, Jack LaRue, Frank Jenks, Walter Woolf King, Oscar O'Shea, Esther Dale and Horace MacMahon. The story, adapted by Edmund Hartman and directed by Arthur Lubin under Ken Goldsmith, associate producer, is straightaway melodrama and aspires to be entertaining while teaching a lesson.

Henchman "Daley," usurping "Burgess'" rackets, is despised by his parents, loses the esteem of his sweetheart "Susan," but becomes the idol of his college boy brother, "Danny." Despite "Phil's" efforts to sidetrack "Danny," the boy moves in, but after proving himself smart once or twice, he meets the fate of all double-crossing gangsters. Desperately in fear of further vengeance from "Luger," "Phil" flees, but when he thinks "Susan" is menaced he returns to shoot it out with the "Luger" mob. Convicted of murder, awaiting execution, "Phil" dictates a crime-does-not-pay story to Sullivan.

"Big Town Czar" has certain touches of novelty that give it fresh entertainment and exploitation significance.

The Hardys Ride High

(MGM)

Domestic Comedy

About all an exhibitor needs to do when another "Hardy Family" picture comes along is display the title on the marquee and in advertising and inform the folk that Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford, Sara Haden et al are in town again. In the case of "The Hardys Ride High" he might do one more thing, prepare additional accommodations for the larger crowds the show is a cinch to attract. It's the best number in the series to date, and after that is stated there isn't much more to say.

"Honesty is the best policy" is the picture's theme. The "Judge" hears that he is in line to inherit $2,000,000 and he and his family, as any other normal American family would do, immediately transport themselves into a seventh heaven of expectation. Only the "Judge" and "Mrs. Hardy" retain any semblance of common sense, any fear that Fate may be playing a trick on them. "Andy" visions himself a millionaire playboy, owner of yachts and swank cars, the object of the affections of a world of beautiful blonde chorus girls covered with diamonds. Social prestige and clothes are "Marian's" dream. While "Mrs. Hardy" buys an old fashioned cast iron frying pan, "Aunt Milly" changes herself from a prim maiden lady school teacher into a gaudy social butterfly, only to have her hope for romance blow up.

The "Judge" learns the sad truth. Back in Carver the family returns to a normal life. "Andy's" antics in giving old sweetheart "Polly" a terrific romantic whirl provide an ideal blackout for a thoroughly enjoyable piece of entertainment.

Previewed at the Village theatre, Westwood, Cal. The audience wasn't making any mistake when it whooped and hollered. The picture probably wouldn't make any impression on a long dead Egyptian mummy, but there's no record of an Egyptian mummy buying his way into a theatre. The folk that can see and hear very likely will be demonstrative.—Gus McCarthy.

Double Crime in the Maginot Line

(Tower)

Military Murder Story

In a setting new to the regulation murder mystery plot and thematically based on a spy plot that gives the narrative the timeliness of a newspaper headline, the reception of this French made film should be widespread in America. The film carries an appropriate interest and the murder-melodrama incidents override any language barrier.

The knowing exhibitor will recall that the makers of the March of Time devoted a complete issue of this documentary reel to an inspection of the famed French line of defense, the Maginot Line. Newspapers and magazines have added coverage. Exploitation elements are apparent. A further feature may be drawn from the cycle of spy pictures made or to be made by American producers.

The work is definite in its accusation. The sabotage of the French governmental fortress is revealed in no uncertain terms as the manipulations of a German agent masquerading as a French lieutenant. "Captain Bruchot" is accused of murdering "Commander d'Espinac" and an aid while the pair are inspecting the underground arsenals. The motif is supposed to be "Bruchot's" grievance in being superseded in his post and his jealousy over the attention shown his wife by his superior. Then begin the picture's most gripping moments as the suspected soldier goes about uncovering the identity of the murderer. A trap is laid and an exciting chase follows.

The fascinating behind the scenes shots of the Maginot Line naturally carry first place in the spectator's interest. The musical background heightens the melodramatic mood. English superimposed titles translate adequately the Gallic lines.

Sorority House

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy

"Sorority House" is a story of adolescent heartbreak and happiness, of young love against a background of a quite generally accepted American caste system, that existing in college sororities and fraternities. It is a pithy revelation of one facet of American college life, told feelingly and remorselessly. Brutally frank concerning snobbishness and thoughtless cruelty, which motivates the plot, the picture has for contrast sacrifices made by a worshiping father in order that his daughter may have her wish of attending college.

The film can be subject of a number of types of exploitation campaigns, to fit various communities' interests. It can be an expose or subject of controversy. It can be a document of human interest of the first year adventures of a young girl at college. Anne Shirley enacts the role of the young girl whose father sells his grocery store to enable her to continue in college when the lure of proposed sorority life causes her to think of incurring additional expenses. Barbara Read is a girl poor and thought too unpretty, who has not been "rushed." Adele Pearce is a girl who, though "rushed," fails to get the all important invitation to join the organization.

The male romantic interest is played by James Ellison. The cast is completed by J. M. Kerrigan, Helen Wood, Doris Jordan, June Storey, Elisabeth Risdon, Margaret Armstrong, Selmer Jackson and Chill Wills.

John Farrow directed the succinct screenplay by Dalton Thumbo, who adapted the play, "The Chi House," by Mary Coyle Chase. Robert Sisk produced under guidance of production executive Lee Marcus.

Previewed at the Hollywood Pantages theatre to an audience which, after giving indications of enjoying the picture, applauded the anti-snobbery sentiment expressed by characters.—V. K.

Juarez and Maximilian

(Miguel C. Torres)

Historical Melodrama

Written, directed and produced by Miguel C. Torres, producer of a Spanish language version of the same subject previously, this film, known until recently as "Maximilian and Carlotta," tells the story of the short-lived Mexican empire from the standpoint of the tragically destined emperor and empress. Leads are Conrad Nagel and Medea Novara, star of Spanish language films. Lionel Atwill has the principal supporting role, while Guy Bates Post, Jason Robards, Evelyn Brent, Gustave von Seyffertitz and Frank McGlynn, Sr., are other cast names of billing consequence.

As produced, assertedly with assistance and cooperation of the Mexican Government, the picture possesses a documentary quality with respect to settings, backgrounds and general deportment. This is especially to be noted in sequences filmed in and around the Palace Nacional and the Museum, and in the use of elaborate furnishings and royal trappings which have been preserved intact.

The story opens with Napoleon III persuading Maximilian to accept the throne of his sword-wrought Mexican empire, and progresses with manifest historical accuracy through the incidents leading to his surrender to the Republican forces under Juarez, ending with his execution. The character of Juarez, played by Robards, appears in half a dozen or more episodes and engages in considerable dialogue but is photographed from the back in all instances, never full face.

The performances of most players are seemingly cramped by a script which shuttles steadily back and forth between Mexico and Europe. Mr. Atwill's is the most convincing. Miss Novara's dialect is in unhappy contrast with Nagel's concise English, at considerable cost to both.

The production is at its best in the elaborate interiors of the Mexican palace and in the battle sequences preceding the Emperor's surrender. These counterbalance to some extent more numerous dialogue sequences, some of which may be dispensed with profitably.

Previewed at the Egyptian theatre, Hollywood, a theatre infrequently utilized for preview purposes, which circumstance may or may not account for noticeable restlessness on the part of the lay attendance and a certain number of walkouts.—William R. Weaver.

Written, directed and produced by Miguel C. Torres. P. C- A. Certificate No. 5195. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 95 minutes. Release date to be determined. General audience classification.

Les Otages

(The Hostages)

(Nero Film)

War Melodrama

The international crisis has brought back in France the production of films based on war.

"The Hostages," story and production due to German refugees living in Paris, takes place in France in September, 1914, when the German armies approached Paris.

In a charming and quiet village of the Marne's valley, two men have quarreled for years over politics, while their children, "Pierre" and "Annie," have fallen in love.

"Pierre" joins his regiment but returns on a short leave to marry "Annie" secretly. Surprised by the rapid advance of the Germans, he is discovered by a German officer and kills him. The German authorities choose five hostages, including the fathers of "Annie" and "Pierre," and are to shoot them at dawn if the murderer does not announce himself. As the hostages face the firing squad, the French troops arrive.

Raymond Bernard's direction is strong, chiefly in the battle scenes, as is the photography.

The tempo is slow and heavy. Attempts to introduce comedy miss fire.

Previewed at the opening gala evening at the Marivaux theatre, Paris, where personalities and industry representatives applauded the film and congratulated the director.—Pierre Autre.

Produced by Chronos Film (Paris). World rights: Nero Film. Production executive, Seymour Nebenzahl. Directed by Raymond Bernard. Original story by Victor Trivas and Leo Mitler. Dialogues by Jean Anouilh. Photographed by R. Le Febvre. Art director, Perrier. Sound engineer, Sivel. Produced at the Gaumont Studios (Paris) and on location at Chezy-sur-Marne. Recorded on Western Electric system. Running time, 90 minutes. Adult audience classification.

The Lambeth Walk

(Capad-Pinebrook-MGM)

Society Extravaganza

The stage show from which this British production is closely adapted scored probably not so much because of any essential brilliance or wit as by its exploitation of that dance phenomenon fast becoming a museum piece, 'The Lambeth Walk'. The world wide vogue of this a ballroom ritual, from Lambeth to the Lalapagos, is the film's immediate and ultimate factor of appeal, giving it something on the credit side of showmanship without further effort. Cut out the ritual dance itself, here performed on grandiose though scarcely imaginative or startling lines by Duchesses and "Donahs," Countesses and Cockneys, and the assets of appeal on both sides of the Atlantic drop into a different category.

Actually it is somewhat of a one man show, with English comedian Lupino Lane in the Cockney role of "Bill Snibson," ex-Lambeth Walk, noted South London street market and plebian dormitory, bearing almost the whole brunt of the show as an illegitimate Cockney heir shanghaied into society. Lane, whose comedy is both of and for the stage rather than the screen, is in every sequence, juggles with his derby, gags in rhyming slang, frolics in the manner of musical comedy, and sings and dances to pattern.

The theme is not new. Lane inherits the title, has trouble with his valet, learns deportment from the Duchess, and nearly loses his Cockney girl friend.

The entire action unrolls in the family manor with a background of stagey lords and ladies, menials and family retainers. Much of the Lane patter is in rhyming slang and the dialogue is of the "obvious" variety. Sally Gray is a charmingly natural foil to Lane, "Sir Seymour Hicks," Norah Howard as a pompous dowager, Mark Lester as a very amusingly incoherent member of the gentry, and Charles Heslop as the valet, work hard with their roles.

Screened to a trade show audience, the film mustered a few laughs among the less sophisticated sections, and enthusiasm during the Lambeth Walk sequence. Agreement was general that it would be sold on its title.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

A Capad-Pinebrook Production. Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Produced by Anthony Havelock-Allan. Directed by Albert de Courville. From the stage success "Me and My Girl." Screen play, John Paddy Carstairs. Music, Noel Gay. Book and lyrics by Louis Arthur Rose and Douglas Furber. Cameraman, Francis Carver. Film editor, Lister Lawrence. Running time, 84 minutes. General audience classification.

Inspector Hornleigh

(20th Century-Fox)

Detective Melodrama

Though international fame is claimed for him, "Inspector Hornleigh" as a name may not mean quite so much to audiences outside Britain. Here, however, he has been for some time a favorite character of radio fiction, heard weekly in the BBC show, "Monday Night at Seven." He is the creation of a Dutch author! This production aims directly then at the vast radio audience and seeks to exploit it further by casting Gordon Harker, Cockney comedian of many Edgar Wallace plays and films, as the Inspector. It is a stereotyped species of yarn, and has nothing outstanding for the international limelight.

The tale of a bag stolen from the Chancellor of the Exchequer, it develops upon conventional lines, a trail of clue and counterclue of suspicions and conflicting evidence. There are one or two murders to punch melodrama into the action. The fluent script develops the narrative efficiently and intersperses comedy in a convenient proportion.

Harker's Cockney comedy is of precisely the type audiences have come to expect and he has a grand stooge in Alistair Sim, as a mutton headed Scots sergeant.

Eugene Forde directed, often making much more of the material than might be expected. Phil Tannura's camerawork adds potence.

Seen in a London preview theatre, the film was accepted as a safe brand of entertainment. Alistair Sim commanded major plaudits.—A. F.

Produced by Twentieth Century Productions. Distributed by Twentieth Century-Fox. Directed by Eugene Forde. Based on the character "Inspector Hornleigh" created by Hans Wolfgang Priwin. Screen play, Bryan Wallace. Dialogue, Gerald Elliott. Photography, Philip Tannura and Derick Williams. Running time, 81 minutes. Adult audience classification.

For Auld Lang Syne

(The Motion Picture Industry)

Will Rogers Memorial Short

The motion picture industry has prepared another short for its fourth annual tribute to Will Rogers. This time the subject is divided into three parts; first, Robert Sherwood, author of the current Broadway stage production "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," introduces Raymond Massey, star of the play, in two scenes from the life of Abraham Lincoln; second, a camera trip, narrated by Lowell Thomas, through the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital at Saranac Lake, New York, where those actively connected with the motion picture industry or employed by theatres may be treated for tuberculosis, and, third, Deanna Durbin introducing Spencer Tracy, who, in turn, asks theatre patrons to support this cause with contributions.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 61

(Universal)

Novelty

Included among the occupations and hobbies for this newest compilation from the Stranger Than Fiction classification are an inventive man from Georgia who has built a model miniature of a farmyard from used and discarded matches; a visit to a facial cocktail bar in New York where milady can replenish her makeup; a lady switchman, or to be more correct, switchwoman from Buffalo, N. Y.; a patient young man who runs an animal mart for the training of household pets, and a New York tailor who has become an outstanding photographer. The material is varied and outstanding enough to interest any average audience for the full period of its running time.—Running time, nine minutes.

Weather Wizard

(MGM)

Specialty

A Pete Smith Specialty, the subject details the experience and hazards of citrus growers and the cooperation of the weather bureau in keeping the farmer aware of what to expect. The picture opens with a meteorologist checking weather reports and warning citrus growers of a coming cold wave. At the groves a father, mother and small son light the oil stoves. Finally the tests indicate a break in the cold wave, and the crops are saved. Alonzo Price, Ruth Robinson, Will Stanton, John Dilson and Bobby Winkler are featured. Running time, nine minutes.

An Hour for Lunch

(MGM)

Benchley Comedy

Workers in general and office employees in particular will relish immensely this sly and witty expose of Robert Benchley's experiences in budgeting his lunch hour to allow him to perform a thousand and one errands during that span of time. From the time of his departure when Benchley plays a sort of catch game with the elevators in his office building to his return to work, the Benchleyan program meets one setback after another. An insistent and talkative friend must be sidetracked. The barber shop is filled to capacity. Valuable time is wasted in listening to a street vender's sales talk. The herculean task of trying to catch a quick sandwich eliminates more valuable moments. A trip to a haberdasher to exchange a shirt that was left behind in the office moves the clock ahead to the appointed time of return. Finally, Benchley comes back to his business with nothing gained but the conviction that "tempus fugits." The sequence at the drug store counter especially will cause the audience to emit loud howls of laughter during the unreeling of this immensely humorous single reeler. Running time, nine minutes.

Daffy Duck and the Dinosaur

(Vitaphone)

Merrie Melody

A "slap happy" rendition by the 'screwball" fowl, Daffy Duck, and his misadventures with a prehistoric gentleman and his private pet, a dinosaur, make for one of the most entertaining Merrie Melodies to date. The caveman casts hungry eyes upon Daffy and, with the assistance of his dinosaur, endeavors to bag the bird. The finale is a bust for hunter and hunted alike. The gags and situations are appropriately matched to the zany personality of the duck.—Running time, seven minutes.

Marine Circus

(MGM)

Specialty

Photographed at the Marine Studios in Marineland, Fla., a few miles south of St. Augustine, this Pete Smith Specialty is precisely what the title indicates. All sorts of undersea life unwittingly perform for the camera, and the Smith touch is there when it comes to comedy. An interesting phase of the subject has to do with feeding time. A bell is lowered into the water and while it clangs the fish gather and wait for their food to be tossed to them. Directed by James A. FitzPatrick. Running time, 9 minutes.

Happy Tots

(Columbia)

Color Rhapsody

With a musical background by Joe De Nat and a setting in a small community in the woods, this color short is entertaining. The inhabitants of this community believe in enjoying life by singing and dancing.—Running time, 6½ minutes.

Somewhat Secret

Swing Musical

In this two-reel swing musical the jitterbugs hold sway at a girl's school until the assistant dean forbids such dancing as "uncouth." But she is affianced to a chemistry professor who, unknown to her, is a leader of a swing orchestra. In almost no time at all she becomes a member of the jitterbug brigade. The players are Mary Howard, Tom Collins, Benny Rubin, Mary Bovard, Claire James, Mitzie Uehlein, Phillip Terry and a bevy of champion jitterbugs. Sammy Lee directed from a screen play by Mort Green and Julian Hochfelder. Jack Chertok is the producer. Running time, 21 minutes.

The Story of Dr. Jenner

(MGM)

Passing Parade

John Nesbitt's Passing Parade series of short subjects pays tribute here to the country doctor, Dr. Jenner, whose discovery of vaccination has saved the lives of untold thousands. The story is laid in a small English village in the latter part of the eighteenth century. The villages are suffering from a smallpox epidemic. Dr. Edward Jenner, a local physician, notes that dairy workers who contracted a harmless disease from cattle, called cowpox, are immune from smallpox. His efforts to vaccinate the villages are met with derision. To prove his theory Dr. Jenner injects the virus of smallpox into the body of a small boy who has been vaccinated. The epidemic is checked. The players are Matthew Boulton, Fay Helm, Helen Brownie, William Tannen and Raymond Severin.—Running time, 10 minutes.

A-Ducking They Did Go

The Three Stooges

Curly, Larry and Moe are in trouble again, this time when they sell memberships in a fraudulent duck hunting club to the governor, mayor and police chief. At the club they find that there haven't been any ducks in that section for years, and are threatened with a jail sentence if they don't produce the ducks. Curly steals a flock from a nearby duck farm and is caught after the governor, mayor and police chief have shot most of them. This is an entertaining short for those who enjoy the three stooges.—Running time, 17 minutes.

The Little Goldfish

(MGM)

Color Cartoon

This is the first in a new cartoon series in color and was produced by Rudolph Ising. The animated star is a goldfish, a vanishing species of marine life (see local newspapers for collegiate news on the latest goldfish score). This goldfish longs for freedom and adventures in the deep sea. One day when a call interrupts the changing of the water, in the kitchen sink, the goldfish is washed down the drain and out to the sea. Undersea denizens make his life miserable and just when the goldfish imagines the end has come he awakens to discover the whole episode is a nightmare. Running time, 8 minutes.

Navy Champions

(Columbia)

World of Sports

The camera takes the audience to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., where the midshipmen go through their calisthenics, are taught the finer points of boxing and sailing and kept in the best of physical condition. The climax of the short is an Army-Navy football game, noted for its keen rivalry and its good sportsmanship.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

While America Sleeps

(MGM)

Spy Story

The breaking up of a spy ring is dramatized in this "Crime Does Not Pay" subject, informing and entertaining. A worker, with a family to support, agrees for a price to photograph the plans of the newest airplane models for a foreign agent. The film goes to confederates in another city where it is made ready for transportation to a foreign country. Government officials intercept the postcard bearing invisibly the information. The officials set a trap and catch the worker and his confederates at work. The players are Dick Purcell, Rowland Varno, Frederick Vogeding, Egon Brecher, Lenita Lane, Bobby Winkler, Paul Stanton, Richard Tucker among others. Running time, 21 minutes.

Film Division Names Committees for Fund

Five committees were appointed at a meeting in New York Wednesday by the Motion Picture Division of the Greater New York Fund. The chairmen and the units are Ned E. Depinet, producer-distributors; B. S. Moss, exhibitors; Herman Robbins, allied accessories; Herbert J. Yates, laboratories, and Fredric March, actors.

The meeting was addressed by J. Robert Rubin, chairman of the Motion Picture Division; Harry Brandt, Edward A. Golden, Murray Silverstone, Harold Rodner, Charles Casanave, Major F. E. Thompson and B. S. Moss.

Mr. Golden pledged a day's pay from each of the 125 home office employees of Monogram.

DAR Condemns Duals, Commends Warners

Double features were condemned and playing of the national anthem in film theatres was commended in the report of the motion picture committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution, presented Wednesday to the annual meeting of the organization in Washington.

Submitting the report to the committee, Mrs. Leroy Montgomery of Southwalk, Conn., the chairman, suggested a letter of commendation be sent to Warner Brothers for their Americanism in initiating the patriotic practice.

Kent Cancels Trip To Foreign Meetings

Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, has canceled his scheduled trip to attend the company's Paris and London sales conventions. His work in connection with the trade practice code and other matters prevent his going.

Herman Wobber, general sales manager, and Walter J. Hutchinson, director of foreign distribution, sailed Wednesday on the Washington for the Paris meeting, May 4 and 5 and the London session May 11 to 13. Truman H. Talley, producer of Movietone News and short subjects, planned to sail Friday on the Queen Mary. He will conduct a convention of his European newsreel forces in Paris following the sales meeting.

The seventh annual S. R. Kent Drive will start August 13th.

Bertha Kalich Dies

Bertha Kalich, 64, a former star of the Yiddish theatre, died in New York Tuesday. Miss Kalich began her stage career in Lemberg, Austria-Hungary, in the 1890's. Her greatest successes were scored at the old Thalia theatre, on New York's East Side. She later appeared in English language roles and in motion pictures.

Zukor in New York

Adolph Zukor was on board the Queen Mary, scheduled to arrive in New York on Thursday. The Paramount executive expected to remain in the east for one month before going to Hollywood to discuss the results of his European tour with studio officials. He is to sail for Australia from Hollywood.

No Date Set for Nova Scotia Law

No provision has been made for the actual enactment of the Nova Scotia bill prohibiting "undue discrimination" by a film exchange in booking for any theatre in that province, it has been learned at the Toronto offices of major Canadian distributors. The bill can become effective only by proclamation of the Provincial Government.

The lack of provision in the act as passed, for a date of enforcement, makes possible further study of the situation and a reconsideration of the whole subject. While the final acceptance of the bill caused considerable surprise, it was pointed out that provincial regulations already in force gave the Government as much power as was provided in the new act.

Balaban-Katz Circuit Receipts Off 4½ Per Cent

The annual stockholders' meeting of Balaban and Katz, theatre operators, in Chicago, on Tuesday, revealed a drop in income for the first 14 weeks of this year, of four and one-half per cent in receipts.

In the financial report submitted to the stockholders, earnings for 1938 were revealed at $1,270,401, amounting to $4.46 per share, contrasted with $1,398,000, amounting to $4.90 per share in 1937. Anent the drop in income this year, the percentage drop is estimated at 1.6 per cent. This is expected to make the 1939 net profits less than 1938.

Decision Reserved In Patent Suit

Federal Judge Mortimer W. Byers reserved decision Tuesday on the patent suit brought by Virgil C. Crites against Warner Brothers Pictures. Albert A. Radtke, Leonard Day, Thomas J. Martin, Radtke Patents Corporation and United Research Corporation, a Warner subsidiary. Trial had lasted almost a month.

The suit, brought in 1937, involved assignment of a patent providing "methods of and means for optically recording and reproducing sound," and seeks an injunction and an accounting of profits. It is described as a contract action in which Crites claims he is entitled to the patent under an alleged agreement with Radtke.

Homer Tasker, former president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, was a witness for the defense.

Morris Leaves Music Post

Edwin H. Morris resigned this week as vice-president and general manager of the Music Publishers Holding Corporation, a subsidiary of Warner Brothers. Mr. Morris, son of Sam Morris, Warner foreign distribution head, is a director of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and president of the Music Publishers Protective Association.

Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, will attend the Haym Solomon banquet and premiere at Chicago's Hotel Stevens May 21st. The proceeds of the $10 a plate banquet will go toward erecting a statue in Grant Park in honor of George Washington, Haym Solomon, and Robert Morris. The film, "Sons of Liberty," will have its initial screening at the banquet.

MYSTERIOUS RIDER

MYSTERIOUS RIDER, THE: Douglas Dumbrille, Sidney Toler, Russell Hayden, Weldon Heyburn, Charlotte Fields. I think the industry owes producer Harry Sherman a vote of thanks for keeping the "Western" average so high. This film will please any audience and we need more casts such as the excellent selections made in this Zane Grey story. Highly exciting. Excellent plot. Swell scenes. A-1 class. ZANE GREY'S

★ HERITAGE of the DESERT ★

"The appeal of the great outdoors, plus romance and action, are the essentials of HERITAGE OF THE DESERT. This version is pictorially beautiful. A fast moving screenplay and tactful direction contribute much to the entertainment."

Motion Picture Daily

"Superior outdoor picture, praiseworthy in every department. Should score decisively at the box office."

New York Film Daily

"HERITAGE OF THE DESERT is not an ordinary western picture. Appealing love story, plenty of dramatic instance. Sometimes the film has a spiritual quality but comedy has not been neglected. Action, suspense and surprise have been included in abundance, and all elements have been intelligently welded. Well turned performances make the plot and its amplifications believable, understanding and entertaining."

Motion Picture Herald

"Here is a picture whose production manifestly, from the outset, was aimed at a new approach in the western theme, the injection of a quality of depth and significance. So thoroughly was this achieved that it emerges as an outdoor drama of the top rank."

Reporter.

"Combining believable drama with an abundance of thrilling action, the whole mounted against natural beauty of Arizona wastelands, HERITAGE OF THE DESERT will more than satisfy."

Variety

"Producer Sherman and Paramount can well be proud of this well-made and highly entertaining Zane Grey story. It is beautifully photographed and most capably directed. In the matter of direction Selander has really captured the spirit of author Zane Grey's novel."

Motion Picture Review

"Drama, action, thrills and well-written screenplay, plus expert trouping, direction and production, make this picture one of the finest in Producer Harry Sherman's long list of successes."

"PACIFIC" OPENING SET FOR 45 CITIES

Will Follow Omaha Celebration with DeMille Heading Hollywood Party; City "Rebuilt"

With the addition, this week, of Katherine De Mille and Anthony Quinn to the roster of Hollywood stars who will journey on the "Union Pacific" special train to the world premiere of the Cecil B. De Mille-Paramount production in Omaha on April 28th, Paramount has completed arrangements for gala premieres in all 45 cities to be visited on the tour.

Leaving Hollywood on Monday will be Mr. De Mille, Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, Evelyn Keyes, Shelia Darcy, Judith Allen, Julia Faye, Evelyn Luckey, and production executives and railroad officials.

Salt Lake City Party

At Salt Lake City, newspaper representatives and photographers will interview the Hollywood visitors as will Radio Station KSL, outlet of CBS. A parade, with hundreds of "old-timers" marching and on specially constructed floats, a regiment from Fort Douglas, planes from the 325th Observation Corps plus two stagecoaches of Indians, will escort the party to the Hotel Utah.

Mr. De Mille and his party, which will include William M. Jeffers, president of the Union Pacific Railroad, will be guests at a dinner attended by Governor Harry Blood, of Utah, Mayor Wallace, Heber J. Grant, president of the Mormon Church, and others. Station KUTA of NBC's Blue network will broadcast the event.

A public dance, with an attendance of 10,000 expected, will be held at the Union Station in Ogden later on Tuesday. Union Pacific "Old Timers" will appear in beaver hats and women in calico dresses of the 1860's.

"Golden Spike" Celebration

In Omaha on Friday the "Union Pacific" world premiere will coincide with the Golden Spike Days celebration, April 26 to 29.

The city of 225,000 will be costumed, the women in gay dresses of seven decades ago, the men in tall beaver hats. Omaha will be elaborately decorated. On one block false fronts, historically accurate, will be erected in front of all modern buildings.

There will be an Indian encampment, a ball, luncheon with 750 civic leaders and business men; a banquet at Ak-Sar-Ben Coliseum.

All railroads will offer special rates.

Tickets for the simultaneous premiere showings in three Omaha theatres are selling at the record price of $3.

More than 100 Federal Army costumes of the period of 1860 have been shipped to Omaha from the Paramount studio wardrobe department to be worn by members of National Guard units who will do patrol duty. Fifty infantrymen, also in costume, will do police duty.

"Union Pacific" will be heavily exploited in an $80,000 advertising budget of the Pennzoil Company, which has lubricated the system's streamlined trains since they were first put into service.

Paramount will have the feature playing 260 engagements in key cities within a month after the Omaha premiere; 53 dates are pre-release runs; May 5 is the national release date.

On April 29 it will appear day and date in the following 12 cities: Salt Lake, Los Angeles, Denver, Portland, Ore., Seattle, Ogden, Cheyenne, Laramie, North Platte, St. Petersburg, Tampa and Miami Beach.

May 3 brings simultaneous openings in Kansas City, Fort Smith, Tucson and Augusta.

To Count Radio Sets for Defense

A count of radio receiving sets in the taking of the next census of population has been asked of the United States Census Bureau by the Federal Communications Commission to provide "vital" information desirable in the regulation of the broadcasting industry and essential to the development of a program of national defense.

While the Census Bureau, swamped with requests from governmental agencies, industrial groups and other organizations for "counts" of various things when it makes the census, is considering all such applications with care and granting only those which relate to matters on which it believes statistical data will be of value to the country generally, FCC officials have indicated that the matter of ascertaining the number of receiving sets is so urged that if it is not included in the census an effort will be made to secure funds for a special survey.

In presenting its case to Census heads, the FCC contended that the information it seeks is of national significance from many angles and that while it is essential to the proper regulation of broadcasting, it is of even more importance from the standpoint of the national defense in view of the part which radio now plays in the daily life of the Nation.

In the event of an emergency, a national catastrophe as well as war, it was pointed out, it would be highly desirable to know the proportion of the population in a given area which could be reached through radio.

Fox Air Policy Not Changed by Derby

Sponsoring by Twentieth Century-Fox of the Kentucky Derby broadcast over 93 stations in the CBS network on May 6 does not alter the company's policy on radio, which is to keep its stars off the air, S. R. Kent, president, has informed company personnel.

The tieup will exploit "Rose of Washington Square," with announcements on the film during the broadcast. The cost of the commercial is $50,000, of which $25,000 represents the radio rights to the turf classic and some $25,000 in air time.

A statement in the company's house organ, the Dynamo, declares that this can "by no means be interpreted that its stand against use of its stars on the radio is in any way changed" and that the company will not permit its personalities to be absorbed by radio.

"Mr. Kent's announced policy that this company looks upon radio in one light, as a competitor that minimizes and discourages motion picture theatre patronage through gratis entertainment, remains the same," says the statement.

"This company views radio only as an advertising medium and will utilize it when its use will be advantageous in bringing people out of their homes to the motion picture theatre box-offices.

"This company does not intend to detour from its set course in taking the lead to stop radio's raid on star-power that costs the company, anyway, at least $3,000,000 annually to maintain. This company has never relied on radio for its talent. Radio has contributed absolutely nothing to this company's starpower.

The Ziegfeld Club, composed of the girls who was starred or had part in the shows of the late Florenz Ziegfeld, was to hold its fourth annual ball and midnight frolic on Saturday at the Starlight Roof of the Hotel Waldorf Astoria, New York City. The proceeds go to the Actors Fund and the Will Rogers' Memorial Fund, and to caring for needy Ziegfeld girls.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Vivien Leigh, of dear ol' Lunnon, now working for David Selznick in "Gone with the Wind," in Hollywood, was reading a fan letter the other day and was quite startled to come across the notation that the sender, Lawrence Quattlebaum, of Gainesville, Georgia, had enclosed a $100 bill to pay for one of her fan photographs. Miss Leigh rushed into the envelope, pulled out a bill, and found it to be Confederate money from the Civil War.

May Robson, that grand old trouper—she's 75 now—was driving through Culver City some six years ago with her secretary and companion, Miss Lillian Harmer. On the curb sat a small boy and girl, forlorn as children in an old-time Jackie Coogan movie. May stopped and discovered that the kids had no companions to play with, that there were practically no children in Culver City because landlords wouldn't rent to families who had them. May then went to work making houses available for families with children. Since then the firm of Robson and Harmer has built six homes, rebuilt or reconditioned 11. And in exact reverse of the Hollywood manner, families without children absolutely cannot do business with Robson and Harmer.

Jacques Bustanoby, old time New York restaurant man, and Julius Keller, another ancient in that line, had been arguing over the origin of the modern night club floor show, until Damon Runyon stepped in and got technical, holding that the floor show really started with the Romans, who, he says, liked nothing better than to loll back on cushions and gorge themselves with the choicest viands "while bevys of dancing girls with no more garments on them than so many Palm Beach society bathing beauties wear, went through their didoes."

The only difference between those Roman festivities and the modern night club floor show is that the Romans got better food and had no masters of ceremonies.

Neal O'Hara tells of the movie theatre at Pine Island, Minnesota, having a full 45-cent box office intake the other evening during a 30-degrees-below blizzard—the audience consisting of one adult at 35 cents and a child at ten, and because Pop and Willie had traveled 25 miles through the storm, the houseowner put the whole show through the projector for the lone two patrons.

It was in the office of L. V. Seicshnaydre, local manager for Republic Pictures in New Orleans last week that Movie Cowboy Ray Corrigan let his "wild-and-woolly" Hollywood Boulevard cowboy spirit get out of control. Seicshnaydre was examining one of the big six-feet-two actor's six-shooters that Corrigan uses for screen appearances when the cowboy slipped another gun from its holster and fired. Seicshnaydre and the rest of the office force, fearing that Corrigan was about to run amuck, ran for their lives. When they finally returned some minutes later to count the casualities, Corrigan explained he had only fired blanks.

Then there is the super-super Hollywood producer who, as exposed by the London Era, does everything on a great big colossal scale, even inviting his dinner guests to take showers instead of using finger bowls.

Believe it or not—we have a publicity piece in hand to prove it—the Nazis' government-controlled and operated Tobis Film Company, in Berlin, announces they are making a picture entitled "Sergeant Barry," in which Hans Aber plays the part of Sergeant Barry, described as a Chicago cop who meets the heroine "on one of his anti-gangster raids across the Mexican border." What a "beat" that cop has!

Although we have never seen him in pictures or other theatricals, we understand that the WPA Federal Music Project in New York has on its roles one Paul Wittgenstein, who, with only one hand, is said to be quite somewhat of a concert pianist. Maurice Ravel, for one, has composed some piano works for Wittgenstein. "Concerto for Left Hand" is one number.

Add to the long line of "escort services," "dog food services," "animal walking services" and the like, a brand new service for autograph hounds, in New York.

The new service calls itself Celebrity Service, and for a fee tells clients where visiting Hollywoodites and other celebrities may be found at a certain hour, in a certain restaurant, theatre, hotel lobby, etc. After office hours Celebrity has arranged with the Telephone Answering Service to handle night calls. A couple of telephone calls to clients and the hordes start sweeping down at the celebrity's table like Kansas locusts.

Sailing for London to appear in "French Without Tears," British-born Hollywood film actor Ray Milland last Saturday was telling ship news reporters about his days as a dashing member of the King's new guard, the British Household Cavaliers, when one newswriter interrupted to ask how the soldiers get those gorgeous red horsehair plumes worn atop their gold helmets. The reporter couldn't savvy bright red horses. Milland explained that they dye the horses.

Kyle Crichton, writing about Warner Brothers' John Garfield (born Jules Garfinkle on New York's Rivington Street), tells about the night the actor burst into the room of Lee Strasbourg, the director. "From now on," he shouted ecstatically, "I'm going to read poetry. To me poetry is tantamount."

AND now that the Spanish War is over—or is it?—the story can be told about little Gloria Sileo, eleven-year-old daughter of Jimmy Sileo, still photographer for many of the film companies in New York. Much of his work appears in the pictorial pages of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Gloria acted as "postoffice" in New York for Spanish soldiers for mail to be sent by them from their side of battle to friends and relatives on the other side. Naturally the mail could not go direct.

Gloria was caught up in the web of war two years ago while on a visit to friends in Santander, Spain. She had spent long hours on the beach with Carmina, 14, and Tino, 16, the children of her hosts.

But within a few weeks Tino disappeared and began drilling in a nearby town, war became general, Gloria was rushed to the S. S. Cayuga and eventually returned to America.

Then came a letter from Tino, who had been wounded by shrapnel and made a captain, though only 18. He said his comrade in arms, little Tete, had not heard from his mother for a year and would Gloria please try to find out. She did.

Later, heartened by the first success, he suggested that Annibal had not heard from his mother and sister in Asturias for two and a half years. So the Sileo child wrote but received no answer. Then she corresponded with Tino's mother, asking that she find some one who had acquaintances in Asturias and thus get an answer for Annabal.

In two months she learned that Annabal's mother and sister had been killed in an air raid. Gloria wept, but she sent the message, and Tino replied that Annibal "took it like a soldier."

Louis Sobol on Broadway tells how Benjamin DeCasseres wants to change the name of Broadway to Great Jefferson Street. Must be Jim Farley's Democratic influence on Ben.

Anyway, if the idea was really carried out we can see a pretty state of affairs. Picture such song titles as, "Give My Regards to Great Jefferson Street?" Or "The Voice of Gr. Jefferson Street," "Your Great Jefferson Street and Mine," "There's a Broken Heart for Every Light on Great Jef. Street."

Over in the New York Mecca Building offices of J. A. Tanney, head of S.O.S. Theatre Supply Corporation, the other day sat one Dr. Emanuel Klaften, relating stories of the nine months he just spent in a Nazi concentration camp at Dachau. One of Vienna's leading gynecologists, Dr. Klaften was finally rescued through the efforts of Mr. Tanney.

The Nazis became incensed at Dr. Klaften when he was the only delegate invited from greater Germany to the International Gynecological convention in Amsterdam. The Nazis got so sore that they pulled the Doctor right out of Mariahoff hospital in Vienna and threw him into the "jug," refusing even to allow word of his incarceration to reach his wife. She hadn't had a word from or about him through the nine months.

"Jesse James" No Excuse to Kidnap Exhibitor—Jenkins

Neligh, Nebraska

DEAR HERALD:

We noticed that a good friend of ours, who is making a tour of the world, and who is editor of one of our daily papers, writes a letter for his paper and dates it from Pago Pago, wherever that is, and among other things he says, "I am writing this Saturday evening and tomorrow morning it will be Monday." Those of you who are good at figuring out longitude can work on this for a while, but we fear that our friend Gene has been imbibing too freely of that sleeping compound made from Illinois corn at Peoria.

We don't know just where Pago Pago is but we do know where Pokagon, Michigan, is, for it was between there and Ring Lardner's town of Niles that we brought the state into such national prominence some years back. We'll betcha the deep sea fishing is good around Pago Pago or Gene wouldn't be there.

According to an announcement over the radio, Oscar Johnson, who owns and operates two theatres in Falls City, Nebraska, was robbed by highjackers, then taken over the line into Kansas and released. The report said he had just run "Jesse James." If it isn't a gag it's a case for the federal officers. This would be the third time Oscar has been robbed and we hope it is a case of "three times and out."

It's an easy thing for someone to tell us not to worry, and we presume you have all been told the same thing, but how to stop it is the thing. Some worry for fear it will not rain, others for fear it will rain, some worry because of poor receipts at the show and others worry for fear the hogs will get out and root up the onions, but we worry because of our inability to go and visit you exhibitors as once we did. Nevertheless—

"When weariness with life my spirit fills
And deep disgust consumes me with my lot,
I draw some store of comfort
From the ills I haven't got."

Doesn't it seem a little peculiar the different interpretations people put on the meaning of "liberty?" To us liberty means one's right to do as he pleases so long as it doesn't interfere with the rights of others or the laws under which he lives.

According to the press, the mayor of one of our large cities recently tried to ban some old people from trying to make an honest living by carrying banners advertising legitimate businesses, and then permitting an army to march down the streets of the city in Nazi uniforms and give the "Heil Hitler" salute. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander so long as the gander marches under the Stars and Stripes. But then, maybe we don't know anything about it.

In our long term of years rambling over these wide open spaces, we doubt if we have ever seen conditions more favorable than at this time. We have had two excellent snows which have melted and put the ground in excellent condition for spring seeding. Barring a few unforeseen things such as drouth, grasshoppers and hail, it is our guess that this state will have reason to expect one of its largest crops.

Sally Fisher, in charge of the New York office of New Jersey Allied, has resigned. She held the post for several years. She now is secretary in the office of Eastern Pennsylvania Allied in Philadelphia, of which Sidney Samuelson is business manager.

Sack-Micheaux Deal

Sack Amusement Enterprises, operating out of Dallas in the South and West, has renewed its contract for exclusive distribution in those territories, with Oscar Micheaux, producer of Negro-cast pictures.

Columbia's "Tree of Liberty," which treats of this country's early struggles for liberty, will have portrayals of more than threescore notable Americans, including Washington, Jefferson, Hamilton, Burr, Patrick Henry, Madison, Lafayette and the Adamses. Frank Lloyd will produce and direct the film.

Reelect Famous Canadian Officers

At a meeting of Famous Players Canadian Corporation in Toronto this week N. L. Nathanson was reelected president and J. J. Fitzgibbons was reelected vice-president. Announcement was made that all directors of 1938 had been renamed to the board and that no changes in policy or management of the company had been adopted. Payment of 25 cents per common share as the initial dividend for this year was indicated at the annual meeting.

Shulgold with GN

Max Shulgold has been named Grand National exchange manager in Pittsburgh, succeeding Charles Dortic, who has joined the Warner Brothers sales force, covering West Virginia in place of Maurice Kincler, resigned.

Iz Weiner, formerly Omaha branch manager of Columbia, has joined Universal there.

Paramount Stockholders' Suit Transferred to Federal Court

Paramount's petition to remove the $25,000,000 minority stockholders' suit from the New York supreme court to the United States district court, southern district, was approved this week. Paramount plans to file its answer or an application to dismiss the action in 10 days.

Joseph Nemerov, attorney for the plaintiffs, said that the primary purpose of the suit is to effect a change of management and stated that his clients are preparing to stage a proxy fight at the annual stockholders' meeting in June.

Distributors Named In Ohio Petition

A petition was filed in Franklin County court of appeals, in Columbus, Saturday, by John V. Bostwick, as a taxpayer, against Ohio film distributors, in which the State Tax Commission's authority to exempt film rentals from sales tax is challenged. The complainant objects to the commission's regulation that sales tax shall not be collected where the right to use personal property is conferred by payment of an admission charge. "Rental of items of tangible property and retail sales of such items are the basis for collection of tax," the petition recites.

Distributors named are: Big Feature Rights, Columbia, Loew's, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Gaumont-British, Grand National, Monogram, RKO, Republic, Twentieth Century-Fox, First National, Universal, United Artists, Warner Brothers and Vitagraph, all of Cincinnati, and Paramount, of Cleveland. An alternative writ of mandamus, answerable May 20th, was granted by the court.

Tobis Files French Suit

Tobis has filed suit in Paris against Charles Chaplin and United Artists charging that "Modern Times" infringes the Tobis film, "A Nous La Liberte," according to notices served in New York this week on Schwartz and Frohlich, Mr. Chaplin's counsel. The French action is believed to be a duplicate of the suit filed by Tobis in New York some time ago. The French action seeks an injunction, accounting and judgment of 1,000,000 francs.

Sees Fall Trial

Max D. Steuer, trial counsel for minority stockholders of Radio Corporation of America, said this week that the trial of the stockholders' suit brought against RCA, its officers and directors, American Telephone and Telegraph, Westinghouse, and General Electric, probably will be held in the fall. Mr. Steuer said a large number of examinations before trial of officers of the defendants will be necessary in preparation of the suit, and that these examinations are already under way.

Goldwyn Answers Suit

Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., and Samuel Goldwyn have filed answers in the United States district court to the suit brought against them, Olive Higgins Prouty, author of "Stella Dallas"; Air Features, Inc., and Selwyn and Company, Inc., by National Broadcasting Company, Blackett-Sample-Hummert, Inc., and the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company.

Affirm Suit Dismissal

The United States circuit court of appeals in New York this week handed down an opinion affirming the dismissal of a suit of Richard Barry against United Artists Corporation, United Artists Theatres Circuit, Inc., Howard Hughes and The Caddo Company, Inc., charging plagiarism of Mr. Barry's play, "Breaking Faith of an Insurgent," in the film "Hell's Angels."

Patent Suit Is Filed

A suit charging infringement of "a film processing device" patented in March, 1939, has been filed in the United States district court by Fink-Roseleve Company, Inc., against the Camera House, Inc. Plaintiff asked for an injunction, accounting of profits and judgment for damages, describing its patent as a "device for developing, fixing and treating lengths of photographic film."

Seeks to Halt "Juarez"

Miguel C. Torres, Spanish writer-producer, has filed an amended complaint in his $1,000,000 damage suit against Warner Brothers charging that "Juarez" was partly lifted from "Maximilian and Carlotta," which he produced in 1933 in Spanish and last year in English. He seeks a restraint order on release of "Juarez."

Imperial Distributing Corporation has registered a change of name at Albany, N. Y., with the company becoming Cardinal Pictures, Inc.

Michigan Co-operative Named in Detroit Suit

A suit has been filed by the Palmer Park theatre, Detroit, owned by Ray Schreiber, in Wayne County circuit court, against Co-operative Theatres of Michigan. Mr. Schreiber charges that Co-operative Theatres is "an illegal combination in restraint of trade in violation of laws of the state" and that it "assumes dictatorial powers over its members, particularly this plaintiff, contracting for and assigning film contrary to its wishes."

The suit asks that the Michigan organization be restrained from such "booking," asks return of $250 paid in for Co-operative stock, and asks that the Palmer Park be released from its "illegal" contract with the organization.

Gannett Newspapers Use Einfeld Ad Comment

The opinions of S. Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Brothers, on the value of newspaper advertising to the advancement of motion pictures, received further publicity when the Frank Gannett chain of 15 newspapers in New York state and Connecticut used Mr. Einfeld's remarks in a series of advertisements.

Mr. Einfeld's comment, used in the ad and delivered at the Warner sales convention, follows, in part:

"The experience of our company over a long period of years has satisfied us that newspapers are the most valuable medium for motion picture advertising. As a result of this knowledge, 98 per cent of our 1939-40 advertising budget, the largest in our history, will be invested in newspaper space."

The ad copy starts with scenes from current Warner pictures and praise of the industry, then cites Warners' use of newspaper advertising. Papers publishing the advertisements were:

ERPI Dedicates New Fair Sound System

Electrical Research Products, theatre equipment subsidiary of the Western Electric Company, on Tuesday unveiled what is termed "the largest sound system ever built" at the New York World's Fair, before an attending crowd of about 200 executives of ERPI, WE, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and various film trade paper men.

The system took two years to build, cost $250,000, and is part of the exhibit and "voice" of the diorama in the General Motors Highway and Horizon exhibit portraying the country's cities and transportation highways as they will be in 1960.

Erpi engineers designed the system, and it was built at the Kearney, New Jersey plant of Western Electric. A special Eastman 16 mm film, running at a speed of 37 feet per minute, carries the soundtrack.

A two-reel sound film, "New York World's Fair 1939," promoting the Fair, has been offered without charge to all non-theatrical situations.

INDUSTRY IN BRITAIN EXCITED OVER RAPID GROWTH OF TELEVISION

Monopoly and Control by BBC Vital Topics of Discussion as Ostrer Presses Fight to Open Field for Competition

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The increasing conviction that television as an entertainment force is here, even if in as yet infantile measure, has provoked a fluttering of dovecotes and a nodding of heads, unparalleled since the gestative stages of the current Films Act. Every section of the industry has turned its urgent attentions to the activities of the British Broadcasting Corporation on the one hand and Isidore Ostrer on the other.

Conferences Continue

Joint conferences between renters and exhibitors will continue with cross table talks with the Government's television advisory committee. A united trade policy is aimed at.

The most constant and vital consideration at the moment is that of monopoly and the BBC control of television broadcasting. The unremitting and almost lone battle which Isidore Ostrer of Baird television and Gaumont British is fighting to break it down, is a battle which holds the whole future relationship of television to the picture theatre. Already there are signs of weakening on the part of the BBC.

The immediate danger, to which exhibitors and distributors are alive, is that of exploitation in the form of exorbitant fees by the promoters of events—sporting and otherwise—which are likely to form subjects for television. Already fees out of all proportion to the circumstances have been asked and paid. It is unofficially reported that for one recent event televised, promoters asked £200-£300 ($1,000 to $1,500) per theatre according to capacity.

Exhibitors also fear that the circuits may obtain a virtual monopoly. The CEA has not yet altered its policy of advising exhibitors not to sign contracts until headquarters have given official approval.

Opposes Diffusion

The BBC remains adamant in its protests against diffusion of its broadcasts without permission, and against use of the ether waves by other interests.

The situation has been changed significantly by arrangements made between Isidore Ostrer and the promoters of outside sporting events, whereby Baird and GB paid for the rights to diffuse television broadcasts.

Mr. Ostrer's contention is that the need has already risen for the setting up of an independent entertainment service, a need cited also by the Scophony interests. The broadcast of the Boat Race was of indifferent technical and entertainment quality.

Alarmed by Use of Films

Exhibitors are increasingly concerned at the use of films, notably newsreels and shorts, in the BBC's broadcasts. They share, too, the K.R.S. concern at the spread of home television, although an estimate is that the number of television sets in use in Britain does not exceed 8,000. To a great extent this figure is limited by the restriction also of television transmission to an area within 50 or 60 mile radius of London. Geographical limits notwithstanding, television is now within the range of 25 per cent of Great Britain's population. Birmingham is called the likely spot for the next development.

TECHNICIANS DEMAND INCREASES IN QUOTA

The Association of Cine Technicians at its annual conference Sunday demanded increases in the quota and abolition of the triple quota clauses in the Films Act.

The conferees favorably discussed the idea of a film bank, with provisional safeguards for financial expenditure and personnel. The secrecy of the Film Council was deplored and periodical reports were demanded.

The Films Act was attacked by Anthony Asquith, president, claiming it was no solution to force foreign companies to make or acquire weak films. He said that of 103 films registered in the first year of the Act, only 25 were made by British interests.

On the estimate of Isidore Ostrer, if picture houses are not allowed to diffuse and screen television broadcasts, they will lose approximately £12,000,000 a year in admissions.

Meanwhile, Mr. Ostrer continues installations at his major London theatres. Scophony is going into the Monseigneur houses. The Odeon, Leicester Square, is likely to join the battle with a Scophony presentation of the Derby. An early working agreement of Odeon-GB with Baird-Scophony is not unlikely.

Fixed Price Problem

Fears felt in certain exhibitor circles that the lead of the London County Council in establishing a seat price rule and management conditions would be followed in other districts is rapidly finding its justification. It is clear that the action of the London County Council has been taken as a precedent.

At Douglas, Isle of Man, at Croydon and elsewhere, the threat has already loomed over the exhibitor horizon. The likelihood that Swansea, key center of the South Wales area, would follow suit, has now become a certainty, with the establishment by the Watch Committee of conditions similar to those obtaining in London. West Ham, major London borough on the London outskirts, threatens also to adopt the rule. Middlesex, major county on the outskirts of London, has followed suit. The threat to set up seat price rules similar to those in London will, with the issue of licenses in November, become a fait accompli.

Exhibitors' Criticism

These developments have given rise to sharp exhibitor criticism within the CEA that the national body is neglecting to tackle the matter on a national basis.

It is felt by many that the London CEA, in the interest of exhibitors as a whole, or at least in their own interest, should have challenged the London County Council in the high courts.

Meanwhile, London exhibitors have retained their long established harmonious relations with the Council.

Exports of exposed positive film increased slightly to 2,255,593 feet ($79,530) in February this year, against 2,237,785 feet ($71,785) in February last year and 1,695,934 feet ($45,475) in 1937.

For the first two months of the year footage exported totalled 4,188,542 feet as compared with 4,111,937 feet last year and 3,659,501 feet the year before.

Imports of exposed film in February this year was 1,785,530 feet ($80,220) against 1,459,786 feet ($53,355) last year and 1,998,442 ($94,800) in 1937.

Evidence that the London County Council, in reciprocity for the CEA'S abandonment of litigation, intends to safeguard the exhibitor citadel, within limits, is forthcoming from the forceful way with which they handled recently the case of a complainant member of the public who demanded action against an Islington cinema because he had been kept standing in the sixpenny queue whilst there were two seats vacant. The entertainment committee rejected his application but granted him the right to appeal to the full Council. Reginald Stamp, chairman of the Committee and "Big Bad Wolf" of the recent seat price squabble, successfully petitioned the County Council to reject the appeal.

London exhibitors now find a bitter pill presented for swallowing in the form of an announcement by the Middlesex County Council that they are going to adopt the rule in the next licensing year.

Louis Pacent Has "High Fidelity" Radio

The Pacent Engineering Laboratories of New York, of which Louis Gerard Pacent, sound pioneer, is executive, have introduced on the radio market a new receiver, designed for "high fidelity" reception.

The set uses a "tuned radio frequency" circuit, as opposed to the superheterodyne circuits characteristic of radios in recent years. It also has an exceptionally large and sensitive speaker. It is designed for precision selection and for wide frequency range which, since the inception in the New York area of "high fidelity" stations and the growth of symphonic broadcasts from major network stations, have been in demand among patrons of classic music.

Mr. Pacent was active in wireless and radio communication during and immediately after the World War. He entered the talking picture equipment field in 1928, and in 1929 he introduced a sound-on-film system.

Portable Sound Equipment Designed by ERPI and MGM

A "super-portable" sound recording channel for location work which weighs 84 per cent less than equipment now in use has been designed by Electrical Research Products, Inc., in collaboration with the sound department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

In contrast with earlier "location" equipment, which was housed in nine separate cases and weighed 900 pounds complete, the two units of the new apparatus weigh only 150 pounds, Erpi said.

AUSTRALIAN CENSOR SEES MORAL IMPROVEMENT IN U. S. PICTURES

However, O'Reilly in Report Says That Otherwise 1938 Was a "Barren" and "Uneventful" Period in Industry

by LIN ENDEAN
in Sidney

While taking cognizance of the improvement of the moral quality of screen fare and particularly as it pertains to product from the United States, the censor report, drawn by W. Creswell O'Reilly, chief Australian film censor, and just released by the Government, otherwise found 1938 to be "barren and uneventful."

The report is notable for its "constructive advice." In commenting upon "the waning interest of the public" in motion picture entertainment, Mr. O'Reilly gives a vigorous pointer by referring to the progress of radio, television and other forms of competitive entertainment, expressing the belief that "the greatest hope for the future seems to lie in the operation of revivifying and rejuvenation influences within the trade itself."

Mr. O'Reilly and his associates on the censor board, Lieutent Colonel F. J. Hurley, Mrs. G. D. J. Hansen and Major General I. G. Mackey, appeal censor, have been reappointed.

Without Imagination, He Says

"Producers seem satisfied," the report says, in an impression of U. S. films that "from the aspect of general quality, technical achievement and entertainment value, 1938 has been barren and uneventful," "to turn out average (and in many cases, less than average) quality pictures without exerting much initiative or imagination in story sources or film treatment."

American producers will undoubtedly question Mr. O'Reilly's opinion of a lack of initiative, in his summary of the year's product, but there is balm for the hurt in the fact that of the 467 features imported, the Hollywood studios were represented by 403. England's total was 61, and from the Continental studios there were just three. Of the total number, from all sources, only 10 features were rejected, while cuts were necessary in 10.3 per cent of the films approved for exhibition. The latter percentage is consistent with the regular decrease maintained since 1934, when the percentage was 38.45.

"This is mainly due," the report states, "to the improvement, from the censorship point of view, in American films. While the volume of work done by the censorship—as indicated by the number of films screened—increases year by year, the cases in which action has to be taken, by way of elimination or rejection, progressively decrease. This seems to me the experience of censorship bodies in the English-speaking countries of the world."

Two "Continentals" Rejected

Mr. O'Reilly said that three Continental features had been submitted for judgment, and of these two were rejected. "This," he comments, "is not an encouraging augury for the movement, revived from time to time, for the showing of Continental films for 'cultural' purposes. It should be realized that, if the ideas and incidents depicted upon the screen are to be taken as the criterion, the moral standards of Continental countries vary considerably from those of English-speaking countries."

The importation of American-produced features in 1938 increased by six over the total of 1937, while those from England decreased by 42. Thus, with its contribution of 403 films, an average of nearly eight per week, American product is the mainstay of the industry by a wide margin, and contrasts strongly with England's representation of 61, averaging just over one feature per week. Embracing features and shorts, American product comprised 70.5 per cent of all footage imported during the year.

WILSON TO RESIGN AUSTRALIAN POST

Sir Victor Wilson, president of the Motion Pictures Distributors Association of Australia since its inception 13 years ago, has resigned and will leave office June 30. Before accepting the MPDA post Sir Victor was prominent in Australian state, federal and civic politics and was interested in several commercial projects in the Commonwealth.

Inability of the MPDA to reach agreement with exhibitors within the rigid framework of the organization on the several points on which dissension has been rife has been given as one of the reasons for Sir Victor's resignation. His successor has not been named although the names of several persons prominent in the industry in Australia have been mentioned.

Six Australian-made features were exported and, in this respect, the Chief Censor stated: "Notwithstanding the existence of Australian films quota legislation in New South Wales and Victoria, designed to encourage the production of local films, the state of Australian production, as disclosed by export figures, is disappointing. For the five years, 1928-32, inclusive, the average was 5.4; and from 1933 to 1937 it was 6, which was the number exported for 1938.

"News-items made in Australia maintain their high standard, and their projection on the screens of the world appears to be on the increase. The propaganda value of these films can hardly be overestimated.

"While technical improvements—such as an increased number of color subjects, and the utilization of some form of third-dimensional photography—may capture the waning interest of the public, the greatest hope for the future seems to lie in the operation of revivifying and rejuvenation influences within the trade itself."

In the 16mm film field, American subjects took a huge lift over the figures for 1937, the total being 1,010 compared with 346. England's contribution dropped off from 641 in 1937 to 580 last year. "There is an increasing appreciation of the value of sub-standard films for advertising, educational, documentary and religious purposes," the report emphasized.

Hoyts Circuit's Own "Quiz"

When local distributors did not, as a body, come in on a proposal to organize a nationwide "Quiz" campaign, along the lines of America's recent "Movies Are Your Best Entertainment" drive, Hoyts circuit took the initiative and set in motion a "Quiz" through its own theatres. Being handled as an individual drive in each state, the initial effort in Victoria has been called phenomenally successful. In its second month the "Quiz" carried awards valued at $5,000. Though the campaign was launched in the most unfavorable circumstances—a record heat-wave and a depressed public mental state owing to a tragic toll by bushfires throughout the state—box-offices immediately responded and takings have been maintained at top levels all through. The campaign will cover three months in Victoria and then will be launched in New South Wales and other states.

Independent exhibitors feared the drive would carve into their takings and a move was made to halt Hoyts' "Quiz," on the argument that the awards were tantamount to gifts and consequently constituted a breach of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association rules. The contention was endorsed after a preliminary discussion by the association, but it was decided that no action be taken. Some members said the "Quiz" should have been operated as a general industry affair, but as Hoyts stepped in first they decided to grin and bear it.

With the U. S. effort as a guide, the committee handling it here avoided difficulties encountered in America.

Music Tax Raise Threatened

Motion picture interests and radio network operators, including the A-class stations controlled by the federal government, are up in arms against proposed increases in the fees levied by the Australian Performing Right Association. In the case of exhibitors the charges are fixed by arbitration, but in the last few months APRA has made known its dissatisfaction with ruling schedules, this preliminary to a request for an increase, being met by a protest upon the part of official exhibitor bodies, who instead of a lift contend that a 50 per cent cut is due in the fees.

Another aspect of the musical levy has been raised, in a demand by a gramophone group for payment for the use of records, claiming their right because of the use of certain patents involved in the making of discs for non-synchronized music. As the group concerned has a monopoly control of records distributed locally, exhibitors were faced with the option of either paying up or desisting to use the waxes. While certain managements have met the bill, a number have stood out, and both cinema and radio interests are closely watching an experiment with license-free records by the Australian Record Company, recently formed to press matrices obtained from the English musical houses of Bosworth and Boosey and Hawkes. This product will go on the market license free, at a lower price than the protected records. A wide range of popular numbers is listed.

Concerns Music Copyright

On the surface it seems that the APRA fee should embrace all musical angles, but that association does not see it that way, leaving the record charge purely a question to be decided between exhibitors and the owners of the mechanical patent upon which the charge is made. "Our concern is solely in the musical copyright," the association says.

Naturally, in this circumstance it is problematical just where levies will end. With all the various patents involved in the mechanical side of film presentation today there is no telling from what quarter payment requests may be made.

Now is the period of sailings and consultations in New York. The heavy budget of legislation, vitally affecting the accepted routine of trading, that has been introduced of late by the Australian and New Zealand governments, provides a wealth of material to keep the local leaders busy in conference with the men of New York headquarters.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

LET US LIVE: Henry Fonda, Ralph Bellamy, Maureen O'Sullivan—It's all Columbia claims for it. Played March 31-April 1.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

TEXAS STAMPEDE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—A good little western but nothing outstanding. Got by nicely. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WESTBOUND MAIL: Charles Starrett, Rosalind Keith—Played this on a double and a nice western all the way through. The print we received was not so hot. Played March 24-25.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

First National

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End Kids"—Here is tops in anybody's product. Excellent but the gruesome ending did not do the box office much good. O'Brien's role did not do him any harm, and Cagney was excellent. Running time, 97 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY MUSKETEERS: Margaret Lindsay, Marie Wilson, Ann Sheridan, John Litel, Janet Chapman—A gangster picture which would have drawn big crowds if advertised on that line. Pleased everyone. Ann Sheridan sure is tops. Running time, 62 minutes. Played April 3-4.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

GIRLS ON PROBATION: Ronald Reagan, Jane Bryan—One of the kind that you can get along without but will do all right on your weekend double bill. You won't hear any praise or squawks.. Just a program picture.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

GOING PLACES: Dick Powell, Anita Louise, Allen Jenkins—Plenty good and it satisfied on a bargain night. Was good enough for my best playing time but made a mistake by letting it get old. Story has been done before but that don't matter when the finished product is as good as this is. Play it and cash in.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HEART OF THE NORTH: Dick Foran, Gale Page, Allen Jenkins, Gloria Dickson, Janet Chapman—Very good. The scenes and color beautiful. Another hit from Warners. Keep the good work up. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HEART OF THE NORTH: Dick Foran, Gale Page, Gloria Dickson, Janet Chapman, Allen Jenkins—One of the grandest pictures we have ever had the privilege of playing of its type. Played to above average business during Lent. Play it by all means. Our people are continually asking for Dick Foran in western roles.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MY BILL: Kay Francis, John Litel, Anita Louise, Bonita Granville, Dickie Moore—Here is a honey and one you can go to town with. By all means give it your best playing time. A business builder. Played March 22-23.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, May Robson, Roland Young—Good picture with the guts cut out of it. However, got by nicely and pleased generally. Not big. Running time, 83 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Rex Ingram, Walter Connolly, Lynne Carver—A small town natural if there ever was one. Just tops in any house. Cannot praise it enough. Ingram, without a doubt, is the finest actor in the picture, with Walter Connolly and Rooney sharing second honors. There is no need of any exploitation as this is a natural. Running time, 92 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

Rockefeller Center, New York

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Walter Connolly, Rex Ingram, Lynne Carver, William Frawley—Evidently this story of Mark Twain will live into the ages. It is back again and welcome, too. You will think that you are running an old folks home when you see who comes. "King" and "Duke" are knockouts. However, there are the young generation that have come up since it was made before that will go for it in a big way.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BLOCKHEADS: Laurel and Hardy, Patricia Ellis, Billy Gilbert—This comedy has its moments, and when it got funny there were plenty of good old belly laughs. Sorry to see this team split up because they have made some good comedies. Swell for your weekend double bill and I'd say play it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BOYS TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney, Henry Hull—We brought this back during Lent for the second showing and enjoyed above normal business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CHRISTMAS CAROL, THE: Reginald Owen, Terry Kilburn, Lynne Carver, Gene Lockhart, Kathleen Lockart—Better wait till Christmas on this one. Good picture but didn't get film rental here. Played April 1.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

FAST AND LOOSE: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—Should have been named "Loose and Foolish." You know what to do. Running time, 76 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FAST AND LOOSE: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—A very good picture that did average or better. Worth a playdate and we had it hot, right on our best time. Pleased our patrons and that is what counts with us. A lot better than most of Metro's big pictures and allocated in a low bracket.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Una Merkel, Kent Taylor, Ann Rutherford, Alan Marshal, Mary Howard, Jessie Ralph, Buddy Ibsen—Action, drama, romance and comedy are blended in seventy-three minutes of swell entertainment. Florence Rice, Ann Rutherford, Mary Howard and my favorite, Una Merkel, form a fine quartet of nurses, while Jessie Ralph and Buddy Ebsen furnish the comedy. The sequences at the railroad wreck are tops in thrills. Just a little depressing in places, especially the death of Mary Howard, but there is enough comedy to overbalance that. This picture grossed more than double what "Sweethearts" did and pleased much better. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 24-26.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns and Gracie Allen—An excellent musical comedy that held our Sunday business up and pleased. Running time, 84 minutes. Played April 9-11.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Very good and pleased better than average business. Gracie Allen just kinda stole the show but this Eleanor has plenty of what it takes and we had them back to see it again. Rental plenty high but if you can buy it right, play it, because it will do business. Played April 2-4.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres, Original Ice Follies Cast—A perfect picture in all respects. There is enough plot to make it plausible and enough extravaganza to make it beautiful. Let no one tell you it is not good. Running time, 82 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres, Original Ice Follies Cast—Good picture with some wonderful skating scenes in color but it failed to draw. Guess Joan Crawford is dead at the box office. Played April 5-6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939, THE: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres, Original Ice Follies Cast —It is short on story and the dialogue certainly will take no medals for brightness. In fact, some of it was particularly dumb. Furthermore Crawford is not the draw she was in the past and this one will not help her any. But, the Ice Follies are something to see. It is tops in any language. Precision, grace, spectacle, all are there. Nothing has equaled it on the screen. Metro should have picked a skating star for the lead. Crawford did not skate a slide. There was plenty of pulchritude in the skating ballet.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Clark Gable, Norma Shearer, Edward Arnold, Joseph Schildkraut, Burgess Meredith, Charles Coburn—If you haven't played this monstrosity, you are plenty lucky. Absolutely no good for any small town and the title fits any exhibitor who is idiot enough to play it and he is delighted when it is over. Had "Men of Steel" with it and will say that this program takes the cake for being about the worst we've run in quite some time.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MARIE ANTOINETTE: Norma Shearer, Tyrone Power, Robert Morley, John Barrymore, Anita Louise, Joseph Schildkraut, Gladys George—Wouldn't heed advice of others but played it and took an awful loss. More walkouts than all year combined. Too long. Too high. Too gruesome for entertainment. Cruel history no entertainment value here.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

PORT OF SEVEN SEAS: Wallace Beery, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan, John Beal—Although we had heard adverse criticism regarding the merits of this picture, we fail to agree, as our box office soared on Good Friday, where we have 80 per cent Catholic population.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Barton MacLane, Helen Broderick, Charley Grapewin—Leo's gift to the ladies, Robert Taylor, and Wallace Beery, popular two fisted hero of the men, are teamed together in a grand picture of "Befo' the War" days. Florence Rice gives a good performance but in my opinion Helen Broderick and Charley Grapewin are the real stars. The fox hunt, the race between the stage coach and the railroad and the slave running furnish plenty of thrills. In the final sequence "Ferdinand the Bull" holds the center of the stage or rather the railroad track in a manner that brought down the house. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 31-April 2.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Nelson Eddy, Jeanette MacDonald, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan, Mischa Auer—We have never been able to sell this pair. Our town is too small and the rural patronage don't seem to take to them. Had a bad break in weather that hurt some but, at that, this did as much as any they have made. Worth running but it won't make any small town a lot of money regardless of what Metro tells you.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Monogram

CONVICT'S CODE: Robert Kent, Anne Nagel, Sidney Blackmer—Better than most of the majors' gangster, racket, prison pictures at a decent rental, too. Another rare thing.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

SUN DOWN ON THE PRAIRIE: Tex Ritter—Pretty good western. Too much singing. I don't think patrons care for much singing in a western picture. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

UNDERCOVER AGENT: Russell Gleason, Shirley Deane—Postal inspector rounds up bogus sweepstakes ticket racketeers. No drawing power. Put it on your "must shelve list." Running time, 54 minutes. Played April 9.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

WHERE THE BUFFALO ROAM: Tex Ritter, Dorothy Short—A very good western. Was well received. Tex Ritter is coming to the top fast. Running time, 59 minutes. Played April 1.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

Paramount

BOY TROUBLE: Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland—Nice little comedy that went over OK. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

CAFE SOCIETY: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Shirley Ross—A light weight comedy which failed to draw. Played April 2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FRONTIERSMAN, THE: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—Good western. All his pictures are good. Running time, 69 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

IF I WERE KING: Ronald Colman, Frances Dee, Basil Rathbone, Ellen Drew—Patrons do not care for this style of pictures. However, the picture was good. Colman and Rathbone did fine acting. Business fair. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 25-26.—Mrs. B. Lovell, Pardeeville, Wis. Small town patronage.

KING OF CHINATOWN: Anna May Wong, Akim Tamiroff—Just another gangster picture which failed to draw. Played April 3-4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MEN WITH WINGS: Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Louise Campbell—Excellent picture. Stunt flying was marvelous. Pleased almost 100 per cent. Business above average. Picture has very good drawing power. Running time, 105 minutes. Played April 1-2.—Mrs. B. Lovell, Lovell Theatre, Pardeeville, Wis. Small town patronage.

MEN WITH WINGS: Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Louise Campbell—Excellent picture in every way but not much of a drawing card at the box office. I can't understand why a good picture like "Men With Wings" should not do better than it did.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MEN WITH WINGS: Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Louise Campbell, Andy Devine—Customers liked it. All-color history of aviation. Fine production. Not as strong at the box office as I hoped it would be. Running time, 105 minutes. Played March 5-6.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre, Stanwood, Wash. Small town patronage.

MURDER GOES TO COLLEGE: Roscoe Karns, Marsha Hunt, Lynne Overman, Larry Crabbe—Plenty of comedy and mystery here. Will make your patrons rave if double billed and suggest you play it as such. Stars names are no draw with us. Running time, 71 minutes. Played April 5-6.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

MYSTERIOUS RIDER, THE: Russell Hayden, Weldon Heyburn, Charlotte Fields—Good Zane Grey western that drew a little extra business. Running time, 59 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PERSONS IN HIDING: Lynne Overman, Patricia Morison—Only fair. Too draggy in spots. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PERSONS IN HIDING: Lynne Overman, Patricia Morison—Good programmer. Stand alone in small spots: good second half in big town. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

RENEGADE TRAIL: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—This one is just a little mild for the average action western customers but will be enjoyed nevertheless. Running time, 56 minutes. Played April 7-8.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Tito Guizar—Very good program picture. One of those pictures almost everyone likes. Full of entertainment all the way through. Dorothy Lamour at her best; story and direction good. I guess Paramount can make good pictures. Running time, 86 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SONS OF THE LEGION: Donald O'Connor, Billy Lee, William Frawley, Lynne Overman, Elizabeth Patterson—A good picture for the children and the Legion. The trouble the Legion don't support pictures of this kind the way they should.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

THANKS FOR THE MEMORY: Shirley Ross, Bob Hope, Charles Butterworth—Pretty good. It seems as if our patrons don't care for these particular stars. Running time, 79 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

AFFAIRS OF CAPPY RICKS, THE: Walter Brennan, Mary Brian, Lyle Talbot—Double billed this and pleased. Not strong enough for a single. Played April 3-4.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

FIGHTING THOROUGHBREDS: Ralph Byrd, Mary Carlisle, Robert Allen—Small action picture with weak cast which failed to draw. Played April 7-8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MEXICALI ROSE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—As usual plenty good. Just the kind my patrons don't mind paying to see. Played March 30-31.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

PRAIRIE MOON: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Shirley Deane—After hearing about the drawing power of this star we thought his westerns would be knockouts but my patrons have never given him a very big tumble. Plenty of good singing and some action but so far as we are concerned he is just another western star with a price on his pictures.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM OF THE SADDLE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—An excellent western that drew less than average business. Smiley Burnette again is the whole show. Running time, 58 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SHINE ON HARVEST MOON: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Lulu Belle and Scotty—Advertised Lulu Belle and Scotty in a big way and drew in some extra business but this western was good enough and this boy Rogers is doing all right with us.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SPRINGTIME IN THE ROCKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Polly Rowles—Did not do the business I expected. Western pictures not so hot in this community. These features are too short for a good story as we don't run double bills. Can't say I can recommend them for single bill entertainment. Running six reels. Play April 1.—Arthur L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

RKO Radio

I'M FROM THE CITY: Joe Penner, Kay Sutton—A good Saturday night show here. Very, very poor paper on it too.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

MAN TO REMEMBER, A: Anne Shirley, Lee Bowman, Edward Ellis—Here is an outstanding small town picture, everyone raved about it. Did better than I expected at the box office. Running time, 79 minutes. Played, February 10-11.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre, Stanwood, Wash. Small town patronage.

MAN TO REMEMBER, A: Edward Ellis, Anne Shirley, Lee Bowman—Good picture but a flop at the box office. Running time, 80 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

NEXT TIME I MARRY: Lucille Ball, James Ellison—Nice little comedy that went over good on a double bill. Running time, 62 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ROOM SERVICE: Marx Brothers, Lucille Ball, Ann Miller, Frank Albertson—Poor is the only word for this picture. Running time, 77 minutes. Played April 6-7.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

VIVACIOUS LADY: Ginger Rogers, James Stewart, James Ellison, Beulah Bondi, Charles Coburn—Played this very late. However, was enjoyed by my patrons. Comments on same that Ginger Rogers is better here than in any of her dancing features. Running time, nine reels. Played March 24.—Arthur L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ARIZONA WILDCAT, THE: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Pauline Moore, Henry Wilcoxon—This little star has a following but not like Fox thinks. Good little picture that did average or better and it pleased on the weekend double bill.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

COUNTY CHAIRMAN, THE (reissue): Will Rogers—Too bad these fine reissues don't draw any more. Far better picture than many late releases but no more draw. Played April 4-5.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Nancy Kelly, Henry Fonda, Randolph Scott—Another hit from 20th Century-Fox with more drawing power than anything we have shown since "Boys Town." Running time, 106 minutes. Played April 2-4.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power Henry Fonda, Nancy Welly, Randolph Scott -Very good and what a draw. Had people in who haven't been in since "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and were they entertained? Hats off to Darryl Zanuck, the man who discovered America with a picture. Play it any time and enjoy some prewar business. Coloring and scenery very good.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER: Shirley Temple, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell, Armanda Duff, Bert Lahr, Bill Bobinson—A very good picture that pleased. Business fair. Running time, 71 minutes. Played March 18-19.—Mrs. B. Lovell, Lovell Theatre, Pardeeville, Wis. Small town patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—I must repeat what so many exhibitors have already said. A wonderful picture that has plenty of draw. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 31-April 1.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—One swell picture and the coloring was grand. Plenty of real entertainment that pleased and it did business. Believe that this picture could stand a re-run and do more business than most of the program pictures that Fox is making this year. Some very good acting and just the right dish for the rural patronage. Grab it and cash in.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

KENTUCKY: Richard Greene, Loretta Young, Walter Brennan—Top business. Fine picture. Pleased all, something few pictures can do here. Played April 2-3.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Cesar Romero, Arthur Treacher—Here comes America's Sweetheart in a sweetheart of a picture. The best that she has ever done and any theatre should feel proud to have a chance to play this one. Running time, 90 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MR. MOTO'S LAST WARNING: Peter Lorre, George Sanders, Ricardo Cortez, Virginia Field—We use these on our weekend double bills and they fit the spot and they please. Don't think they draw any more than average business and they are in the low allocation here.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MR. MOTO'S LAST WARNING: Peter Lorre, George Sanders, Ricardo Cortez, Virginia Field—Good little programmer. Pleased generally. Running time, 72 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MYSTERIOUS MR. MOTO: Peter Lorre, Mary Maguire—Good enough to fill in that double bill, and they satisfy the action lovers who frequent the place on Friday and Saturday night.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SHARPSHOOTERS: Brian Donlevy, Lynn Bari—Had seen some adverse criticism on this and was afraid to run it, but it wasn't so bad, and on the other half of a double bill this did all right.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SUEZ: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Annabella—A big production. Good entertainment well liked. Picture does not have very good drawing power. Business fair. Running time, 104 minutes. Played March 4-5.—Mrs. B. Lovell, Lovell Theatre, Pardeeville, Wis. Small town patronage.

SUEZ: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power, Annabella—Wonderful show but poor at the box office. Too much of a costume picture for small town. Running time, 105 minutes. Played, February 26-27.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre, Stanwood, Wash. Small town patronage.

THANKS FOR EVERYTHING: Jack Haley, Jack Oakie, Adolphe Menjou, Arleen Whelan, Tony Martin—A good picture that failed to draw. Took a loss. No fault of picture. Title had no appeal here. Paper weak too.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers, Gloria Stuart, Binnie Barnes—We consider the Ritz Bros. no adornment to the show. Their slapstick stuff seemed out of place or overdone. Without that it would be one of the best costume shows. It's worth playing. Played April 7-8.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon, Patsy Kelly, David Niven, Walter Brennan, Thomas Mitchell—Some liked it and some didn't. Did not set the world afire at the box office. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 3-4.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon, Patsy Kelly, David Niven, Thomas Mitchell, Walter Brennan—We ran this on our best times, had it bought in color, finally bought it again, for the same price and got it in black and white. Good enough but no box office record breaker and we played it on our best time. Worth a date if you can buy it right.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly, Alan Mowbray, Nancy Carroll, Eugene Pallette—Very good comedy. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly, Alan Mowbray, Nancy Carroll, Eugene Pallette—A good picture but these United Artists pictures haven't been doing so well for me this year. Priced plenty high and maybe worth the money in town but out here in the sticks they just don't do it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TOPPER TAKES A TRIP: Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Billie Burke, Alan Mowbray—This seemed to please and on our best nights. Similar to the other "Topper" in many ways but not as entertaining. Did average business but should have done better to offset the rental. Will never be missed if you don't play it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

YOUNG IN HEART, THE: Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Roland Young, Paulette Goddard, Billie Burke—These pictures just don't seem to click, lacking that necessary something that is just the difference between a hit and a miss. We paid enough for these that we are entitled to do some business on them but so far they have come up on the minus side. If you can't buy them right, leave them alone.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Universal

BOSS OF LONELY VALLEY: Buck Jones — A very good western that pleased and drew good. Played March 31- April 1.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

DRACULA (reissue): Bela Lugosi; FRANKENSTEIN (reissue): Boris Karloff—Drew fair but not what I expected and it pleased the younger generation who made up most of the audience. Heard some complaints but not many. I would advise playing it if you can get a decent deal, but bar the kids and save yourself any kickbacks from parents who like their sleep. Played April 5-6.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

GUILTY TRAILS: Bob Baker, Marjorie Reynolds—Only fair. No draw. Bob Baker's pictures don't mean a thing at the box office. Running time, 57 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LADY IN THE MORGUE, THE: Preston Foster, Patricia Ellis, Frank Jenks—A very good murder picture which will please. Strictly a double bill feature. Played March 31-April 1.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

LAST EXPRESS, THE: Kent Taylor, Dorothea Kent—Pretty good. Universal pictures don't seem to have any prestige or drawing power at the box office. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LAST STAND, THE: Bob Baker, Constance Moore—Another Bob Baker smash that pleased and this Baker sure is tops. We can't get enough of his pictures. Played April 7-8.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

LETTER OF INTRODUCTION: "Charley McCarthy," Edgar Bergen, Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds, George Murphy—This was bought as a special and not worth the price of "C" pictures. This was good entertainment but played to the smallest crowd in over a year. Running time, 103 minutes. Played March 20-21.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

MERRY-GO-ROUND OF 1938: Bert Lahr, Jimmy Savo, Billy House, Alice Brady, Mischa Auer, Joy Hodges—Bought as a special and double billed it, which was the right thing to do. Play it as such. Good entertainment. Played March 24-25.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

MYSTERY OF THE WHITE ROOM, THE: Bruce Cabot, Helen Mack, Constance Worth—The usual Crime Club Series "Weak," lacking excitement and mystery. Okay with strong top feature. Running time, 57 minutes. Played April 9.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

OUTLAW EXPRESS: Bob Baker, Cecilia Callejo—Did average Friday and Saturday business and didn't hear any comments for or ag'in'.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN: W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," Frank

AIR EXPRESS

Jenks Grand, grand, grand show. Action carloads of wonderful laughs. Big enough for any spot and extended runs, and McPhee knows. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland, Donald Woods, Anita Louise, Claude Rains, Louis Hayward—Another revival which still has a lot of drawing power and played before better than average business. Played March 27-28.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

IT'S LOVE I'M AFTER: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Patrick Knowles—Nice comedy romance that pleased. Should be double billed. Played March 29-30.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

JEZEBEL: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, George Brent, Margaret Lindsay, Fay Bainter—Playing this late paid dividends, as we were able to advertise the fact that Bette Davis received the Academy Award for her work in this. This drew considerably above average. As for the picture itself, the comments of one of our patrons best describes it, who said: "I didn't like it because it ended like the middle of a chapter play. You don't know whether Fonda recovered or who he turned to in the event of recovery. It looked as though the author came to a Dead End and did not know which way to turn and decided, 'Oh, let the patrons worry how it all comes out.' " There are certainly fine dramatic fireworks up to this point. The horrors of yellow fever were carried in too great detail; carting the dead through the streets in cartloads is not a pleasing sight. The suffering of Fonda in the grip of the plague was shown in too great detail. Aside from these flaws, "Jezebel" is magnificent drama.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

KING OF THE UNDERWORLD: Humphrey Bogart, Kay Francis—It's that red-blooded action that the chewers and spitters in the balcony crave, and will do average business on your action night. It's gangster stuff like Warner's have made for so long, but if you are a small towner, it is right down your alley.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

NANCY DREW, DETECTIVE: Bonita Granville, John Litel—This Granville kid is sure going places and can safely say she is tops in her acting and no role seems too difficult to handle. Pleased 100 per cent. A honey for the weekend double. Running time, 68 minutes. Played April 7-8.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

OFF THE RECORD: Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, Bobby Jordan—Did good enough on our bargain night and seemed to please. We use some of the better pictures and figure the advertising more than offsets any loss of business due to giving the patrons a real bargain. Pat O'Brien one of our favorites and Warner's product our best buy this year.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ON TRIAL: Margaret Lindsay, John Litel, Janet Chapman—The husband (John Litel) kills his wife's (Margaret Lindsay) former admirer when he discovers that attempts were made to come between them. Credit must be given to little Janet Chapman as the daughter of the accused man, specially when placed on the witness stand in her father's behalf. Not a bad co-feature for "A" houses and fairly good as a top biller for "B's." Running time, 61 minutes. Played April 7-8.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

PRINCE AND THE PAUPER, THE: Errol Flynn, Claude Rains, Billy and Bobby Mauch, Barton MacLane, Alan Hale—This is our repeat showing on this and can say it is worthy of repeats anywhere. Easily one of the year's best. Played March 22-23.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

SISTERS, THE: Errol Flynn, Bette Davis, Anita Louise—Good picture of its type, but positively no draw among the younger people. In spite of the fine cast, this did the lowest gross of any Warner picture we have played since opening here eighteen months ago.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Louise Fazenda, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins, Nat Pendleton, Penny Singleton—Another revival from Warner that made a hit here. A knockout and a box office natural. Played March 6-7.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada.

THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL: John Garfield, Claude Rains, Ann Sheridan—This was heavy but when sold as a regeneration story it was accepted as such and pleased better than I anticipated. Garfield has a following though he hasn't been given parts to make him liked.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL: John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, "Dead End Kids," Claude Rains—An excellent picture that should do top business in any situation. This boy is perfection in all sense of the word. The only drawback to the picture is in the last reel when the fighting is too long. Do not be afraid of this one. Running time, 89 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NEW CONTRIBUTORS ON PRODUCT SHOWN

New contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" this week hail from Washington State and Wisconsin. They are:

B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre,
Stanwood, Wash.

Mrs. B. Lovell, Lovell Theatre,
Pardeeville, Wis.

Read the reports of these showmen in the columns of the department in this issue.

TORCHY BLANE IN CHINATOWN: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Just a picture. Got by nicely. Running time, 58 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TORCHY GETS HER MAN: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Good for double bills only and will please. Not strong enough to single. Glenda is sure tops. Played March 27-28.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

VALLEY OF THE GIANTS: Wayne Morris, Claire Trevor, John Litel, Chas. Bickford—Wonderful color-outdoor action picture. Favorable comment for all patrons. Best business in months. Running time, 72 minutes. Played, February 15-16.—B. C. Johnson, Ideal Theatre, Stanwood, Wash. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BOOM GOES THE GROOM: Andy Clyde—When they say that Columbia is tops in two-reel comedies they hit it on the head. Not a bad one so far this season. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOT DOGS ON ICE: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Not so good. Wiil get by. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

INSIDE THE WHITE HOUSE: Washington Parade, No. 2—Whoever stumbled onto this series of shorts really did something. The first two have been excellent. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 8—Always good. You cannot go wrong with "Screen Snapshots." Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STOOGES COMEDIES: Mr. Hays is being quoted in the papers as saying that audiences are growing up and don't go for comedies. Mr. Hays gets a big salary but he is utterly ignorant of the small town theatre needs. The shorts offered today to take the place of comedies are a tragedy and driving away all kid business. Mr. Hays nor anyone else ever saw a walkout or anyone go to the smoker while a good cartoon or comedy was on the screen. Now they use the "shorts" hour to smoke or rest through. Give us more like Stooges and what would we give for a lot like Lloyd, Snub Pollard and Bebe Daniels used to make. No, Mr. Hays isn't right† Maybe they have grown up, but a few of them must have ventured in on "Snow White" or else someone is overlooking a wonderful kid business.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

Educational

BIG APPLE, THE: Song and Comedy Hits—Played this very old print. Sound poor. Not so hot. Running time, one reel.—Arthur L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

HOW TO SKI: Treasure Chest—No entertainment value for a small town theatre. Also very old print. Pass it up. Running time, one reel.—Arthur L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANCIENT EGYPT: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—A FitzPatrick Travel Talk in color and they are the tops. I have run all of them and have yet to find one that was poor.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DREAM OF LOVE, A: Musical Comedies—Based on a story of the composer, Franz Liszt, and the famous song, "Liebestraum," I thought this an excellent short but the cash customers turned thumbs down. They want comedies and are not satisfied with other shorts. Music in this is fine and the gypsy dance is especially pleasing. Running time, two reels. —Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FEED 'EM AND WEEP: Our Gang—Our Gang Comedies not as good as the old two-reelers. This we consider average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FORGOTTEN STEP, THE: MGM Miniatures—Very interesting. Many favorable comments.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOW TO FIGURE INCOME TAX: Robert Benchley—Not appreciated in small towns. Farmers are exempt from income tax.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ICE ANTICS: MGM Miniatures—Wonderful but if you do not play it before "Ice Follies of 1939" it will fall very flat. Excellent if played in the proper spot. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IMPERIAL DELHI: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Why comment on this series as it is all the same. Tops of any program. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IT'S IN THE STARS: Musical Comedies—Why not let Warner Bros. make the musical?—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

IT'S IN THE STARS: Musical Comedies—"It's in the Stars" is a pleasing bit of divertisement. The manner in which MGM features the theme song will appeal to young and old who are romantic, particularly those who have a flare for astronomical settings. A worthy addition to any program. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LOVE ON TAP: MGM Miniatures—An excellent dancing reel. Good any time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MAMA'S NEW HAT: Captain and the Kids—Saw some unfavorable criticism on this so was agreeably surprised to find our people enjoyed it as a whole. Running time, seven minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MAMA'S NEW HAT: Captain and the Kids—Pretty good cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAMA'S NEW HAT: Captain and the Kids—This series, for a company as good as MGM is, rates about the lowest of anything we have run. They just are no good. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAN'S GREATEST FRIEND: Pete Smith Specialties—This canine short depicts man's true friend and is a very entertaining educational film. After reviewing this picture one cannot help but remark about the greatness of Louis Pasteur, who has done so much for humanity. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MEN OF STEEL: Musical Comedies—Can't give this thing much. Don't play it because it isn't worth the time. Looked like an eighth grade commencement program and that's insulting the kids.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MARINE CIRCUS: Pete Smith Specialities—Here is a reel so different that it is indeed refreshing. Excellent. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MIRACLE OF SALT LAKE: MGM Miniatures—Good enough even if it was a mixture of Metro features. Play it because it is better than most shorts of similar getup.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MONEY TO LOAN: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—My patrons like these "Crime Doesn't Pay" better than any short we run. This one is similar to the others and very good.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY: Musical Comedies—A fair musical or something that did all right. Has a few laughs but you can get along without it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY: Musical Comedies—Maybe this was funny. We could not see it for it sure seemed silly to us. Maybe they are just running out of subject material for these Comedies.—Running time, 20 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PRACTICAL JOKERS: Our Gang—Another "Our Gang" comedy that pleased them all. A very cute cat shared honors in this one. Alfalfa's singing is, as always, the highlight. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SEAL SKINNERS: Captain and the Kids—Good black and white comedy.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SINGAPORE AND JAHORE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Another fine Travel Talk. I would like to run all these Travel Talks in one show for they are tops. Never a poor one. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SNOW GETS IN YOUR EYES: Musical Comedies—Make no mistake on this one. A very interesting skiing musical. Very different. Well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SYDNEY, PRIDE OF AUSTRALIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Very good as are all of the FitzPatrick subjects. Just right to open your show and worth the money.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THINK IT OVER: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—These are always well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TINY TROUBLES: Our Gang—Not up to standard. Gang comedies slipping. Needs new characters and more of them and better stories.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WINNING TICKET, THE: Captain and the Kids—These cartoons are very mediocre.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

BE UP TO DATE: Betty Boop Cartoons—Just a cartoon and not up to standard.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FISHERMAN'S PLUCK: Zane Grey—The men liked it.— E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FROLICKING FROGS: Grantland Rice Sportslights—A very good short. Good entertainment.—Mrs. B. Lovell, Lovell Theatre, Pardeeville, Wis. Small town patronage.

ODD OCCUPATIONS: No. 4—Entertaining.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Play this old but very good.—Arthur L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

PLAYFUL POLAR BEARS: Color Classics—A very beautiful reel. One of the best we ever run.—Mrs. B. Lovell, Lovell Theatre, Pardeeville, Wis. Small town patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: Another dandy reel in color.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RED, WHITE AND BLUE CHAMPIONS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Real good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SMALL FRY: Color Classics—Very good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SONG IS BORN, A: Larry Clinton and His Orchestra—A different band act. It's good, though. Running time, one reel.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

SUPER ATHLETES: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Pretty good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

THREE KINGS AND A QUEEN: Vincent Lopez, Betty Hutton—Very good musical reel.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TWO BOYS AND A DOG: Grantland Rice Sportlights—A fine nature reel that will please all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

CARNIVAL SHOW: Nu-Atlas Production—Pretty good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LONESOME GHOSTS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Another Disney of outstanding entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, THE: No. 12—The very best in screen entertainment.—Arthur L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

OLD MILL, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Our patrons liked this very much.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ROMANCING ALONG: Phil Harris—This is the best musical short I have played in a long time. Was well liked by patrons, both young and old. This Phil Harris really has something. You won't make a mistake playing this one. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

TALENT AUCTION: Nu-Atlas Productions—Pretty good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FILMING BIG THRILLS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Entertaining filler.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GLASS SLIPPER, THE: Terry-Toons—A very good cartoon in color.—Mrs. B. Lovell, Lovell Theatre, Pardeeville, Wis. Small town patronage.

HUNTING DOGS: Ed Thorgersen—An excellent reel on training hunting dogs, especially quail dogs.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HUNTING DOGS: Ed Thorgersen—Very good. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

LAND OF CONTENTMENT: Magic Carpet Series—A very beautiful reel. So pleasing.— Mrs. B. Lovell, Lovell Theatre, Pardeeville, Wis. Small town patronage.

MUSCLE MAULERS: Lew Lehr—Good short.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES WITH GRAHAM MCNAMEE: No. 58—Windmills in Cape Cod and Corsica made it a rather dry reel. Just fair. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SAILOR MOUSE, THE: Lantz Cartunes—Fair. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

CLYDE MCCOY AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good band act. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HIS BUSY DAY: Clyde McCoy and His Orchestra—Very poor Melody Master as I think Clyde McCoy and his Orchestra should swing out with more of that "Sugar Blues" rhythm than they do in this short. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

JOHNNY SMITH AND POKER HUNTAS: Merrie Melodies—I defy Disney to make a better cartoon than this one. Wonderful. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LARRY CLINTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Better than the usual run of this series but that is not saying much as they are very poor this season. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LARRY CLINTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Larry Clinton is red hot in this one. Give us more like it. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage

LINCOLN IN THE WHITE HOUSE: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—One of the finest short subjects to come to our screen. The first picture that has been applauded in our theatre in years. Running time, 20 minutes.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

MIRACLES OF SPORT: Color Parade—Good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

NIGHT WATCHMAN, THE: Merrie Melodies—Good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SKI GIRL: Vitaphone Varieties—Now we hope that all these producers have released their share of these skiing shorts. We have used most of them and they're all the same. Please, let's forget them. Running time, 10 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SONS OF THE PLAINS: Billy and Bobby Mauch—A marvelous short. Used on a double bill and can credit it for bringing capacity crowds for the two days it played. Running time, 20 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

SWING TIME IN THE MOVIES: Broadway Brevities—Good two-reel musical in colors.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TOILS OF THE LAW: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure" Series—Not as thrilling as you would be led to believe. This series is slipping badly. Running time, 11 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TOYLAND CASINO: Broadway Brevities—Wow! What a short. Do not waste it as it is tops. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TOYLAND CASINO: Broadway Brevities—Here is one of the finest short subjects ever made. We had more comment from our patrons on this than we have had on all shorts for the past several months. Running time, 22 minutes.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

VAUDEVILLE INTERLUDE: Vitaphone Varieties—Three vaudeville acts on one reel and all good. Includes the Harmonica Scamps.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WEDDING YELLS: Broadway Brevities—Not so hot. Only fair musical. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

YOU'RE AN EDUCATION: Merrie Melodies—Very good Merrie Melodies cartoon in fine color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Serials

Columbia

GREAT ADVENTURES OF WILD BILL HICKOK: Gordon Elliott, Kermit Maynard—Although I haven't seen any of the chapters, I had several customers tell us that this serial is getting very interesting, and that they wished they could see more of it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Republic

LONE RANGER, THE: Lee Powell, Herman Brix—This was our final chapter and it was a knockout of a serial. Running time, two reels.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

PAINTED STALLION, THE: Hoot Gibson, Ray Corrigan—This is our first week on this and can safely say it will please all and bring in new faces each week. Running time, three reels.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

FIRST QUARTER

The passing of the First Quarter in the 1939 Quigley Awards, as noted by the results of the Judging, marks the universal acceptance of the new policy. The enormous number of entries received from situations of all kinds affirms that adoption of the individual idea as a basis of judging, instead of the complete campaign as formerly, has the enthusiastic blessing of the membership.

Theatremen in every sort of operation are now encouraged to trot out their best exploitations, so that all may see. The showman in the tiniest hamlet tees off confidently from scratch with the rest of the field. The subsequent-run manager looks squarely in the eye of the first-run exploiteer, and says "so what". Thus the 61 entrants voted Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations represent not so much a cross-section of exploitation in the field, but rather a definite cross-section of showmanship endeavor, regardless of size and situation.

This is as it should be. There is no corner on boxoffice savvy in any one part of the nation. Nor is the label of expert-showman to be stamped upon the first-run manager only because of his operation. As always, it's "what" and not "where."

The new policy of the Quigley Awards is a confirmation that showmanship plays no favorites.

NEW FACES MAKE IDEAS NEW

More years back than we care to remember, your Chairman, a bit fearfully, exploited a resemblance contest. The fear came about because of the age of the stunt. We hesitated even then to dig up this "oldie" grown grey from long and honorable service. However, as events proved, these uncertainties were entirely unjustified. The customers joined up enthusiastically.

A few weeks back, the RKO Theatres put over a similar and widespread campaign in various key cities. It was directed to dates on Shirley Temple in "Little Princess," full reports of which were carried in last week's issue. In every instance, the tiein with newspapers and other cooperating factors went over like a blazing ball of fire.

The moral of which is, the old-fashioned hoop skirt is today's most stylish number. It seems there are always new customers.

The membership facilities, available at Round Table headquarters the year 'round, are again brought to the attention of visiting theatremen, especially those who will be in town to take in the World's Fair. Hotel and theatre reservations, arrangements to receive and forward mail, sightseeing trips, information desk, etc., are provided for.

The latchstring is out. Come in and "set".

BALLYHOO IN THE NEWS

The publicity topper for last week is to be voted Charlie Einfeld and his Warner Bros. ad crew for that four-page spread of news pictures in Life magazine on the premiere of "Dodge City" in the Kansas community after which the feature was named. The magazine conducts a picture-of-the-week section which publicizes outstanding attractions. But landing in the news pages with an exploitation campaign, is something else again.

The unusual break is of course a high compliment to ingenious motion picture promotion. But more significant is this further proof that skillfully projected, circus-type ballyhoo packs sufficient wallop to rate such important boxoffice attentions.

CLARIFYING THE SITUATION

In comparison with the circuit manager who may, or is instructed to look to his home office for guidance and assistance, your independent is on his own. He makes his own pace. His boxoffice efforts are largely self-inspired. That these efforts are highly valued is indicated by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's recent offer of $10,000 in prizes to solo operators for the best exploitation on the company's product released between September and January.

Returns should help clarify the pros and cons of the perennial argument that the theatremen unencumbered by home office regulation is in a better position to do an immediate and more profitable job at the boxoffice.

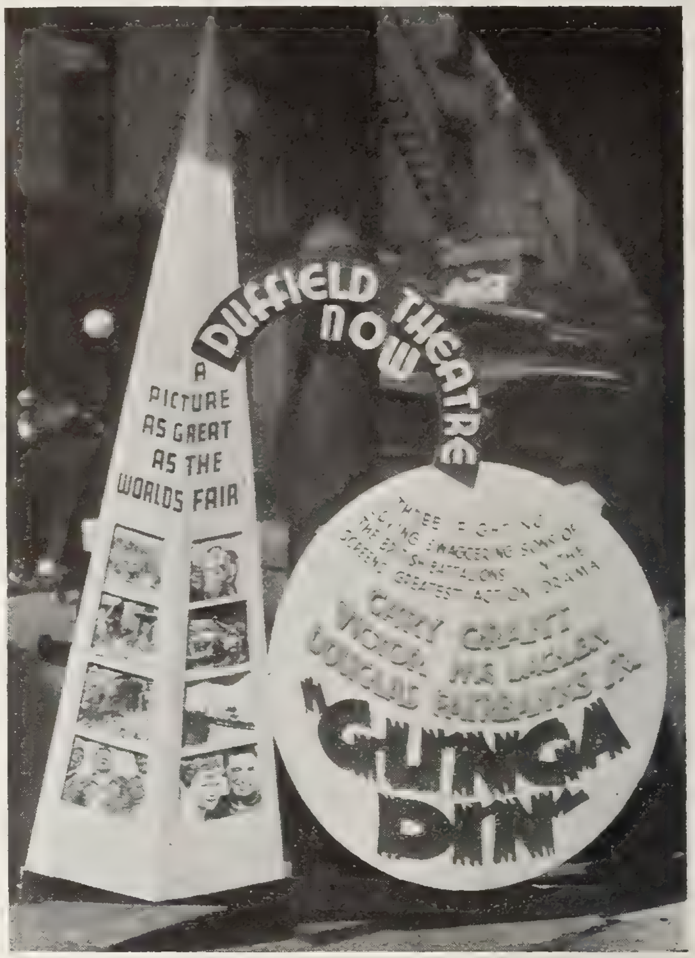
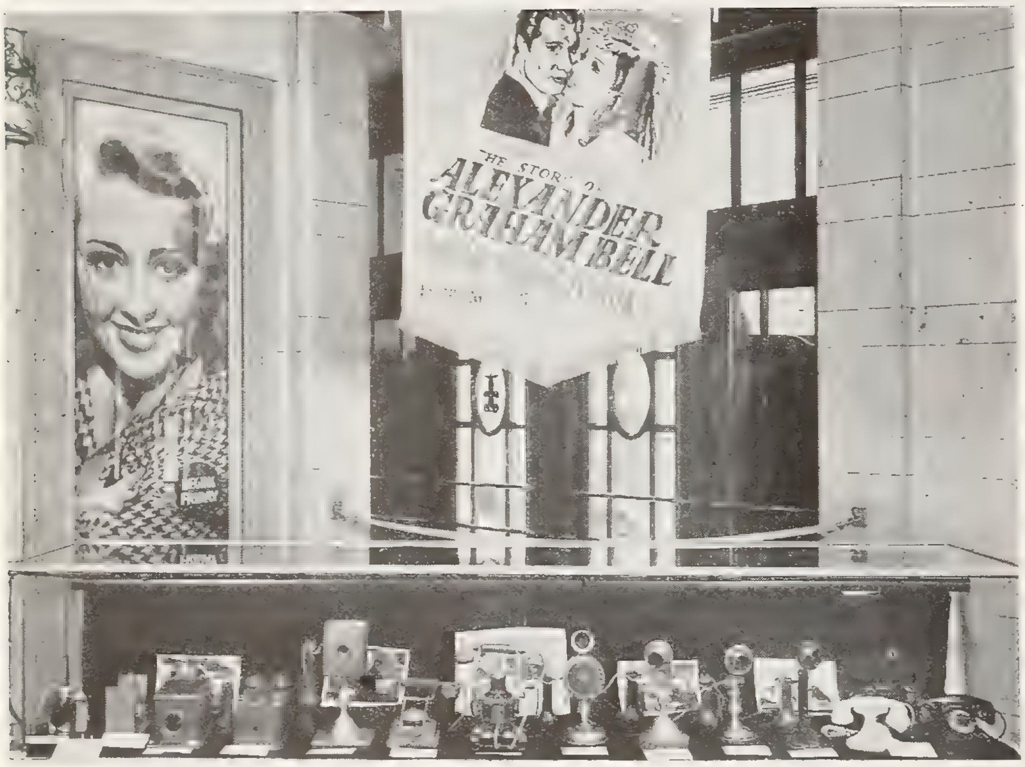
Round Table In Pictures

Held in conjunction with the showing of "Cafe Society" at Loew's Ziegfeld was the annual waiters' race in which 37 waiters, representing various hotels and night clubs, participated. Carrying tray, wine bottle, glass and chafing dish, men started from theatre and raced a distance of four blocks, winners presented with loving cups by Judy Garland. Gilbert Marbe, manager, and Jerry Sager of Loew's publicity department handled arrangements.

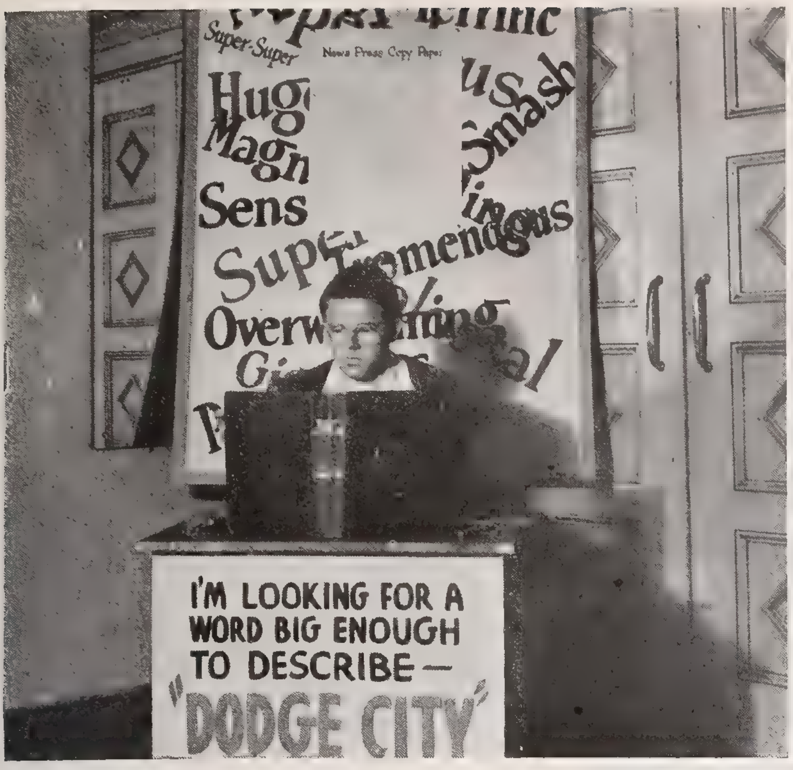


Carrying out the theme of the World's Fair, George Stoves, Duffield Theatre, Brooklyn, constructed a trylon and perisphere of compoboard to exploit his date on "Gunga Din". Inset in the sections of the trylon were scene stills, tiein copy atop reading "A picture as great as the World's Fair"; perisphere carried title, cast, etc. Entire display was used as street bally.



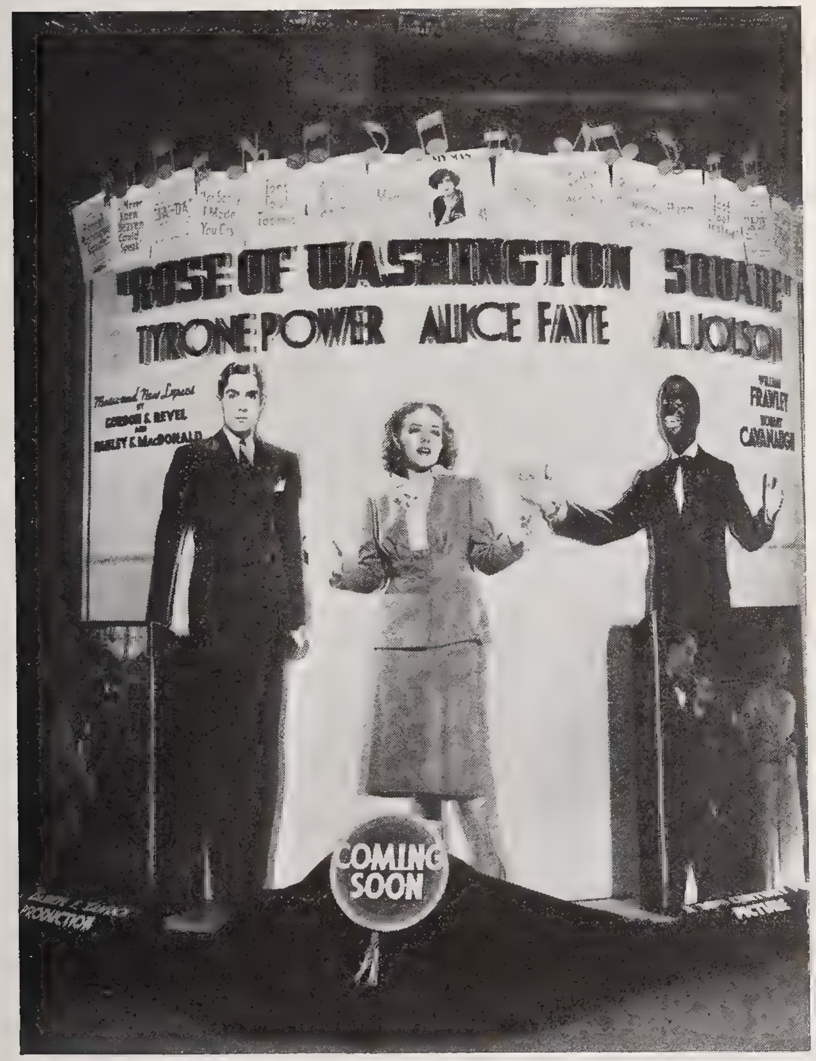
Promotion of old telephones through a tieup effected by the Fanchon & Marco advertising department in St. Louis proved to be an interesting and eye-arresting lobby display for the date of "Alexander Graham Bell" at the Ambassador Theatre. Earliest type instrument up to the latest, with explanatory cards, were displayed; background included scene stills from picture. Display was set up twelve days in advance of opening date.

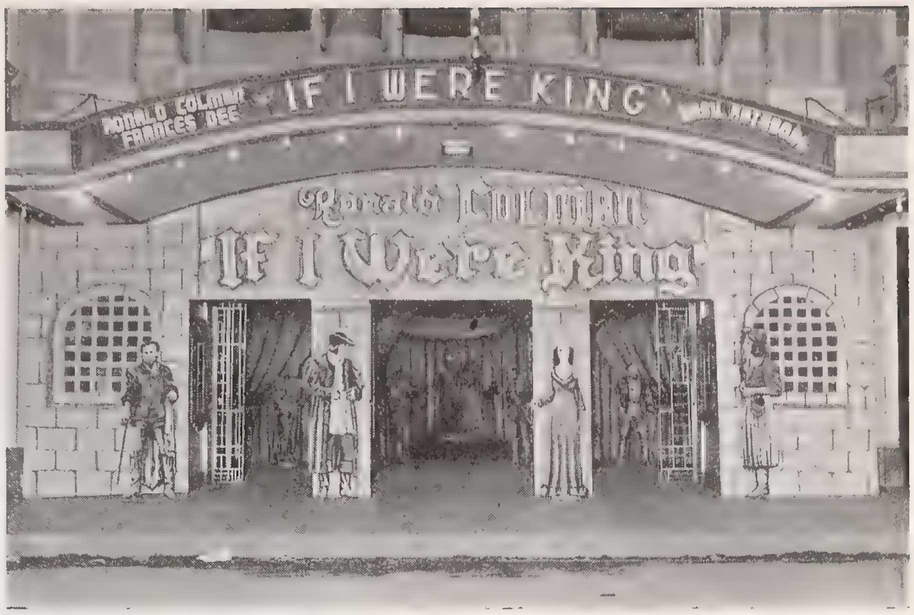
Through cooperation of police, Russ Bovim, at Loew's in Columbus, Ohio, placed a radio cruiser on streets equipped with loudspeaker announcing safety messages interspersed with plugs for "Sergeant Madden". Attractive "copperette", dressed in uniform, distributed copies of a summons to appear at the theatre to witness the film. Girl also visited public offices, stores, etc., handing out the summonses. Sergeants of the Columbus police force were invited to attend opening day.



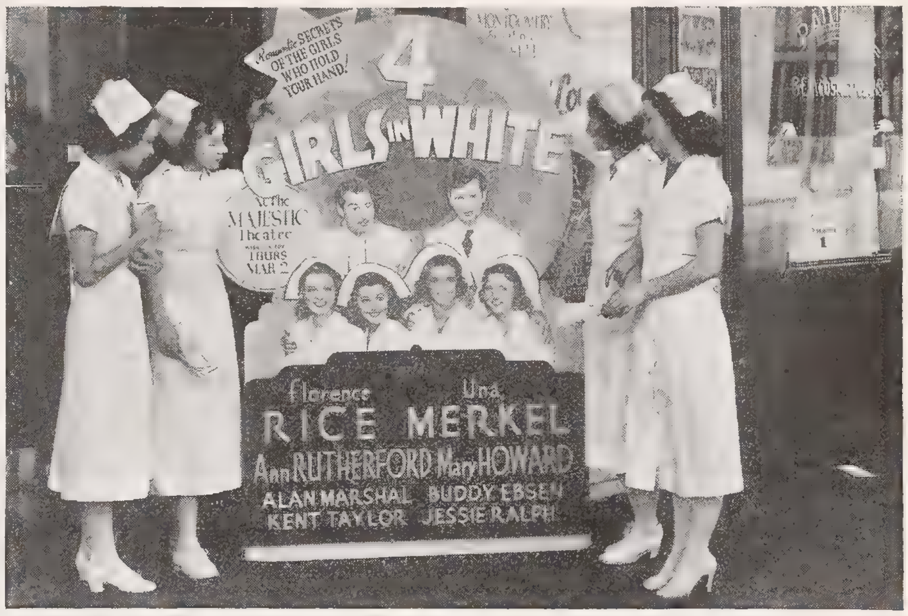
For a week ahead of opening of "Dodge City" at Warners' Granada Theatre, in Santa Barbara, California, Manager Howard Ralston planted studious-looking lad at desk in the lobby. Poring through a giant dictionary, copy advised that the boy was looking for a word large enough to describe the picture.

Highly effective because of its simplicity is the setpiece in the New York Roxy lobby designed by Ad Head Homer H. Harman. In addition to lifesize cutouts of the stars, further interest was built through use of transparent panels on both sides. Colorwheels under the "coming soon" snipe and playing on the face of the setpiece revolved automatically.





Converting the front of the Vision Theatre in Cebu, Philippine Islands, into a medieval castle was accomplished by Manager John Go Kong Wei for the engagement of "If I Were King". Stationed in front and in outer foyer were giant costumed cutouts of the various characters appearing in the picture.



Four girls in white helped City Manager Bob Suits exploit that picture's opening at the Majestic Theatre in Evansville by distributing health certificates to passersby. Copy on certificate entitled holder to a clean bill of health providing he saw the film.

A typical Charninsky front was that created by the Dallas Round Tabler for the subsequent run of "King of Alcatraz" at the Rialto. Depending largely upon such displays for extra attention, in this instance Louie emphasized strength of the picture by the title in outline letters and blowups of the stars.

UNITED STATES MAIL WORKS FOR SORIERO

Los Angeles Round Tabler Hangs Window Cards from Boxes to Exploit Coming Attractions

Using the regular exchange window card for the purpose, Manager Tom Soriero, of the United Artists' Downtown, in Los Angeles, has discovered a unique display method to publicize his coming dates. He mails the cards unfolded to names on the theatre list in an 18-mile area surrounding the house, suspending the cards from mail boxes for regular pick-up.

Each week, on hundreds of window cards is pasted a blank address form, a strip covering the bottom width of the card. These blanks are filled in with the names and addresses and properly stamped. To insure that the cards will not be covered up, a "do not fold" box is carried on the side. Tied to each is an elastic loop from which the card is suspended on front of box (see cut) so as not to interfere with those using the mail slots.

The time selected for the plant is right after the last mail pick-up on night before opening the picture, so that the cards are in full view on busy corners until the first morning pick-up. The best located boxes all over town are used for the widest circulation and Tom reports a lot of comment from those to whom cards are addressed.

An extension of the idea is credited to a visiting publicist, who suggests that boys be planted alongside of the boxes the day ahead with a supply of window cards to be mailed, one of which is suspended from the box after each pick-up. Even in the biggest of cities, he claims, there should be at least a half-hour between pick-ups, which will allow plenty of circulation.

20th Century-Fox To Broadcast Derby on Behalf of "Rose"

Top promotion arranged by 20th Century-Fox in advance of "Rose of Washington Square" is broadcast of the Kentucky Derby nationally famed horse race. This will be heard over entire CBS network, on May 6, from 6:15 to 6:45, eastern daylight saving time. Ted Husing, Bryan Field and Bob Trout will announce.

The program is reported as a first-time that the Derby has been broadcast through the sponsorship of a film company, the date coming a week ahead of national release date. Studio personalities will participate.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Pennzoil Tieup for "Pacific"

Latest co-op to be arranged for "Union Pacific" by Paramount is with the Pennzoil Company, which is set to back up the date in various situations. Pennzoil's interest in the picture arises from the fact that the company has lubricated the Union Pacific's fleet of streamliners since they were first put into service.

Soriero's Window Card Awaits Postman

Hartford Boys Aid Date on "Streets"

Active participation of Mayor Thomas J. Spellacy to aid a benefit performance of Monogram's "Streets of New York" at the State, in Hartford, on behalf of the Hartford Friends of Boys, was featured in the advance campaign, His Honor purchasing the first ticket, papers using photo and story. The juvenile association, composed of local bootblacks and newsboys, presented a 15-minute dramatization of the picture over Station WTHT a day ahead, program produced, directed and acted by the boys, whose ages ranged from 12 to 16. Tickets to the benefit as well as display cards advertising the picture were printed on the club press at no cost to theatre, the cards tacked to newsstands and bootblack boxes of the members. This assured additional posting in busy sections.

Other newspaper publicity was secured through special screening for the Connecticut School for Boys, screening attended by Hartford police heads. Another break worthy of note, was tiein of popular columnist who devoted entire column to local citizens starting life as newsboys. Jackie Cooper's affiliation with the Boy Scouts was called to the attention of all local Scout masters and prominent windows were secured on camera, jewelry and cosmetic tieins. In addition, co-op ads were secured from participating merchants.

Contest Widely Circulated

Outstanding contest was featured by the Hartford Times and the Insurance Girl, weekly publication reaching over 30,000 office workers, offering guest tickets to those naming the greatest number of streets in Hartford corresponding with streets in New York.

Campaign was put on by Manny Reiner, under the supervision of Lou Lifton, Monogram publicity and advertising director.

New York Opening For "Wuthering" Gets Star Buildup

Highlighting the advance campaign for "Wuthering Heights" at the New York Rivoli was the visit of Merle Oberon and William Wyler, star and director of the picture, who participated actively in securing wide publicity for the date. Miss Oberon appeared as guest star on the Kate Smith hour in a dramatization of the film and with Mr. Wyler was interviewed by the local press and wire services.

Shopping tour of Saks Fifth Avenue was used by the store to tie in large newspaper ads crediting the picture and date. Store also devoted prominent window to display of original wedding gown worn by the star in the film and followed this with a fashion show for style editors which exhibited adaptations of Miss Oberon's costumes.

Interior sets from the picture were reproduced in the famed House of Tomorrow at W & J Sloane's and Best and Company featured hat styles suggested by those worn in the picture. Here also, the store used newspaper advertising and windows to emphasize the tiein. Literary classic angle was stressed by Scribner's & Sons, book publishers, at their Fifth Avenue store, local branch libraries, highschools and colleges also tied in, with the exploitation of special displays having to do with the novel.

The front of the theatre attracted unusual attention by an elaborate display which featured a giant panel duplicating layout of scene stills and captions recently published in Life magazine. To carry this out, the same stills used by the publication were blown up to giant enlargements.

Bailey Helps Editor Write Robbery Story

When Earle H. Bailey, of the Harris Warren, Warren, Ohio, found himself in the office of the Tribune as a story broke on a local train robbery, he persuaded the editor to use some of the theatre's small ads on "Jesse James" which was playing currently at his house. In addition to scattering the mats throughout, the story heading read "Jesse James Rides Again," and, in addition, picture title was prominently mentioned.

For "They Lived Again," Bailey imprinted his picture message on small pieces of paper which were inserted in capsules and mailed to medical men and nurses.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Gail Egan Broadcasts

Reported as immediately popular is the nightly broadcast from 11:45 to midnight over CFAC, Calgary, Canada station of the program entitled "Shadowland," broadcast on behalf of Pete Egan's Capitol and Palace theatres. Gail Egan, program announcer and in charge of radio publicity for the two theatres, finds that the program, mostly confined to picture news and coming attractions, has already attracted many out-of-town listeners, who credit the broadcast for bringing them to town to see the pictures mentioned.

FIRST QUARTER JUDGES VOTE QUIGLEY AWARDS

Entrants Selected from Among "Fortnight" Winners Chosen for Added Honors in Initial Quarter of 1939 Competitions

by A-MIKE VOGEL

The most important event so far in the short history of this year's Awards, came about last week with the selection by the Judging Committee for the Quigley Quarter-Plaques, Medals, Citation Certificates, voted to 61 entrants who had earned preliminary honors as winners of the Fortnight Appointments during the First Quarter of 1939.

The high standard of competition resulted in Plaques to the three top entries, Silver Medals to the following five and Awards of Quarter-Master Citation to 53. The judges were S. Barret McCormick, of RKO Radio; Irving Lesser, New York Roxy, and Harry Goldberg, Warner Bros. Theatres.

Publicists Share Awards

As is usual in Awards procedure, in the case of publicity men who cooperate with managers winning an Award, P. E. McCoy is voted a Special Quarter-Master Silver Citation on Moon Corker's entry from Athens, Ga., Ted Emerson, Tri-States Nebraska zone publicity director, is honored similarly on Eddie Forrester's and Bill Miskell's entries from Omaha.

As was emphasized in previous issues, the Judges in almost every instance gave preference to entrants who had earned a Fortnight Appointment in more than one preliminary two-week period. It was agreed that the top honors should go to theatremen represented more than once in the five Fortnights of the First Quarter. It was felt that an entrant capable of turning out a winning promotion in one Fortnight should be able to repeat in at least another, especially when there were five opportunities in the First Quarter to score.

Single Entry Wins Plaque

This decision, however, was not so rigid as to bar single promotions of unusual merit as proven in the case of Manager Ferd Nessel, of the State, in Anderson, Indiana. As was detailed in last week's issue, Nessel fought a serious city-wide flu outbreak to keep his theatre open with a skillfully executed publicity campaign stemming from his cooperation with the local health board. Though this was the only entry from Nessel during the First Quarter, the Judges were unanimous in selecting it as worthy of a Silver Plaque.

OTHER LAST "FORTNIGHT" ENTRIES

of the new Awards policy is to be noted in the steadily growing number of exploitations that were considered for the preliminary two-week Fortnight Appointments in the First Quarter. Originally, it was intended to hold these Appointments to an arbitrary number. However, the increasing amount of fine showmanship material made an early revision necessary in the regulations which were changed to allow as many Appointments to be made as were deserving of these honors.

Included among entries which were counted among the Awards winners in the last Fortnight period are the following exploitations which were not detailed in last week's issue. They represent activities of various kinds.

Grott Holds Over Lobby Display To Accommodate His Patrons

A first-time that a theatre in the State of Maryland was able to promote a Federal fingerprinting apparatus for lobby was reported by Harold Grott at the Met, who secured cooperation of local police for "They Made Me a Criminal" opening. Originally intended to be in operation only during the run, so great were the demands from his patrons to be fingerprinted that in addition to remaining open all day and evening, the equipment and attendants were held over for a second week, running into new picture booking. Art work and stories were amply covered in local dailies.

Week before the display was set up in the lobby, Grott ran a trailer behind a newsreel shot showing J. Edgar Hoover fingerprinting Vice-President Garner and Walter Winchell, telling the people of the fingerprinting department. The service at theatre was also plugged in radio broadcast.

Brien Promotes Local Pilots To Drop "Dawn Patrol" Heralds

Treating his patrons to a surprise aviation display, Lige Brien, of the Prince Theatre, Ambridge, Penna., promoted local stunt fliers to do their stuff opening day of "Dawn Patrol," dropping theatre heralds as they zoomed over the city. In addition to promoting the flight, entire cost of heralds was offset by merchants' ads on reverse side.

Also promoted by Brien for lobby display was "home-made" plane, constructed by youthful local inventor, who had recently flown his machine to Cleveland. Promotion brought human-interest story on page one of newspapers, including picture plug and playdates.

Murphy's Easter Egg Hunt Tie-in Nets 1,729 Lines for "Serenade"

Taking his annual egg hunt put on in conjunction with the Easter celebration, Manager Frank Murphy, Loew's State, Syracuse, tied in the event with the local Journal for a smash campaign in advance of "Broadway Serenade," wherein Jeanette MacDonald was widely publicized by offering prizes to the winners. Counting all publicity received as a result, Murphy reports a total of 1729 free lines over a five-day period, with generous mention in story and art of the star and picture, in addition to photos of the hunt and bunny lobby display.

Over 1,000 colored eggs were buried at designated spot in local park, with golden and silver eggs bringing cash prizes and 50 others good for guest tickets to the picture. The bunnies in the lobby were given to the children finding the greatest number of eggs.

McCormack Reports Free Shows Sponsored by Local Merchants

Gaining strong support from the local P. T. A. and other local civic-minded organizations, was the series of special free Saturday morning shows for children of the county put over by manager W. Roy McCormack, Roxy, Frankfort, Ind., in cooperation with local merchants who underwrote the entertainments. In all, four shows were given, one each Saturday, featuring, in turn, Americanism, Safety, Boy Scout work and Fire Prevention.

Each of these subjects was covered by authorities familiar with their operations, in all instances, speakers prominent in civic movements. In addition, the show included a program of film attractions put together especially for the children. Publicity was featured by page-one stories and other helpful newspaper support.

Citizenship and Americanization Show Staged by Williams for School Children

In conjunction with President Roosevelt's proclamation of Americanization Days, and a local drive by civic organizations for better citizenship and respect for the American flag, Rex Williams, on Lincoln's Birthday, staged a series of five free shows at the Hoosier Theatre to the school children of Whiting, Ind., the showing sponsored by the Lions Club, American Legion, Boy and Girl Scouts. Theatre was decorated extensively with a 30-foot American flag covering the entire stage. Boy Scouts assisted theatre ushers with Legionnaires and others acting as hosts. Drum corps with flag bearer paraded the children from schools to the theatre.

Program included the following subjects: Declaration of Independence, March of Time No. 5, Servant of the People, Paramount News No. 42, and Community Singing No. 10. Following the speeches by prominent state officials and the mayor, the children stood and pledged allegiance to the flag. The film show was gratis, with the Legion and Lions paying for the operators. Theatre staff volunteered their services.

The event was counted as one of the finest prestige builders in the history of the theatre, with Williams receiving letters of commendation from all participating organizations. In addition the show was put on in all other towns of the Indiana-Illinois Circuit, of which the Hoosier is a unit, and Rex reports numerous requests from other situations for information on the staging.

Benford Sells "Pygmalion" Date With Original Trailer Copy

Realizing the need for some unusual publicity for his early February date on "Pygmalion," at Warners' Boyd, Philadelphia, Manager Stanley E. Benford, now at the Earle, struck upon a unique trailer angle conceived and executed with the cooperation of Everett Callow, Philadelphia zone ad head. Made up by National Screen, the trailer was headed by a replica of a telegram from the MGM studios regretting that preview scenes were not available and suggesting that patrons be advised that the picture had been selected as one of the 10 best of the year.

Copy following was in form of a personal endorsement by Benford emphasizing that the feature was not a costume picture and was not about Greek mythology, but that it was "Strictly a down-to-earth story of guttersnipe, a girl you wouldn't want in your home who was molded into a lady fit to walk with a queen." Rest of the copy continued to do an ace selling job to the extent that all the Warner houses in the zone and in other districts also used the trailer for excellent returns.

Leading Women's Organizations Endorse "The Grand Illusion"

Reported as a first time that a neighborhood theatre was able to successfully contact and secure cooperation of leading local women's organizations to endorse a picture was the accomplishment of Henry Kahan, manager of the Savoia Theatre, in Philadelphia for the engagement of "The Grand Illusion." Highlight of the theatreman's campaign was promoted broadcast directly from lobby in which prominent localites plugged the picture. Announcer from WPEN introduced presidents of various educational societies in addition to war veterans, all of whom extolled the picture.

Newspaper coverage included a word contest, guest tickets going to those submitting largest number of words secured from picture title and stories and art were planted in Italian and Jewish papers, as well as the local dailies.

Top Newspaper Publicity Campaign Stresses Hollister's "Managers' Week"

For his annual "Managers' Week" drive at Warners' Babcock, Wellsville, N. Y., "Holly" Hollister put together a distinctly out of the ordinary publicity campaign for the event, the local county press cooperating generously to call attention to the events. In all Hollister reports a total of nearly 300 inches of free space which included a co-op page built around a misspelled word idea for prizes.

The Round Tabler's campaign was built around a series of stage programs including special orchestras, table tennis exhibition, an "information please" contest, among other attractions. In addition, "Holly" secured a lot of space with a personal illustrated biography story and frequent mentions in widely-read local column.

JOHN F. O'HALLORAN

manages the M & P Waltham Theatre, Waltham, Mass. He entered showbusiness soon after his arrival in America, hailing from Galway, Ireland. His first position brought him to the Waltham and his subsequent jobs were at the Cameo in Bridgeport, Conn., the Lincoln in Quincy, Mass. and the Lyric in Athol, Mass. Prior to coming to his present theatre he worked at the Film Exchange in Boston and gained much experience in the movie industry.

acts as the assistant manager at the Beacon Theatre, Boston, Mass., another house belonging to the Mullin and Pinanski Circuit. Publicity work takes up some of his time while he is on the job. He began his career at the Metropolitan Theatre, also in Boston, in 1927, as a part-time usher but left there after a year. In 1930 he returned, securing a job in the publicity department. Several years later Henderson was transferred to the Beacon, from where he now communicates.

is the manager at the Island Theatre, in Hollis, Long Island, New York, one of the houses of the Interboro Circuit. In 1927 he did ushering work for Paramount-Publix and then went on to Schine Theatres, in a managerial capacity. His next job brought him to the Paramount Theatre in Asbury Park, N. J., where he served as an assistant. Prudential Playhouses also claimed his services as a manager before he secured the house at which we now find him.

began his theatrical career from the bottom of the heap about four years back. His first job was that of part-time usher at the Capitol Theatre in Davenport, Iowa, being promoted in due course to doorman and chief of service at this house. Moving to the Paramount he worked as an assistant manager and then went back to the Capitol, also as assistant. In 1938 he took over the Spencer Theatre, Rock Island, Illinois, where he is now managing.

J. M. NIX

began his career in showbusiness as popcorn boy in a theatre in Eufaula, Oklahoma. At the early age of 12 he worked as a projectionist and at 17 had his own house in Chocotah, in the same state. He bought the Roxy in Tulsa, Okla., producing stage and floor shows there. He also worked on Ziegfeld Follies for a year, next returning to Dallas, Texas, to join East Texas Theatres, remaining with them for three years. Nix then came on to Atoka, Oklahoma, to take charge of a couple of houses and then purchased the Castle in Brackettville, Texas, where he is also manager.

WILLIAM A. BERNS

acts as the assistant manager of the Pelham Theatre, in the Bronx section of New York City, which is owned by Cocalis Enterprises, Inc. Bill states he was born into showbusiness and proudly tells us his father was the last manager of the famous Arch Street Theatre in Philadelphia, Pa., where John Drew, father of the Barrymores, was the first manager. An usher's job started the ball rolling for him in 1937, at the Tribune Theatre in New York City and soon after he did doorman duty. The following year he was advanced to his present location. Come and say hello, Bill.

manages the Rialto Theatre, La Feria, Texas, one of the houses of the Hall Industries Theatres. Although Noyes is practically a new-comer in motion picture business, by the various reports he has already forwarded to us, we can discern an apt showman and active contributor in him. We are delighted to have you with us and look for material from you, at not too infrequent intervals.

skippers the Royal Theatre in Warsaw, Illinois, attaining this position after little training in the theatre. Starting as assistant projectionist at a small house he was soon transferred to doorman duty at another house and then came on to his present spot. We anticipate reports of what you are doing for the box office in Warsaw, Nick, so please send them on.

started in showbusiness in 1937, working for Smalley's Camden house in Camden, N. Y. He had an opportunity, while at this spot, to study theatrical advertising and built a number of displays on various pictures. Henry was equipped for this work, having run projectors and built scenery for use on the stage at the high school he had attended, as well as acting as the stage manager there. We now find him in the advertising department of Smalley's Chain Theatres, Inc., headquartering at their Camden Theatre.

is no new-comer in the motion picture industry for his entrance dates back to 1911, when he began as an usher at the Silver Palace in San Francisco, Cal., working himself up the ladder to a manager's post. He moved from there to Salinas, where he managed the White Theatre, thence to Oakland and the Rialto house, in like capacity. By 1918 he reached the Strand in Berkeley and two years later bought and operated the Rialto in Oakland. Meeting reverses, due to the depression period, he lost his house but procured the job of assistant manager at the Sierra Theatre in Stockton, Cal. We are glad to number you in our Round Table membership, Gus and hope you are an active member.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Col-Mel (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

TELEVISION EMERGES

WITH last week's previews in New York and Flushing television has at long last been booted around the corner and put to work on a commercial job.

The preview which consisted variously of pictures of Mr. Graham McNamee announcing or lecturing, from the RCA building, Mr. David Sarnoff and others talking from the World's Fair grounds eight miles away, a three round fight, and a transmission of a Pathe picture concerning television operation, achieved what might be called "home entertainment."

It is the entertainment of novelty and super-gadgetry, the experience of seeing miles away a pictorial representation of something that is in the process of taking place. It is not seen nearly as well as the motion picture film can show it, but it is heard as well as the radio can tell it. In the present state of development the event has to happen and to be seen inside the horizon of the telecasting antennae, which for New York from the Empire State Building is a circle of about fifty miles radius.

TELEVISION as demonstrated on screens about eight by ten inches is a better product than the motion picture was at the equivalent period.

The motion picture, however, was born out of a total of investment of the effort of but a handful of men and some twenty-five thousands of dollars. It paid its way, created its own publicity, sold itself. Also by reason of the special capacities of the camera it became a new medium of expression. It started at a nickel a look.

Television comes forth owing its developmental past about fifteen millions of dollars, enjoys a great fame but slight performance and consists essentially of sales promises, anticipations, hopes and promotions. It is not in itself a medium of expression but rather a device for transmission, a distributing system. Like the motion picture, it transmits images formed by a lens. Television does it immediately, but not so well.

Television is not now, any more than it was a year ago, a promise of menace or problem to the motion picture theatre screen.

DUE to various forces of influences among the electronic industries, the World's Fair and the field of financial promotion, television will for a time now be getting somewhat more attention.

It is interesting that the preview of last week was in essence more sales talk than demonstration.

One mildly interesting coincidence was presented by the inclusion of the televising of a three round boxing match. Boxing pictures were also the most important early offerings of the motion picture. In both instances, forty-five years ago, and last week, it was necessary to get an event of action taking place in a limited area and one which could be brought to the ponderous and relatively immobile cameras.

Television, now at least, is to find its market in the home.

WIRED for THOUGHT

YOUR editor has a growing conviction that scientists are just playboys who chance to have got anchored in laboratories. Now comes Westinghouse official publicity about a publicity robot Mr. "Elektro," an organization of wires, tubes, cells and motors housed in metal in the form of an anthropoid. Says Westinghouse: "He walks, talks, smokes, selects colors; Electric eye and relays do his thinking." Apparently, while not having enough initiative to be a creative executive, he might well be considered for a government post or a seat on somebody's board of directors.

ONE of Hollywood's major errors in public relations has been "consistently dinning into the public ear 'the industry'," argues Bland Johaneson of the New York Mirror. She also remarks on invasion of "the dairy terminology by frankly grading its pictures 'A' and 'B'."

All this relates, of course, to the consequences of telling the world and the consumer too much of the shop talk and processes.

Glamour, which is the merchandise, is not made out of information and trade facts. The most that the motion picture can profitably tell the public is to be told on the screen, at an admission price.

BARRISTERS and SOLICITORS

THE American Bar Association Journal has been making a study of the treatment of lawyers on the screen and finds it deserves the appreciation of the profession. In the last six months of 1938 the lawyers' trade journal found seven of eight judges in major roles and twenty out of twenty-four in minor roles portrayed sympathetically. In only one out of twenty-eight instances was there "an unsympathetic portrayal of a lawyer without a contrasting lawyer appearing as a sympathetic character."

Nothing was said about the fact that currently every problem, issue and aspect of the motion picture industry, in its public, social, commercial and governmental relations, is in the hands of lawyers.

Major litigations in this industry began in December of 1897 in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York. The industry has been in court ever since.

RETURNING to his post as picture critic after a sojourn in production, John C. Moffitt of the Kansas City Star observes that "the effects of transportation on celluloid are curious." He finds that in Hollywood one reads of "one smash hit after another," but that as the pictures go east they seem to deteriorate in critical opinion. But "the effect of a sea voyage is exactly the opposite. A movie produced in France, Yugoslavia, or Poland may have poor lighting, 1904 direction and crazy quilt cutting but once it has crossed the Atlantic it is almost invariably a masterpiece by the time it reaches the New York critics."

U. S. Starts Trust Suit Campaign To Dissolve Circuit "Monopolies"

The Department of Justice on Friday was to extend its trust suit campaign against the film business by filing in Oklahoma federal court the first of a series of actions aimed to break up local circuit "monopolies", it was disclosed in Washington by Thurman Arnold, U. S. attorney general.

The Oklahoma suit, charging unreasonable combination in restraint of trade, was to name Griffith, Consolidated and Westex circuits, operating in Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico, and Columbia, Loew's, Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, RKO, United Artists, Universal and Warners.

The suit is an "essential complement" to the pending New York suit which seeks to divest the majors of their theatres, Mr. Arnold explained, since "these objectives cannot be attained so long as there exist chains of theatres exercising monopoly power in various sections of the country, even if affiliation between such chains and major companies is broken."

"If producers are barred from theatre operation," he said, "they must have for themselves a competitive market of independent theatres in which to distribute their product" and must not be at the mercy of local monopolies which control the market in particular areas.

"To leave (local) chain theatres in control of the market after divestiture by majors would be to substitute a number of local monopolies for the national monopoly which is now charged to exist. Local monopoly control may be quite as effective in stifling competition as national monopoly control and at the same time be more disorderly."

The restoration of competitive conditions, he added, may require rearrangement of corporate structures and ownership, which can be done only by civil decree.

"This suit," he said, "asks that these defendants be dissolved and their properties rearranged under several separate and independent corporations in such manner as to create competitive conditions. . . . More particularly, an injunction is asked restraining the defendants from jointly and collectively negotiating contracts with major distributors for feature pictures. It also seeks to enjoin producers from seeking to license pictures except on a local, competitive basis."

Examination

Examination before trial of United Artists defendants in the Government's anti-trust suit in equity against the industry continued in New York this week but it was agreed at the session on Wednesday to adjourn the interrogation for one month because of the company's convention in Hollywood May 8th. An attempt by the Government to obtain admissions from Harry Gold, UA sales official, that the company could secure higher picture rentals if it changed its distribution methods was prevented after objections by Edward C. Raftery of company counsel. Mr. Raftery also prevented answers to questions by Seymour Krieger, assistant attorney general, to questions based on "conjectures" and as to what factors determined choice of first, second and third runs.

Date in Chicago

Hearings in the anti-trust suit filed in Chicago by the Federal Government against distributors and Balaban and Katz will open May 17.

The Chicago anti-trust suit of Frank Ford, independent exhibitor, against distributors and B & K was answered on Thursday by a motion for dismissal filed by the defendants' attorneys.

Legislation

A year of unprecedented state legislative activity involving motion pictures which so far has witnessed the introduction of no less than 571 bills has thus far produced only two adverse laws.

See page 15.

U. S. Replies

The Government's bill of particulars in the Federal anti-trust suit which was to be filed in New York over the weekend does not describe one specific act of violation of the anti-trust laws, it was found this week. In answer to the defendants' demands to state time, places and names of participants of acts of conspiracy and whether these acts were committed through oral or written agreements, the Government contented itself with saying it did not know these details.

Only to one item of the demand, to list stars who are under joint contracts to more than one producer, did the Government name names. The lending of stars was part of a system, the bill said, of producer-exhibitors to freeze-out independent producers.

Paramount, Loew's, RKO, Warner Brothers and Twentieth Century-Fox divided the exhibition field and extended preferences to each other, the bill said, thus favoring the monopoly.

After division of the territory between the producer-exhibitors, the bill said, a monopoly in each particular area was furthered and independent producers were excluded.

The bill does not apply to Columbia or United Artists since they have made separate applications.

Charges "Hate" Drive

The American and British motion picture industries are in a not-too-hidden conspiracy to malign Italians and Germans in their films, the Licht Bild Buhne, German motion picture trade paper charged, in a recent issue.

Under a London dateline, an article in the publication mentions four films as examples of its charges. The films are, "The Lone Wolf's Daughter," of Columbia; "Sword of Honor" and "The Silent Battle," both British-made; and "Professor Mamlock," a Russian Communist picture.

The article names Sir Robert Vansittart of the British Foreign Office, as a possible "guiding" factor in the alleged conspiracy.

Dies Investigators

Reports of un-American activities including Communism among members of Hollywood labor unions and especially Nazi efforts directed toward creating racial prejudice has resulted in the appearance there of two Dies Congressional committee investigators. The probers, George F. Hurley and James H. Steedman, said upon setting up a staff in the Federal Building in Hollywood that they would enter into every phase of subversive campaign in southern California. Various organizations and individuals had requested the committee to send investigators to Hollywood, the last being officers of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees who declared the minority leader of Studio Technicians Local 37 was a member of the Communist Party.

New Taxes for Britain's War Budget Hit American and British Films Hard

Shadows of the next World War fell across the motion picture industry Tuesday when Great Britain levied new high taxes on films to help pay defense costs.

Importing the largest number of pictures sent into England from the outside, American distributors will have to pay more than half of the $4,000,000 annual bill expected from the imposition of increased duties levied suddenly Tuesday on the import of motion picture films. The higher duty came with increased taxes levied on a number of commodities, apparently found necessary by the British Government in order to meet deficiencies arising from the record $2,700,000,000 war expenditure planned.

Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer Tuesday presented to Commons an all-time high budget of $6,500,000,000, announcing new taxes on tobacco, automobiles, sugar, films and income.

The trade in London was greatly concerned over the new duties, with both American and British companies affected. London film heads freely admitted Wednesday that they would result in greatly increased film costs.

The change of taxation on blank stock, for one, means that the British importer, including branches of American companies, will have to pay a penny a linear foot instead of one-third that amount, as at present.

Films produced in England, also including those made by American companies making quota and other British product, will pay a half-penny a foot. London calculates that the increase will cost all British-made productions an additional $4,000 to $5,000 per picture.

The tax on imported raw stock is expected to stimulate local raw stock manufacture in England.

Starting with an estimated $4,000,000 in new taxes in the first year, Sir Simon frankly predicted that the raise eventually will reach $10,000,000 annually. The $2,000,000 cost in the first year to American companies compares with the approximate $260,000 cost to British companies—a ratio of about $8 to $1.

While London generally feels that the increased levies were made because of the huge expenditures planned for war emergencies, Sir Simon countered with the statement that they resulted from concessions made in the new budget to the theatre and medicine taxes.

Hookup 'Game' Barred

A meeting of New York circuit officials on Monday resulted in the agreement by RKO to discontinue a five-neighborhood-theatre chance game telephone hookup. This extension of the chance game practice, frowned upon by most New York theatres as carrying chance games "to extremes," was used last week in the RKO Fordham, Chester, Royal, Franklin and Empire.

Quota Proposal

In England, following approaches by the New South Wales Government anent an exhibitor's quota for British films, the Board of Trade invited British producers to a meeting to discuss the possibility and advisability of the inclusion of Australian films, possibly on a limited percentage basis, in the British renters' quota.

Aldermanic Movies

The City Council of New York and attendant reporters were treated to an impromptu showing this week of Warner Brothers' "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" during a Council meeting at which a bill to ban the wearing of foreign uniforms was scheduled for discussion. Varying reactions and some opposition were aroused by the showing, partly because of the poor projection conditions and partly because of violent objections by some of the Councilmen to what they considered lobbying by means of motion pictures. Insistent objections of Newbold Morris, president of the Council, that the show was holding up the business of the meeting resulted in its abrupt termination a few minutes before the end of the film. Attempts to place responsibility for the booking were abandoned.

The anti-uniform measure passed.

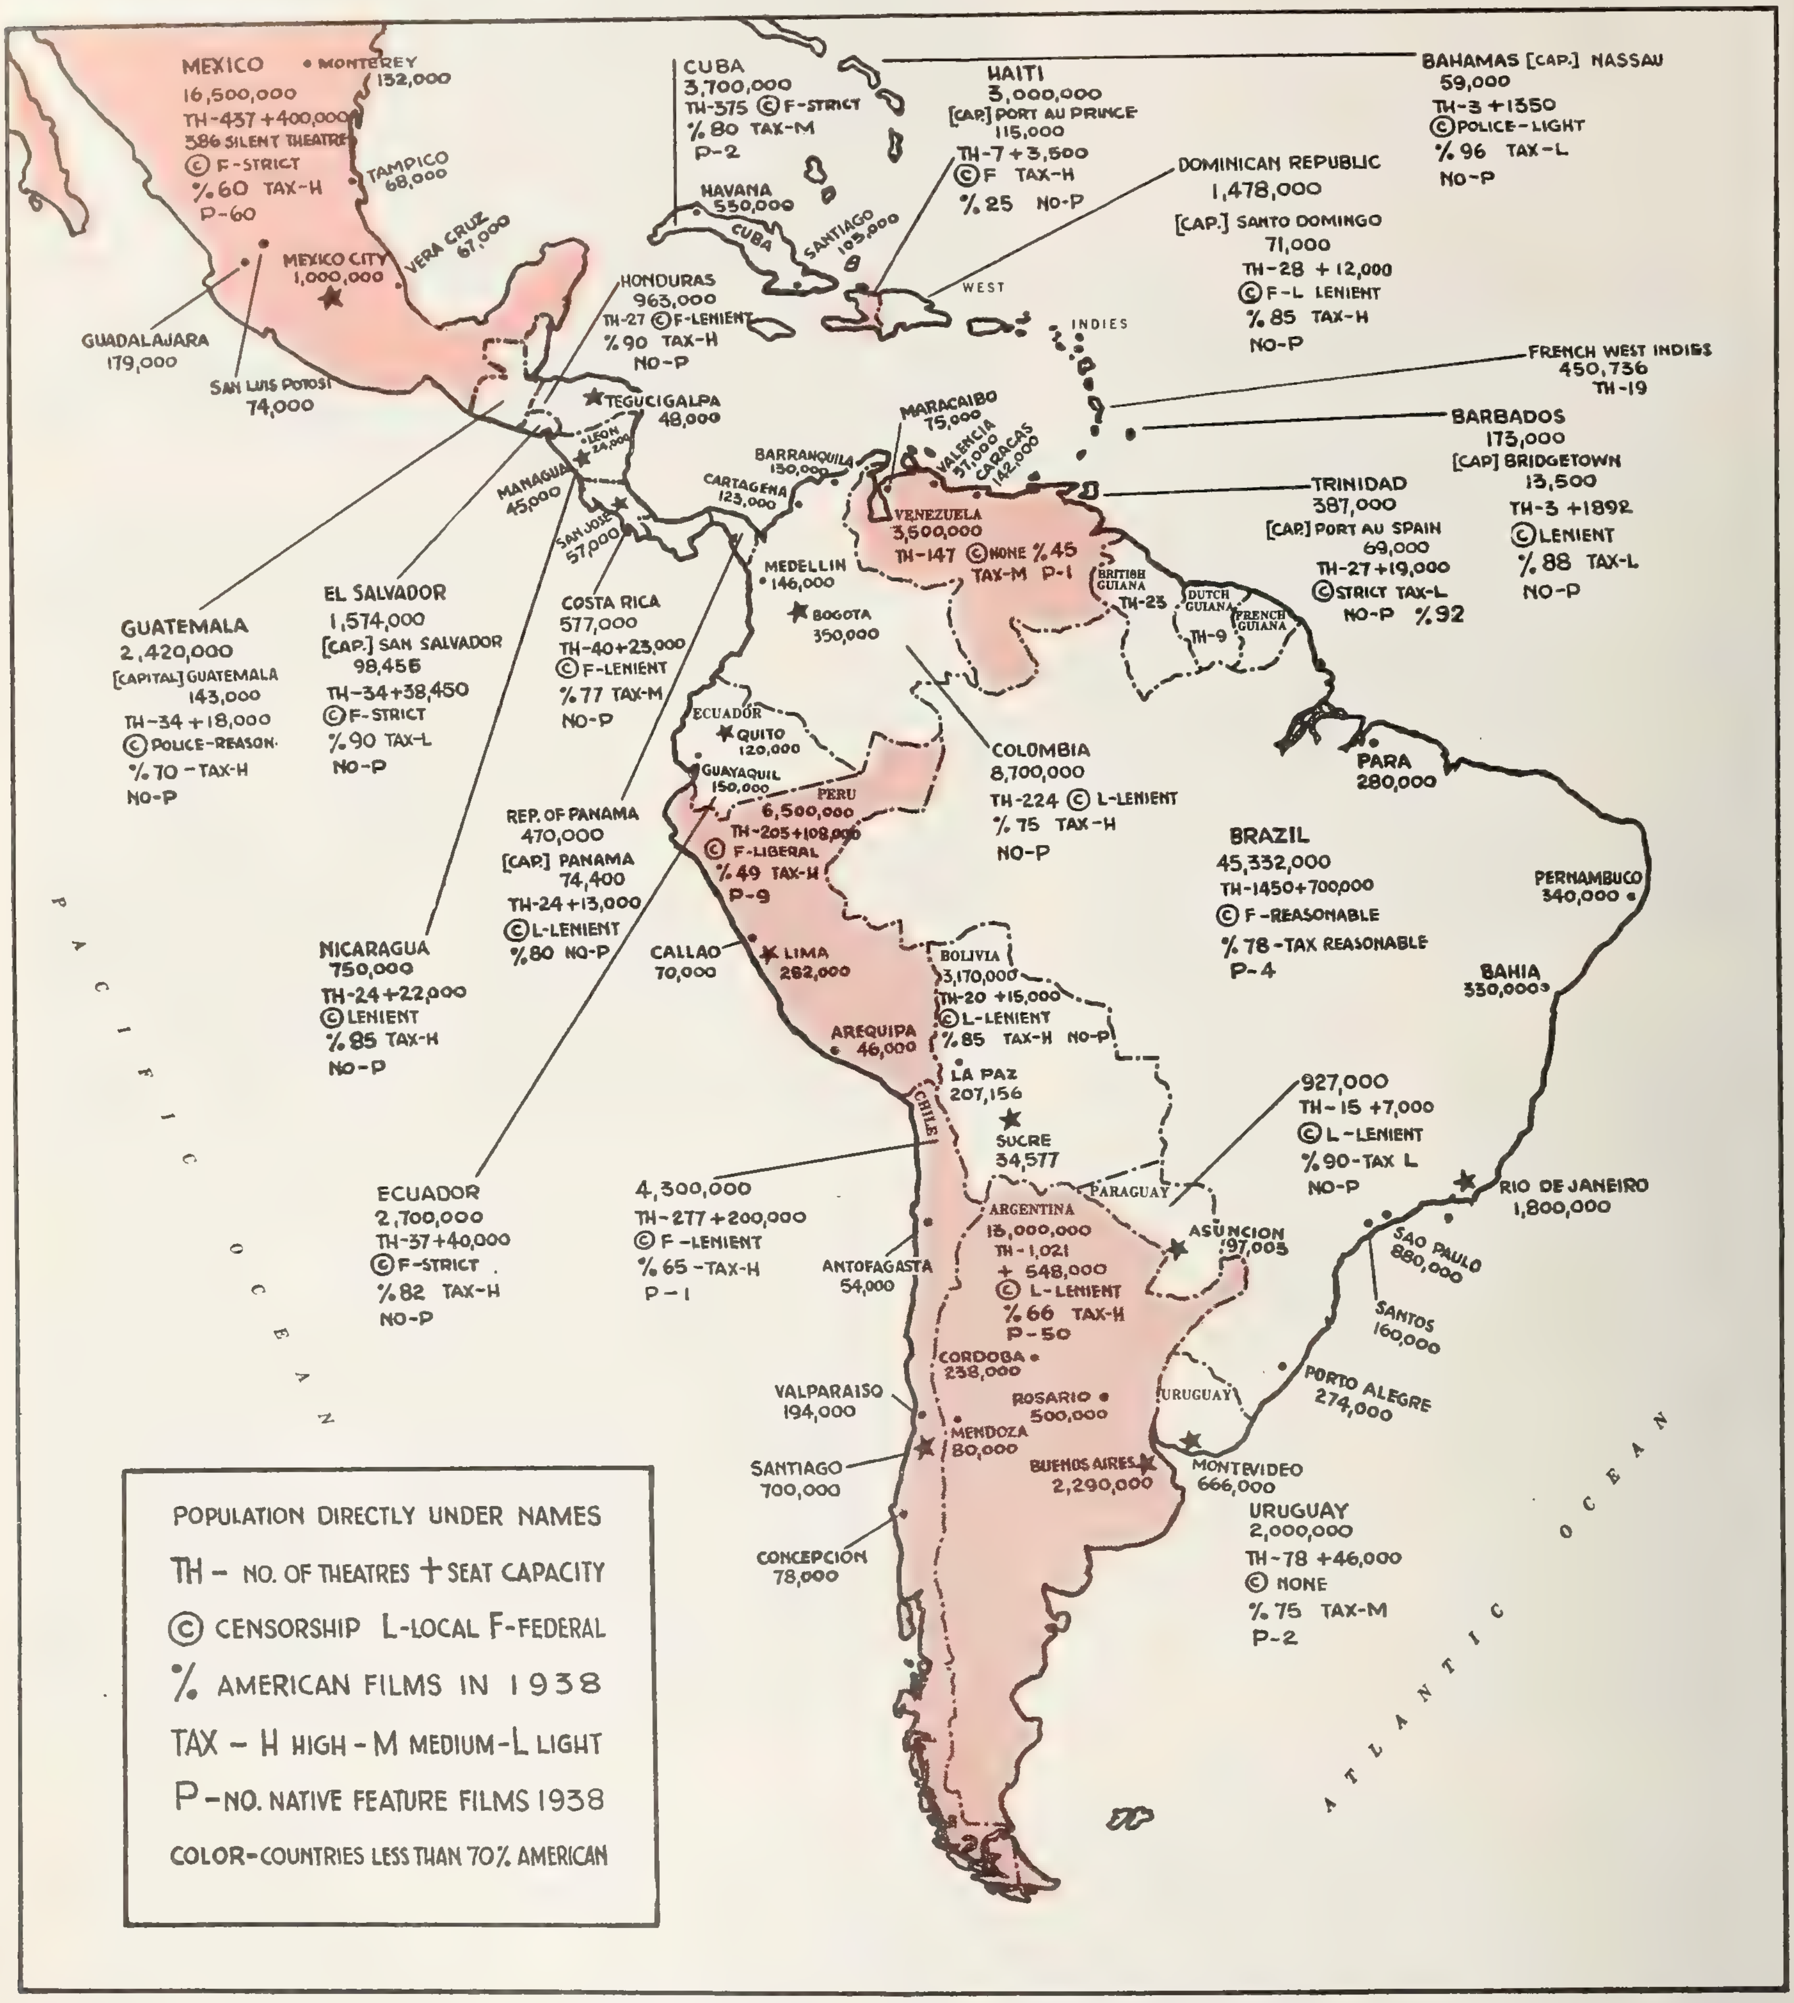
OPPORTUNITY BELOW THE RIO GRANDE



Product and theatre information concerning the market for films from the United States in Central America and South America is presented in the map. Shown is the population of the various countries and their chief cities, also the percentage of Hollywood product in the total distribution of motion pictures in each state, the amount of native product, the degrees of taxation and censorship, and the number of theatres and seats. The color marks the states in which U. S. product is under 70 per cent of all pictures exhibited.

BATTLE LINES DRAWN FOR LATIN AMERICAN MARKET

French, Argentine, Mexican and German Product Challenges Hollywood; Spanish Dialogue Films Preferred

The battle is on for the Latin American market. Competition from a variety of sources, including Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and several countries within the territory itself where domestic production is being pressed, has been increasing and recently has been reflected in perceptible decreases in percentages of American films shown. American distributors are proceeding with plans and strategy for a heavy concentration of effort to retain and extend their control of the market.

Turning to Rival Product

Certain sections of the Latin American public are turning to opposition product, and whatever new market is being established, principally among natives outside the large cities, is being created as a market for product having Spanish dialogue. These developments are evidenced by a compilation of statistical studies and from a consensus of opinions from foreign sales executives of American distributors.

In Argentina, American films hold about 66 per cent of the market, compared to the 70 per cent they had up to 1938. Argentine and French pictures each supplied about nine per cent of the product in 1938, with Germany, Great Britain, Spain, Mexico and Italy listed as competition, in that order of importance.

The rise in public favor of native production, which brought out about 50 pictures in 1938, is shown by the fact that in 1937 Great Britain, not Argentina, had been second to the U. S. in its share of the market. Native production is definitely preferred in the rural areas, a rule that seems to hold good in all Latin American countries.

In the Bahamas, it is generally accepted that of the four per cent opposition, the total is comprised of British films.

In the Barbados, the same holds true: American films have about 88 per cent of the market, with British films the only opposition.

Bolivia Percentage Declines

In Bolivia, American films now have about 85 per cent of the market, whereas formerly this was 90 per cent.

In Brazil, a Portuguese speaking country, American films are somewhat threatened by a law requiring exhibitors to show at least a small amount of film produced locally; however, they still have about 78 per cent of the market. Because it is not a Spanish speaking country, films produced in that language do not constitute the chief opposition; instead, this comes from Germany and France, whose films in 1938 each constituted five per cent of the total footage. Italy had two per cent, and all other competitors, four per cent.

In Chile, American films held 65 per cent of the market, in 1938. Mexican and Argentine productions in that year, and in 1937 were very popular. In 1937, the American films constituted 74 per cent of the market. French films have had good reception. In order of importance, the opposition to American product seems to come from Argentina, France, Germany and Mexico.

In Colombia, where 80 per cent was the figure agreed upon as the American share of the market in 1937, this had been reduced to 75 per cent in 1938. French, Argentina, Mexican films were the opposition, in the order named.

In Costa Rica, though American films are holding a lead described at about 77 per cent at the last competent survey, the Mexican and Argentine films definitely overweigh films from France, Germany and England.

In Cuba, with about 75 per cent of the market regarded as America's, the competitors are led by Mexico, Argentina, and Spain, with a few French and British pictures gaining a foothold.

In the Dominican Republic, though estimates of American domination range as high as 90 per cent, it is of interest to note that Mexican and Argentine films lead the competitors.

Spanish Film Competition

In Ecuador, Spanish language pictures are increasing in public favor. It is estimated that in 1937, eight per cent of the country's box-office receipts were from films of this type; and in 1938, 25 per cent of the receipts. These latter are from Mexico and Argentina.

In El Salvador, Americans held a lead in 1938 of 90 per cent. However, Mexican pictures were favored at the lower priced, smaller houses.

In Guatemala, American films have approximately 70 per cent of the market. Spanish speaking films dominate the competition.

In Haiti, the official language being French, films in that language enjoy virtually total predominance in the 25 per cent of films remaining in a market which American films dominate by 75 per cent.

In Honduras, while all available reports state that American films, obtaining about 90 per cent of the market, are "without competition," it is of note that what competition is provided comes from Mexico.

In Mexico, American films still lead "overwhelmingly"; however, native production is the leading competitor. France and Germany also place an appreciable number of pictures.

In Nicaragua, while American films have approximately 85 per cent of the market, Mexican films dominate the opposition, the low literacy rate being given as the reason. German films, and also British and French, appear to be making more of an impression.

In the Republic of Panama, while American films still had 80 per cent of the bookings, the opposition was led by Mexican and Argentine films. Films from Great Britain and France were also competitors.

In Paraguay, American films have 90 per cent of the market. French films distributed out of Buenos Aires, in Argentina, form the chief opposition. British, German, and Argentine films follow, in order of opposition.

In Peru, the American share of the market has dropped from about 90 per cent to about 49 per cent in 1938. The country has a majority of Indian blooded persons; many of these are illiterate; they are unable, in the phrasing of the United States Department of Commerce report, to "even read the Spanish sub-titles on American production; and consequently," the report added, "exhibitors will give preference to Spanish dialogue pictures that may be available."

Mexican, Argentine and Peruvian pictures (nine were produced in 1938) comprise the chief Spanish language competition. French pictures also have scored some successes in the cities. A breakdown of the playing time for the first nine and one-half months of 1938 discloses that American films had 49 per cent, Spanish language films, 41 per cent; French, five per cent; German, two per cent; Italian, two per cent; British, one per cent.

British Competition

In Trinidad, the rule which applies in other British possessions holds true; the competitive films are British. Thus, American films have about 92 per cent of the market here; and the opposition is almost solely from British product with a few East Indian productions also shown.

In Uruguay, American pictures had 75 per cent of the playing time, in 1938. As with all Latin American countries, in the smaller houses, Spanish speaking pictures, chiefly Argentine, are preferred. Argentine pictures are also being given first run. French pictures are also competitive, increasing in reception. In general order of competition come films from France, Argentina, Great Britain and Germany.

In Venezuela, the competition from Spanish language films has caused a drop in the hold which American films had on the market, of from 90 per cent to 45 per cent, in three years. The same explanation is given as that which holds true for Peru, for Chile, for Argentina, et al: in the backwoods areas, people cannot even read the subtitles in Spanish, on American produced films; now that Spanish language films from Argentina and Mexico are available, they prefer these.

Republic to Emphasize Spanish; 20th-Fox to Go "All the Way"

Republic this week joined the growing line of American companies to decide on a heavier concentration in the Latin American market. Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists and Paramount have made similar declarations.

In Chicago at Republic's two day regional sales convention, H. J. Yates and James R. Grainger said that besides more stories of interest to Spanish speaking countries, Republic will make six to eight Spanish language films.

Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, told employees this week that the company "will go all the way in its plans to expand its activities in Latin America in accordance with the policy of Pan-American coperation." Mr. Kent will study the market while at the company's Rio de Janeiro convention in June.

MAJORS START STUDYING EXHIBITORS' SUGGESTIONS FOR PACT CHANGES

Negotiating Committee Adjourns until Next Week after All-Day Session; Clearer Arbitration Clauses Proposed

Executives of the major distributing companies comprising "the negotiating committee," who have been working for nine months on a trade practice program for self-regulation of distribution-exhibition, again took up their work on Wednesday, in New York, this time to study changes in the third draft as recommended by exhibitor organizations. The third draft was submitted to the owners for ratification on the night of March 30th.

All-Day Session

Meeting in the Yacht Room of the Hotel Astor Wednesday in a session which began in the morning and lasted through the day, with time out for lunch, were: William F. Rodgers, E. Aaron and Tyree Dillard, all of MGM; Neil Agnew and Irving Cohen, Paramount; Gradwell Sears and I. Howard Levinson, Warners; Ned Depinet, RKO, and Abe Montague and Irving Moross of Columbia. Harry Brandt of the ITOA talked with the conferees later.

The meeting will be resumed next week as most of those present planned to attend the Variety Club convention in Detroit over the weekend.

Seek Clearer Definitions

Recommendations from several exhibitor groups have been trickling in to the majors' committee, and pertain chiefly to demands for a clearer definition of the clauses in the system of arbitration as proposed by the distributors. So far as is known the owners have given no suggestions of specific nature for clarifying arbitration.

With the Congressional hearings on the Neely anti-block booking bill disposed of, and the subsequent feeling established in distribution that there will be no block booking laws enacted at this session of Congress to interfere with self-regulation, the distributors are understood to be ready to complete a document satisfactory to the majority now that the new selling season is at hand. The pact would apply to the new season's contracts.

Presuming that the distributors' committee in their last meetings arrive at solutions sufficient to satisfy the recommendations of the majority of exhibitor groups, new negotiations with the owners will not be necessary.

The distributors have repeated that they will give no concessions other than those contained in the present pact. Their present activity is concerned almost entirely with clarifying or changing the existing clauses.

The attitude of Allied States to the present code apparently still stands as expressed at the time of the Neely block booking bill hearings, when, on April 3rd, the organization denounced it as "incomplete," and added in effect, that the association would continue its efforts to get "relief" from "aggressions" through legislation and the courts.

On the same day, Leo Wolcott, president of the ITO of Iowa and Nebraska, said, "These proposals apparently bear close relationship to the former proposals which were rejected as inadequate at the time."

At the Neely hearing, on April 5th, the pact was denounced by Colonel H. A. Cole, Allied president as meaningless, ambiguous and incomplete. He attacked block booking and blind selling, and said that the draft's proposal of 20 per cent cancellation did not apply to all films, but that the figure was graduated according to average price pictures, so that in some blocks it would be only 10 and 15 per cent.

CLEVELAND SETTLES; TORONTO STUDIES

An amicable settlement of an injunction action brought by Paul Gusdanovic, operating the La Salle theatre in Cleveland, to restrain Twentieth Century-Fox and Vitagraph from serving the newly opened Shore theatre with prior or day and date runs, was effected Monday in the office of Lee Skeel, judge in Common Pleas court. Price adjustment to the La Salle and a guarantee of day and date availability were involved in the settlement.

The Independent Theatres Association of Ontario will study the clearance situation in Canada, to obtain reforms, according to N. A. Taylor, vice-president of the association, who said, "I should like to see clearance as we now have it either abolished or moderated so that it bears some semblance to the purpose for which it was conceived."

Other Units' Reactions

On April 10th the ITO of Southern California approved the pact "in principle."

Also on the same day, the MPTO of Nebraska and Western Iowa and the MPTO of Virginia reported that their respective executive approved, but that members "soon" would have "an opportunity" to express individual sentiments.

St. Louis exhibitors were reported insisting on higher cancellation privileges.

John Rugar, president of the Intermountain Theatres Association, of Salt Lake City, said he would approve the pact if it contained adequate relief for independents, but that, if it didn't, he would favor legislative action.

On the same day, New York Allied approved the proposals. It found certain errors which it believed could be ironed out.

Also on April 10th, the Theatre Owners and Managers of the Rocky Mountain Region endorsed the draft in principle and especially for its arbitration rules.

ITOA's Proposals

On April 13, the New York ITOA approved the proposals in principle, but suggested that all disputes between exhibitor and distributor be settled by arbitration, and that licensing terms and conditions not subject to arbitration be made more specific. They authorized Harry Brandt, president, to seek revisions and clarifications with the majors.

ITO's specific requests were: That a panel of neutral arbitrators shall be elected by affiliated distributors and independent exhibitors, with effiliated exhibitors excluded; that distributors' liability not be limited to liquidated damages as fixed by the license contract; that the code include a provision prohibiting re-allocating films from lower to higher classifications.

On April 16, Frank Gassil, president of the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association, declared his association favored the code, and asked for early establishment of arbitration boards.

Starting their yearly convention on April 17, at Des Moines, the Allied of Iowa and Nebraska took no action, but endorsed the Neely bill unanimously. The consensus was that the code represented an "advance" but was "inadequate."

"Qualified" Acceptance

On April 20th Ed Kuykendall, MPTO president, said that failure of the distributors' negotiating committee to complete a definition of arbitration procedure forced "qualified" acceptance by MPTO regional directors. Until replies from all directors were in, he said, the organization would take no definite stand. At the time, however, he said, enough replies were in from the directors to indicate they "substantially" favored the code, but agreed on the need for better arbitration definition.

Later, he said that other exhibitor organizations should withhold their acceptance of the code until the suggested corrections had been made.

From St. Louis this week came reports that local exhibitors do not like those portions of the pact which they interpret as forcing the exhibitor to exercise his exclusion privilege within 14 days after the close of the first-run in his territory.

Fred Wehrenberg, president of the MPTO of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, suggested that the exhibitor have the right to use the exclusion privilege up to 20 per cent of his film commitments, provided that he does so within 14 days after the picture becomes available for his house. Other exhibitors have asked, it is said, for a stronger clause on designated play dates.

Paramount Estimates $1,300,000 As First Quarter Earnings

Paramount estimates its earnings after interest and all charges for the first quarter ended April 1st at $1,300,000. This amount includes $678,000 representing Paramount's direct and indirect net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially owned nonconsolidated subsidiaries.

From Paramount came the announcement this week that the annual stockholders' meeting will be held on June 20, at the New York home offices. The entire board of directors, whose terms expire with the meeting, is expected to be reelected. The board is composed of Barney Balaban, Adolph Zukor, Stanton Griffis, Austin Keogh, Neil Agnew, John W. Hicks, Y. Frank Freeman, and E. V. Richards.

General Theatres Equipment, Inc., has reported for the quarter ended March 31st, a profit of $145,543, after taxes and charges, equal to 24 cents a share on the common stock. This compares to $120,264 profit in the same period last year.

At the annual stockholders' meeting of Pathe Film Corporation Tuesday, with 100 present, all directors were reelected with the exception of O. Henry Briggs, whose place was taken by Allan P. Kirby, and T. P. Loach, succeeded by K. M. Young.

571 BILLS INTRODUCED IN STATES; 13 PASSED, 233 KILLED, 325 PEND

North Carolina Amusement Tax and North Dakota Theatre Licensing Authority Measures Alone Considered Detrimental

In a year of unprecedented state legislative activity involving motion pictures, principally in exhibition, and witnessing to date the introduction of no less than 571 bills directly or otherwise affecting the business, the industry nears the end of the annual legislative season virtually unscathed.

In only two places have state bills directly detrimental to the industry been passed: North Carolina voted an amusement tax of $5 for all entertainments with admissions over 25 cents, and North Dakota set up a licensing authority to pass on applications for building new theatres in towns where one or more operate, and the constitutionality of which law already has been challenged.

All the remaining 11 bills passed that directly or otherwise affect the business are favorable.

The Sunday Show

Arkansas legalized Sunday motion pictures; Maine legalized Sunday performances between three and 11 p.m., and Vermont acted similarly, permitting performances after six p.m. In North Carolina, the Sunday closing law was repealed in Johnston, Hyde and Yadkin counties. Wicomico County, Maryland, acted likewise. A majority in Tennessee may now vote for Sunday shows.

Kansas killed the sales-token law, a move favorable to exhibitors. Exhibitors benefit by the anti-marathon bill, prohibiting a form of competition, in Nebraska. Owners and others lost their fight to prevent pari mutuel betting in Onslow and New Hanover counties, North Carolina.

Since January 1st, 46 states have held regular sessions, Georgia and Idaho contemplate special sessions, and to date legislatures in 25 states have adjourned, as follows:

Alabama
Arizona
Arkansas
Indiana
Kansas
Kentucky
Louisiana
Maryland
Minnesota
Mississippi
Montana
Nevada
New Mexico
North Carolina
North Dakota
Oregon
Rhode Island
South Dakota
Tennessee
Utah
Vermont
Virginia
Washington
West Virginia
Wyoming

In the foregoing states and in the others still to adjourn, some 233 measures have been killed that directly or otherwise would have affected the motion picture business. These involved proposals to censor or kill existing censorship laws; enact new taxes; divorce exhibition from production-distribution; provide for two projectionists in each theatre booth and legislate virtually every form of theatre or film exchange operation, mostly detrimentally.

Ends of Sessions Near

Of the 571 bills introduced, not a single censorship, theatre divorcement, reel tax or new admission tax has been passed to date, nor is there any likelihood that any serious restrictions will be forthcoming from among the 325 bills still pending, especially with the end of the sessions near in most of the 21 states still meeting.

BACK OHIO RENTAL TAXES ARE SOUGHT

On April 15th, a Columbus taxpayer filed a mandamus action calling upon the Ohio Tax Commission to recover the 3 per cent sales tax on film rentals from January 1, 1935, to date. The aggregate tax involved amounts to more than $1,200,000. The following table illustrates what the payment of the back taxes means to theatre owners.

AVERAGE WEEKLY FILM RENTAL	BACK TAX FOR FOUR YEARS
$ 100	$ 624
200	1,248
300	1,872
400	2,496
500	3,120
1,000	6,240

At a meeting last week in Columbus of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, attended by David Palfreyman, a defense program was formulated to fight the action.

Colorado and Oklahoma were to adjourn this week. Michigan is expected to adjourn on May 3rd, Ohio on May 10th, Missouri on May 15th, Texas on May 20th and Pennsylvania later that month.

California's adjournment date is expected to be June 1st, likewise South Carolina's, while New Hampshire's date also is due sometime in June.

There is no time limit for the sessions running in Florida, Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Wisconsin.

New Legislative Developments

The Delaware Sunday film bill which had passed both houses of the legislature and was designed to legalize films in Wilmington providing approved by a majority of the voters at a referendum at the next municipal election, this week was vetoed by Richard C. McMullen, governor of the state. The veto came on the final legislative day and the bill would have automatically become law otherwise.

Senator Paul R. Rinard of Wilmington, who sponsored the bill, said he would have it restored to the calendar. The measure legalized Sunday films in cities over 25,000, and as such would have only affected Wilmington.

Governor Lewis O. Barrows has a bill legalizing Sunday film shows in Maine. Under a local option clause cities and towns will be permitted to vote on allowing Sunday films between 3 p.m. and 11:30 p.m.

Referendum Bill Through Assembly

The Owens bill in the New York legislature, providing for a referendum in certain villages on the question of Sunday film shows, has passed the Assembly. The bill has been reported out in the Senate and on Tuesday had advanced to third reading.

The city council, Humboldt, Tenn., has voted down the proposal for Sunday films. The action was taken on a citizens' petition to permit the showings, which met opposition from the Humboldt Pastors Association.

The South Carolina House this week tabled a bill to legalize Sunday film shows for charity.

The trial of the Sunday film show action against Interstate Enterprises in Thomasville, Ga., has been set for May 29th. The case has been postponed several times because of illness of attorneys.

Wisconsin Tax Bill

The State and Local Government of the Wisconsin Senate has introduced a bill providing for a tax of $2.50 per 1,000 feet on all motion picture film. Exhibitors and exchange men will present an organized protest against the bill, which would become effective July 1st, and the proceeds used for old age assistance. Distributors would be required to make quarterly reports to the secretary of state as to the number of feet of film sold and include their tax payments with this report. Violators would be subject to fines ranging from $100 to $1,000 and from one to six months imprisonment.

A committee has been named by the New York legislature to study the proposed two per cent sales tax. It is expected that its report, due by the end of next week, will settle the question of whether the retail impost will be levied on theatres.

The Quebec assembly's private bills committee has approved imposition of an amusement tax of 10 per cent on receipts of Quebec City cinemas. The taxation proposal was contained in the City of Quebec bill and brings the total taxes on theatres in the City of Quebec to about 37 per cent. The tax has to be approved by the Quebec legislative council and an endeavor will be made to have it killed there.

Censorship Bill Killed

The Ohio censorship bill was killed in the House Education Committee this week when a substitute bill covering newsreels only was presented. Action on substitute bill was postponed, with little chance of passage. The position of Roy Reichelderfer, Chief Censor of Ohio, was abolished by the state finance committee. The Director of Education was designated to fill the post.

A bill to permit the showing of prize fight films at motion picture houses in Iowa has passed both houses and awaits the governor's signature. The bill is a repeal of a previous measure which made illegal such showings.

Passing the New York House and Senate the Moffat-Coudert bill, investing radio networks, stations and announcers with immunity from libel when a "fair and true" report of news and proceedings is broadcast, is now on Governor Herbert Lehman's desk.

The Senate Banking and Commerce Committee in Ottawa has approved a bill to set up a national film board for Canada. The board, under the direction of a commissioner will coordinate activities of departments which use motion pictures.

The judiciary committee of the Illinois House has recommended by a vote of 11 to 4 to report favorably the measure to abolish double features in that state.

The Milwaukee common council judiciary committee which has been considering the Kalupa proposal to compel exhibitors to install illuminated clocks in their auditoriums, has again tabled the measure.

Theatre scrubwomen, who allegedly work seven days a week in some houses in Connecticut, are entitled to one day off weekly, according to a ruling of Frank J. DeSesa, assistant attorney general. J. M. Tone, labor commissioner, requested an opinion on this point, since the hour law has an exemption with respect to janitors.

TELECAST BY SARNOFF DEDICATES RCA'S BUILDING AT WORLD'S FAIR

RCA President, in Flushing, L. I., Announces "Birth" of Television to Group in Rockefeller Center, Eight Miles Away

David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, dedicating the RCA Building at the New York World's Fair, at Flushing, last Thursday, publicly announced through a telecast to 150 news and trade paper men eight miles away in New York, the "birth" of television as a regular daily service to the public.

What They Saw and Heard

The spectators assembled at the receiving end, on the 62nd floor of the RCA Building in Rockefeller Center, also saw the televised pictures of the Fair grounds, and saw and heard Major Lenox Lohr, president of the National Broadcasting Company, introduce David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America; announcer George Hicks of the NBC introduce notables; an RKO-Pathe film, "Television," detail the methods by which a television program is planned, televised, and broadcast; the first sports event ever telecast, a boxing match between Jack Pembridge, Golden Gloves 118-pound champion, and Pat Dunne, of the New York Police Athletic League, with Max Baer refereeing and Bill Stern announcing.

When the telecast was over, they had inspected four RCA television receiving models, which go on sale Monday, ranging in price from about $175 for a television attachment to a radio, giving only images, 3⅜ inches deep by 4⅜ inches wide, to $600 for a completely equipped console model giving a picture 7⅜x9¾.

One of a Series

The demonstration was one of a series by RCA to publicize the advent of television April 30th at the Fair with sales of sets and a schedule by NBC television Station W2XBS, two hours weekly of entertainment and about five hours daily of testing programs.

Besides the journalists and speakers those at the dedicatory telecast were Cornelius W. Bliss, Edward Lasker, M. H. Aylesworth, Thomas H. Beck, Dr. Walter Damrosch, Herbert Bayard Swope, Major Albert Warner, Ira Hirschmann, Edwin S. Friendly, Neville Miller, Major General Harbord, and others. The ceremonies also were broadcast by NBC.

Major Lohr, introducing Mr. Sarnoff, said: "Today, under his leadership, we are developing television, facsimile and many other scientific marvels that will be the commonplaces of tomorrow."

Mr. Sarnoff noted that radio had employed hundreds of thousands of persons, and thought that television held the same promise of employment. He likened the advent of radio to "a major victory" of civilization, and added:

"It is with a feeling of humbleness that I come to this moment of announcing the birth in this country of a new art so important in its implications that it is bound to affect all society. It is an art which shines like a torch of hope in a troubled world. It is a creative force which we must learn to utilize for the benefit of all mankind."

On Sunday President Roosevelt will deliver the address opening the Fair, under the television camera.

The NBC mobile telecasting unit, with an Iconoscope camera and a telecasting unit, will relay the sight and sound of the President's address opening the Fair, and other first-day scenes, to the NBC television transmitter atop the Empire State Building in New York City, eight miles away. From there, the scenes will be telecast to the New York City area. NBC engineers estimate that receivers within a range of 55 miles should be able to pick up the image.

The President will be introduced by Grover A. Whalen, president of the Fair, the program starting with the opening parade at 12:30 p.m. (EDST). The two will speak from a rostrum in front of the Federal Government Building, facing the Court of Peace, at the Fair. The Iconoscope cameras will be with the newsreel cameras on a stand about 40 feet in front. The sound and sight signals will go from the cameras

Extent of Entertainment, and Limitations, Are Portrayed

by AARON NADELL

The extent and limitations of the entertainment which television today is prepared to offer to large groups, as well as to the individual family, were strikingly portrayed at the press showing in the RCA Building at Radio City last Thursday. The large room in which the demonstration took place was essentially a theatre auditorium, long and narrow, with seats arranged to face what in a theatre would be one of the side walls. Along this wall appeared a row of television screens, each showing a picture 7⅜" x 9¾", the largest currently available. Twenty persons watched one screen but those in the fifth or rear row needed good eyes. Those in the first row, within about three feet of the screen, sometimes were unable to distinguish the features of a face or the details of some item of background, but at other times the scanning improved to give a moderately perfect image. The room was totally darkened; under those conditions screen illumination was what a modern theatre exhibitor would call fair but by no means brilliant.

The need for a multiplicity of screens was not derived from basic inability to enlarge the image, but from the limitations of picture grain. Scanning lines of pictures transmitted to current television standards, on screens of the size indicated, are roughly from 1/50th to 1/70th inch apart. If the images shown were enlarged to the size of a small theatre screen, the scanning lines would be from ¼" to ½" apart, rendering the grain glaringly visible except to those seated a considerable distance away. The number of scanning lines used per picture can be increased only at the cost of using a still higher frequency for radio or wire transmission, but the frequencies at present used, in the vicinity of sixty megacycles (five meters), are about as high as currently available apparatus can handle with any assurance of reliable operation.

Picture brightness can be increased at the cost of shortening the life of the fluorescent material of the cathode ray tube in which the image is formed. The brightness at present chosen represents a compromise between the most desirable reproduction and the commercial necessity of fairly long life in a very large and expensive tube.

Transmitting and receiving antennas were within sight range of each other, a condition indispensable for television broadcasting because the ultra-high radio frequencies do not follow the curvature of the earth. To carry the same program to California would have required either a coaxial cable (which does not exist at present) or a chain of some sixty rebroadcasting stations which also do not exist, although when they are built each station can do double duty by supplying receivers located within sight range of its antenna.

ROOSEVELT SPEECH UNDER TELEVISION

through a coaxial cable to one of the two motor vans comprising the NBC mobile relay unit. From the van containing an ultra short wave relay transmitter, the sight signal will be relayed over a directional beam antenna to the Empire State transmitter. The sound signal will be sent over a separate channel.

The program also will have films from the Radio City studios and will last three and one-half hours.

The regular schedule of telecasting calls for a minimum of two hours weekly: between 8 and 9 p. m. Wednesday and Friday evenings. There will be also outdoor "pickups" by the NBC mobile units, of scheduled news events on one day per week: Wednesday, Thursday, or Friday afternoon. There will also be 23 hours weekly of "test" programs for dealers.

The March of Time will be used this summer in daily test broadcasts for dealers, NBC announced. Back issues will be used in the daytime broadcasts, and some new issues for the entertainment broadcasts at night.

The RCA exhibit is devoted mainly to an exposition of television, and includes a hall of television; a television laboratory; a radio living room of tomorrow; a radio living room of today; a "Telemobile" unit; a television camera set-up and a model television receiver; a laboratory model's "flask" type television receiver; a stock model television receiver in a clear glass cabinet; radio facsimile broadcasting; international radio communications; marine radio communications and safety devices; sound broadcasting and radio products, including sets; other RCA and subsidiary products.

Other developments in the field are these:

The Columbia Broadcasting System, which has spent about $800,000 on its Chrysler Tower transmitter, is rushing it to completion.

The DuMont Laboratories, of Passaic, N. J., are advertising their receiving sets, and their transmitting station at Passaic may broadcast during the day, if Federal Communications Commission permission is forthcoming.

Other sets, notably the Andrea, are on sale.

FCC Delays Licensing

That the Federal Communications Commission does not share totally the optimism with which the larger companies are introducing television, is evidenced by its unwillingness to grant a commercial license for telecasting, though applications for such have been on file with the commission for almost a year. The situation, obviously, requires a set of standards by which to determine the requirements for "good" television transmission; and the set of standards submitted by the Radio Manufacturer's Association after long bickering, had not been adopted by the Commission at mid-week. It is believed that the television committee of the Commission, headed by Commander F. T. Craven, feels that the standards are too rigid.

The department stores this week and last were preparing demonstrations of television receiving sets; in some cases, advertising independently their demonstrations; in others, cooperatively advertising with the companies whose receivers they were demonstrating; in all cases, basing their advertisements on the regular television programs of the NBC, beginning with the opening of the Fair on Sunday. The RCA inserted a series of advertisements in the leading New York newspapers for its special World's Fair issues on Saturday and Sunday. The Dumont Laboratories of Passaic, New Jersey, advertised their sets in cooperation with department store demonstrators. The Dumont sets range from $435 to $540. Andrea Television receivers are from $79.95 for a kit to $189.50 for a receiver.

Ian Javal, commercial director of Baird Television, Ltd., was to arrive in New York Friday from England, bringing equipment and a staff of engineers, to set up receiving and other apparatus in the projection room at the Gaumont British offices at 1600 Broadway. So that the new equipment might receive the broadcasts from the World's Fair on Sunday, a special aerial was being installed. Present plans are to push the sale of Baird receivers for the home, and also for Broadway theatres. Deals are said to be in the making for installation of the Baird system at a newsreel theatre in the Times Square district. Use of the system in London theatres has been successful, according to company and independent reports from England. Shown in three Gaumont British theatres in London have been a boat race and boxing matches. Gaumont British is a large financial partner in the television company. Plans for invasion of the American market have been under way for some time, with a financial company, Baird Television Corporation of America, already in existence.

Television was the chief topic at the annual spring convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel last week. Not only did Mr. Sarnoff (by radiogram) emphasize the near commercial success of television, but most leading papers by the engineer members were devoted to the subject. And Mr. DuMont's remarks on the undue rigidity of the FCC television standards were read to the convention.

"TELEVISION AN ALLY"—SARNOFF

Television and the motion picture need not be competitors; they are, in fact, complementary. Forward looking exhibitors will use television as an adjunct to their programs. The motion picture industry may expect to be making films for television's use, shortly.

That was the gist of a radiogram sent last Thursday by David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, to the annual spring convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, and read to the society's banquet that evening by E. A. Williford, president of the S.M.P.E.

On the same day appeared an interview in the Wall Street Journal, with Mr. Sarnoff, wherein he asserted that new industries, such as television, should not be hampered by heavy taxation, lest "incentive be lost".

Matthews Appointed Motiograph President

The appointment of H. Thorwell Matthews as president and general manager of Motiograph, Inc., one of the two large manufacturers of studio projection equipment, has been announced by the company's board of directors. Mr. Matthews has been secretary of Motiograph for the last two years, and replaces Joseph B. Kleckner, who resigned recently from the presidency.

Bans on 'Ecstasy' And 'Sunset' Still Hold in New York

The New York State Board of Regents, at their April meeting, held last Friday, dismissed the appeals by Grand National Pictures on "Sunset Murder Case" and by Eureka Productions on the 1939 version of "Ecstasy."

In turning down "Sunset Murder Case," the majority found that Grand National, which first obtained a license under the name "Sunset Strip Case," had failed to remove all the objectionable parts in resubmitting the film under its new name and that the picture was "indecent" within the meaning of the law.

The appeal on "Ecstasy" was dismissed for the second time, the first time on September 15, 1936. "It is our opinion that a marriage sequence addition, together with other minor alterations, does not remove the fundamental objections heretofore made," the Regents report said.

The New York appellate division will review proceedings on "The Birth of a Baby," probably in its May hearing term, which has been denied a license for general exhibition in New York State, as a result of an appeal filed by Ellis Staley, former N. Y. supreme court judge, on behalf of the American Committee on Maternal Welfare, Inc., and Sam Citron.

British Ban on "Mamlock"

The British censors have banned the Russian motion picture "Professor Mamlock" as being too political. Following the censors' action the London County Council formally announced that all press showings of uncensored films are illegal. The film already had been press shown.

Will Grant Appeal

The Virginia supreme court will grant an appeal to the city of Lynchburg in the case involving censorship rights, it was announced this week. The question is whether a city can ban a film after it has been passed by the State Board of Censors. The film involved is "Birth of a Baby."

ITOA Defers Censor Move

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York has deferred a move to seek repeal of the censor law this year. The organization is considering sponsoring such a measure in the next session of the legislature, and in the meantime will attempt to muster exhibitor sentiment for repeal throughout the state.

New Protest on "Bell"

The Business Men's Association of Peterborough, Ontario, has joined in the protest of Brantford, Ontario, against the showing of "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" unless it gives credit to Brantford as the birthplace of the telephone.

Selznick International has moved its New York office from 230 Park avenue to the International Building in Rockefeller Center. Alexander Film Company last week moved to 630 Ninth Avenue in New York. Alexander Prevue Company, new trailer concern, will also be established there.

WAGE, HOUR DEMANDS BY 7 UNIONS FOLLOW FAILURE TO SETTLE DISPUTES

Thirty-Hour Work Week Sought; War for Control Resumes as Attempts to Reach Compromise on Minority Charges Fails

Demands for a six hour day and five day week, vacations with pay and a guarantee of 40 weeks work annually were drafted this week by leaders of seven studio unions in Hollywood, the second group in two weeks to present an ultimatum to the studios. The action added another facet to the many sided labor dispute being waged in the studios which was thrown into further confusion last weekend by the breakdown of negotiations for settlement of factional fights within the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the resumption of counter litigation which had been postponed.

Withdrawal of Charges Refused

Hopes for peace on the several fronts, expressed in statements last week by the negotiators, were blasted last Friday when Jeff Kibre, minority leader of Studio Technicians Local 37, officers of which have been ousted by the IATSE, refused to accept a compromise under which charges filed with the Los Angeles Regional Labor Board were to have been withdrawn and when the rebelling leaders of Local 37 announced an appeal for a studio-wide union dues strike against the IATSE.

In addition to the charges before the Labor Board accusing IATSE leaders of collusion with the producers and of company unionism, Local 37 officers are backing a proposed investigation of studio labor "racketeering" by the Los Angeles County grand jury, which last week was postponed to May 2nd, and are demanding restoration of complete autonomy which was granted last fall by the International officers and later rescinded.

It was feared that the failure to arbitrate the dispute would result in a reopening of the proposed investigation by the district attorney and the grand jury and a reinstatement of the countrywide strike call issued two weeks ago by George E. Browne, IATSE president, and then suspended in the hope of a settlement by mediation.

Seven Unions Join Demands

The new union wage and hour demands were drafted at a conference attended by Al Speede, business agent of Electricians Local 40, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; William Castle, Carpenters Local 946; Lou C. Helm, Studio Utility Employees Local 724; D. T. Wayne, Machinists Lodge 1185; Ben Martinez, Plasterers Local 755; Herbert Sorrell, Moving Picture Painters Local 644, and Guy H. Cooper, recording secretary of Studio Technicians Local 37, IATSE. They were to be presented to Pat Casey, labor contact man for the producers.

On Tuesday it was indicated that international headquarters of the unions involved, especially the IATSE, the Electrical Brotherhood and the Carpenters and Joiners, all signatories of the five year basic agreement, would have to outlaw the union demands on the ground that the matters suggested for negotiation should be handled by international officers rather than the heads of the locals.

Also to be laid before Mr. Casey were the demands for new wage scales and working conditions, details of which were not made public, presented to the producers two weeks ago by four other unions with the authorization and supervision of IATSE leaders. The four unions were Studio Photographers Local 659; Sound Technicians Local 695; Laboratory Technicians Local 683 and Studio Technicians Local 37. The presence of Local 37 in both lists is accounted for by the fact that Lew Blix who acted as business agent for the Technicians under the IATSE is not recognized by the rebelling group who are demanding autonomy. These demands were the basis of the strike call issued by Mr. Browne.

BRITISH FILMS, RADIO PREPARING FOR WAR

Plans for a new theatre, seating 1,200, at Beeston, England, include provision for an air raid shelter in time of war, while "The Warning," semi-official air raid preparedness film, made by British National, will be shown in 247 provincial theatres before May 25th.

A measure of Government control over non-entertainment programs, especially news bulletins broadcast by British Broadcasting Corporation, has been denied officially, despite reports to that effect. The Government charter granted to BBC permits control in cases of emergency.

Both groups deny any connection between the wage and hour demands and the dispute and resultant accusations centering in Local 37.

35-Hour Week in Force

The 30-hour week included by the seven unions in their present draft compares with the 35-hour week now in operation under the basic agreement which is in force with all IATSE studio unions. The 30-hour week demand is seen as an attempt to increase overtime pay. Although details of the demands made by the four IATSE unions were not known, it was reported that in addition to the requirement of a closed shop they were insisting upon a general wage increase and an increase in the minimum work call from three to six hours. According to studio estimates this provision would mean an increase in wages of $2,000,000 annually. International Motion Picture Almanac estimates that studio labor in Hollywood at present consumes 1.2 per cent of the total estimated yearly production cost of from $175,000,000 to $200,000,000.

While the seven union conference was proceeding the ousted officers of Local 37, headed by Joseph Carpenter, requested Dr. Towne Nylander, Regional Labor Board director, to set a date for a hearing on the charges made against the IATSE by Mr. Kibre. The director, who had previously announced the breakdown of the negotiations, sent the files on the entire case to the National Board in Washington with a request for action.

Suit to Set Precedent

As trial of the counter suits filed by the IATSE and Local 37 opened before Judge E. H. Wilson in Superior Court, Los Angeles, Tuesday, the constitutionality of rules and by-laws binding locals to their internationals became the principal issue. The case, which may affect relations not only between IATSE units but other labor groups as well, is to determine the extent of the international's rights in the government and operations of locals.

The first witness called was Joseph W. Carpenter, Local 37 president. He and other officers were suspended by IATSE representatives on March 12th. Questioned by C. H. Hartke, attorney for John Gatelee and Frank Stickling of the International, Mr. Carpenter charged that the IATSE was not justified in suspending officers and autonomy. He testified to the withdrawal of funds from the local's account "to protect the interests of members" and said that the Alliance's demand that the local oust Jeff Kibre, minority leader, on charges of subversion, was not acceded to because the "allegations were unfounded."

In his opening statements Mr. Hartke said he would prove the International acted within its legal rights and constitution in suspending the officers and that Alliance officers had not engaged in any campaign of vilification. A. Brigham Rose, attorney for Local 37 officers charged the Alliance with fraudulent actions which he said made the by-laws inoperative.

Dues Strike Begun

In announcing the drive for a dues strike against the International Mr. Carpenter said that 10,000 pledges had been circulated not only in Local 37 ranks but in photographers, laboratory workers and sound technicians Locals as well. On Tuesday the leaders claimed that more than 1,000 had been signed and returned.

John W. Gatelee, IATSE representative, predicted that the dues strike would make little headway and claimed "solid support, outside of a few exceptions" for the International's policies and actions. Mr. Gatelee also placed the entire blame for the failure of negotiations for settlement of the dispute on Mr. Kibre and the minority group of Local 37 who, he said, did not want peace. "The IA from now on," he added, "will recommend that the various Hollywood locals seek their own agreements with producers and will stand by and assist them in every way possible at their request."

Under a court order issued late last week John P. Nick, head of the Motion Picture Machine Operators union in St. Louis and a vice-president of the IATSE, and Clyde A. Weston, business agent of the Local, were ousted from control of the union. Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley appointed James A. McKeown receiver and ordered that control of the union be restored to members under his supervision. The receiver is empowered to suspend members who were admitted improperly by the former leader. The order also prevents interference by the IATSE with the Local or with the 60 members who joined in the suit.

Dramatists To Resume Study of Film Plan

Adoption of the Wilk-Wharton plan to revive the film backing of stage plays would probably not be for longer than a trial period in order to see how the new provisions work out, it was reported this week.

The Dramatists Guild Council is scheduled to meet Monday for further study of the plan, and in the absence of Robert Sherwood, president, the meeting will be headed by George Kaufman of Edward Childs Carpenter. With Sidney Fleischer, Guild attorney and coordinator in film dealings recuperating in the South from a recent appendectomy, no definite action is expected at the meeting.

ADVERTISERS TO USE 500 FILMS AT NEW YORK FAIR TO SELL PRODUCTS

Fifty Auditoriums to Run Pictures 16 Hours on Teaching and Advertising Subjects; Equipment Concerns Represented

The eyes of millions turn this weekend to one of America's biggest shows, the $155,000,000 New York World's Fair, standing on a reclaimed strip at Flushing Meadows, Long Island. The Fair opens Sunday in the presence of President Roosevelt, dignitaries from all over the world and an anticipated 1,000,000 paid customers. Fair press agents have predicted an eventual gross business of a billion dollars by the closing in October, and a total attendance of 50,000,000.

500 Films Being Shown

In the shadows of Grover Whalen's "Perisphere" they will see all of the colors of the rainbow decorating the stone and steel of the 50-odd auditoria of "The World of Tomorrow," spreading out in four directions, housing commercial, religious, educational, scientific and other exhibits of all kinds and description. They may see, too, within those 50 auditoriums, at almost any time of the 16 hours a day of operations, any one of 500 films extolling the virtues of transportation, foodstuffs, chemicals, building materials, automobiles, kitchen utensils, petroleum and tobacco, foreign travel, rugs, drugs, et al. And practically all of the screenings will carry no charge.

The film, as the Fair starts, represents one of the most important media to be used during the six-month show by the concessionaires and manufacturers and others to add visual emphasis to sales messages on the product they will exhibit.

One Feature from Hollywood

Aside from this use of educational, scientific and advertising films, the participation of the motion picture as a subject of the motion picture industry will be through the contribution by Hollywood majors of a single feature telling the history of the country from its beginnings, to be titled either "Cavalcade of America" or "These United States." And even this film will be used to teach—Americanism—by the Government, in its Federal Building. The film, however, will not be available for some time after the Fair's opening; Cecil B. DeMille is still working on it in Hollywood. All eight large companies are contributing financially and otherwise.

Sponsors of the Fair during the early planning had tried to interest the organized industry in a big exhibit for and in behalf of Hollywood. Members of the MPPDA met several times, but decided not to participate, some feeling that the motion picture is in the show business the year round.

Radio and television will be featured heavily at the Fair, in actual operation, in exhibits and otherwise.

Many of the large national manufacturers of products sold also to theatre owners will have exhibits, among them Western Electric, RCA, Peter Clark, West Disinfecting, Carrier Engineering, General Electric, Owens-Corning, Pittsburgh Glass, Westinghouse, et al.

Eastman Kodak, Agfa Ansco and Dupont also will participate.

Meanwhile exhibitors of the area, on Broadway, and throughout the city's farflung five boroughs, on Long Island, in Westchester, New Jersey, lower Connecticut and elsewhere in the Metropolitan District, are non-committal on their expectations of the reaction of the Fair on their box offices. With San Francisco's Golden Gate Exposition now along in its second month, word comes that receipts in the nine downtown first-run houses in San Francisco are off approximately one-third as a result of that competition. It will be remembered, too, that Chicago's World's Fair and its famous Sally Rand exhibition with bubbles frequently had adverse effects on Chicago's movie box offices.

Regardless, New York theatres, principally the downtown first-runs on Broadway, have been polishing up and decorating fronts with banners and flags for the Fair's opening. None of the houses will change prices or policies. Most of the theatres, in their advertising, will direct an occasional message to Fair visitors.

CITY MAY HAVE RIGHT TO IMPOSE TAX ON TICKETS

Under the provisions of a bill introduced in the Senate by Joseph D. Nunan, Jr., the City of New York is authorized to impose a tax not exceeding five cents on each admission ticket sold at the New York World's Fair. The proceeds would be used for unemployment relief purposes.

Films at the World's Fair

The Fair Corporation itself, the Government, states, foreign nations and scores of commercial exhibitors will utilize the moving image and the silver screen to an unprecedented extent.

Mr. Whalen estimated that upwards of 500 motion pictures will be exhibited, without charge, in more than 50 auditoriums ranging from little 50-seat theatres to the Music Hall at the Fair seating 2,500.

The type of offerings, he said, will be as varied as their locale, a serious work, depicting the growth of a nation, the film industry's "Cavalcade," lighter features, comedies, animated cartoons, industrial films, educational pictures, scenic shots—many in color, most with sound and a few silent.

The Fair management has designated Official Motion Picture Producers, Inc., as the official motion picture photographers for the Fair. Edward Ruby, of the Ruby Film Company, and Leslie Winik, known in New York film circles as a theatre builder and operator, head the company.

They will produce a series of Fair films in 16 and 8 mm. sizes for distribution to schools and non-theatrical organizations.

The company will also have its own exhibit at the Fair which will feature motion picture equipment of all types.

The first of the Fair films has been finished. It is a two-reel sound film titled "New York World's Fair 1939," extolling the exposition. It was offered free of charge to schools, clubs and other non-theatrical organizations.

The film has a running time of 16 minutes and is available in 35 or 16 millimeters. It carries a musical background and a descriptive dialogue by John S. Young, Fair director of radio.

"The City," in four reels, portraying the problems of a modern metropolis, and how they are solved, is another highlight. This was produced by Pare Lorentz, creator of "The River" and "The Plow That Broke the Plains," for the Federal Government, and will be shown as a part of the science and education local exhibit in the Science and Education Building. "The City" was initiated by the American Planning Institute of architects and city planners, and financed by the Carnegie Corporation.

The motion picture will be used to a somewhat lesser extent with other media to dramatize the story of the focal exhibits in the Production and Distribution, Transportation, and Communication Buildings. For example, the picture will show on seven separate screens how man, money, science and machinery produce goods which release the consumer for leisure time.

Texas will have a feature-length film produced along the lines of the March of Time newsreel. Thousands of Texans march before the camera to enact the contemporary life of the state. The citrus harvest in the valley, threshing in the Panhandle, lumbering in East Texas, ranching in West Texas, Texans at work and at play, Texans and the arts—these and more will be described on the screen in the Texas building in the Court of States.

Other States' Films

Arkansas will come to the screen with a 20-minute picture "glorifying the blessings of the state" and emphasizing the scenery of the Ozarks. Other states to illustrate their origin, growth and present-day status with films include Nebraska, Washington among others.

The large automotive companies will utilize pictures importantly. Chrysler Motors has a sound film to recite the story of transportation from the time man traveled by foot. The images are to be flashed on a huge silhouetted map of the world and sound effects will dramatize the subject matter for guests in a 400-seat, air-conditioned theatre.

General Motors will exhibit a collection of short industrial films in its Casino of Science. These pictures will show on and off through the day, alternating with stage presentations, and will emphasize scientific standards.

The uses of asbestos will be illustrated by Johns-Manville Corporation in a theatre holding 200. Three talking pictures, "The House that Ann Built," "These Hot Summer Days," and "Heat and Its Control," are the subjects. The behavior of sound and how it is controlled by acoustical materials also will be demonstrated.

The petroleum industry will be represented with a musical talking picture acted entirely by animated puppets made of rubber, to be shown in a huge open-air theatre adorned with giant murals and dominated by a screen 30 by 40 feet.

Disney Film for Biscuits

A Walt Disney color film, titled "Mickey's Surprise Party," produced for the purpose, is to be offered by National Biscuit Company. Mickey Mouse and Minnie will be featured in an air-conditioned theatre seating 266. Walter O'Keefe, comedian, acts as master of ceremonies for the film and will also be the commentator in a second color picture devoted to NBC products. These will make up a 15-minute program to be presented continuously.

A comedy called "I'll Tell the World" is to be exhibited by McFadden Publications. The four-reeler was produced in Hollywood and includes in its cast Jed Prouty, the Mauch Twins, Frank Albertson, Betty Ross Clarke and Patricia Murray. It will be shown every half hour in a 300-seat air-conditioned theatre. The theme is the power of advertising to influence the family. Herbert Crooker produced.

Metropolitan Life will present three sound films, one of them in color, in a 100-seat theatre. They are titled "A New Day," a story of the campaign against pneumonia; "Men Against Microbes," a story of man's fight against communicable diseases, and "Once Upon a Time," a color animated cartoon preaching street safety.

A second insurance company, Aetna Casualty and Surety, will show sound movies of an educational nature explaining the devices in each field of insurance protection.

The manufacturers of photographic film and equipment, Eastman Kodak and Agfa Ansco, will tell the story of the amateur hobby in its own moving medium.

A seven-minute sound picture describing the manufacture of cigarettes will be staged by Lucky Strike.

Edgar Guest a Star

"The helpfulness of a timely loan in connection with family finances" will be portrayed in two films by Household Finance Corporation. One of these will star Edgar A. Guest. The showings will be continuous in a 200-seat air-conditioned theatre.

Current events also will have their innings on the Fair's movie screens. General Cigar will flash world and sports news from a Trans-Lux projector. One newly-formed corporation, Newscasting, will bring similar information to eight-foot screens located in some 20 spots on the grounds.

Many other commercial exhibitors intend to present films for Fair visitors. These include American Chain and Cable, Gas Exhibits, Glass, Inc., National Dairy Products, Olson Rug, Show Globe, United States Steel Corporation, Yale and Towne Manufacturing.

Foreign Nations

Almost every foreign nation represented at the Fair will employ the moving picture to greater or lesser degree to carry the message of their national progress to the vast audience. Most of these will be of a documentary nature but some will lean towards subjects of sheer entertainment.

Great Britain will project a selection of short films depicting the life and culture of the "Tight Little Isle" and her far-flung dominions and colonies. The program will run for about an hour and will take place in a cinema seating 220 guests. Showings will be at intervals.

Poland will exhibit a lighter picture, titled "Poland in Flower," which will run for 30 minutes. The film will be flashed on one wall of the Hall of Tourism.

France will devote a theatre seating 350 persons to a showing of assorted travelogues exemplifying the French way of life at home and in the colonies.

Belgium lists 21 short subjects which will cover much the same ground and provide a lure for tourists.

Soviet Russia will exhibit her movies in two spots: a 300-seat indoors theatre and a 450-seat outdoors amphitheatre. The offerings will be divided about half and half between past masterpieces of the Soviet cinema and new films especially produced for the Fair.

The Scandinavian countries, Finland, Norway and Sweden, will devote their movies to a description of scenic beauties. Finland will have a special film showing preparations for the Olympic Games in 1940 and a history of its athletic prowess.

Other countries which will take to the silver screen include the Dominican Republic, Southern Rhodesia, Iceland, Japan, Brazil, Peru and, in addition, the Pan-American Union.

Westinghouse, through Fuller and Smith and Ross, New York advertising agency, will produce a color feature, "The Middleton Family at the New York World's Fair." Signing of contract for the five-reeler was announced at the week-end by Audio Productions' and shooting will start in three weeks at the Long Island Studios and on location at the Fair.

The film is to be released in mid-summer and is intended to take the Fair to the stay-at-homes. Westinghouse has been featuring the Middleton Family in series of magazine copy plugging its Fair exhibit. Westinghouse is the first firm to seize upon the Fair as a background for a commercial picture; casting is under way.

Robert R. Snody of Audio will direct; story is being prepared by G. R. Hunter, and Reed Drummond. Technicolor-in-the-East unit at Audio will photograph. Both 35 mm. and 16 mm. prints will be distributed.

Television at The Fair

The Radio Corporation of America, consummating plans in work for a year,, is using the World's Fair as the springboard for the first regular daily telecast. RCA will employ eight separate sections of television exhibition and demonstration. These displays include: The hall of television, television laboratory, television-radio living room of tomorrow and the radio living room of today, "Telemobile unit, television camera set-up and model television transmitter, "flask type television receiver and television receiver in a clear glass model.

The RCA exhibit building is shaped like a huge radio tube attached to a base and the whole lying on its side. The base forms the front section of the building. The tube proper, or rear section, is where the television hall is located. The hall will accommodate, in addition to its equipment, more than 150 persons.

The equipment installed consists of 13 new stock model television receivers and a projection-type receiver. The projection receiver is set up to focus on a six by ten foot screen across one corner of the room. The stock model receivers are arranged in three tiered semi-circular rows behind the projection unit. This arrangement permits spectators to compare the images on the receivers with screen images.

In addition to television, the RCA exhibit will present displays of radio facsimile broadcasting, international radio communications, marine radio communications and safety devices, sound broadcasting and related products of the radio industry. Large, animated dioramas will be used to dramatize some of the exhibits.

The General Electric Company's exhibit at the Fair will have three principal features: the first public demonstration of man-made lightning, the House of Magic show, and a television studio where visitors will appear on programs.

Some Fair Equipment

The Bell Telephone, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products will be well represented at the Fair, introducing "The Voder," an electrical device which talks by creating speech entirely from electrical currents. The Bell interests anticipate its use eventually in sound recording in Hollywood film production.

Demonstrations of telephone calls, "The Voice Mirror," Number hearing test, music hearing tests and auditions for visitors are also planned for the exhibition.

In addition, Erpi constructed a huge electrical sound projector actuated by a single 20-ton robot for use as a "guide" for visitors to the General Motors exhibit.

Exhibitor customers and others will witness, at the West Disinfecting concession, an exhibit on industrial sanitation in the Medical and Public Health Building.

Peter Clark, Inc., handling theatre equipment from New York, installed enough stage equipment for two average theatres in the Fair's Hall of Music.

Bausch and Lomb, manufacturing motion picture lenses and other optical goods, have a Hall of Optical Science in the Museum of Science and Industry, at the RCA Building in New York, to which those from the film business interested in lenses in New York for the Fair will be invited.

Theatre and other air conditioning of many kinds will be exhibited by Carrier Engineering at the Fair, in Carrier Exhibition Hall.

Besides its television exhibit, General Electric will have on show considerable electrical equipment used in theatres and elsewhere. Likewise Westinghouse and other electrical equipment manufacturers.

Theatre chairs, auditorium seats and other types have been installed in about a dozen of the large buildings and auditoria.

"An Exhibit Symbolic of Photography's Growth and Progress in the Century" is to be presented in a large white building occupied by Eastman Kodak.

Agfa Ansco Corporation is to hold a photographic exhibit in the Communications Building. They will show in operation a photographic darkroom.

POINT "JUAREZ" OPENING TOWARD LATIN-AMERICA

Diplomats at Warners' New York and Hollywood Premieres; Cardenas' Congratulations Read

Warner Brothers Pictures in New York directed an arc-lighted "gala Broadway opening" to the Latin-American markets on Tuesday evening when it put on its Hollywood-made Mexican story of "Juarez" at the two-a-day Hollywood theatre for an invited ermine-wrapped and top-hatted audience among which were a large number of diplomats and dignitaries representing the Latin countries. (Review on page 50, picture on page 10.)

Broadcast to Latin-America

The Latin touch was further emphasized by a short-wave broadcast to the countries below the Rio Grande, over Columbia's Station W2XE, CBS's microphones in the lobby of the Hollywood theatre on Broadway carrying greetings direct from the officials to their homelands. U. S., city and state official life, Park Avenue and the stage and motion picture of Broadway were also well represented.

The company plans simultaneous premieres in 13 Latin-American cities, in July. The cities are Buenos Aires, La Paz, Rio De Janeiro, Santiago, Bogota, Quito, Ascuncion, Lima, Montevideo, Caracas, Georgetown, Paramaraibo and Cayenne.

A short wave re-broadcast was arranged by La Nacion, a newspaper of Buenos Aires, over that publication's Station LOZ, covering Argentina, Uruguay and Chile. Columbia's WMCA broadcast was in this country.

Congratulated by Cardenas

The program opened with the playing of the "Star Spangled Banner," a policy that has been instituted in all Warner theatres. At various points in the showing, the audience applauded the pro-democracy speeches of Paul Muni as Juarez.

Before the opening, Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production for Warner Brothers, wired from Hollywood that he had received a congratulatory telegram from Lazaro Cardenas, president of Mexico.

Among the dignitaries at the opening were Latin-American diplomats and other noted figures, especially from Mexico. Those invited to attend, many of whom arrived in a special train from Washington, were: Ramon Bepepa, under-secretary for Foreign Affairs of Mexico; Don Luis Quintanilla, resident minister of Mexico; Dr. Rafael Fuentes, counsellor of the Mexican Embassy; Dr. Roberto Cordova, legal counsellor; and Raimundo Cuervo, second secretary; Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, Ambassador of Peru; Felipe A. Espil, Ambassador of Argentina; Manuel Trucco, Ambassador of Chile; Captain Colon Eloy Alfaro, Ambassador of Ecuador; Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, Ambassador of Cuba; Miguel Lopez Pumarejo, Ambassador of Colombia; Carlos Martins Pereira e Sousa, Ambassador of Brazil; Dr. Joao Antonion de Bianchi, Ambassador of Portugal; J. Richling, Ambassador of Uruguay; Dr. Don Adrian Recinos, Ambassador of Guatemala; Don Ricardo Beeche, Ambassador of Costo Rica; General Jose Felix Estigarribia, Ambassador of Paraguav; Dr. Don Leon de Bayle, Ambassador of Nicaragua; the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun; and Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Pan-American Union. Frank Tannenbaum, understood to be studying Latin-America for President Roosevelt, was also there.

By Cosmo-Sileo

It was a big-name opening, as the sidewalk throng's attentions evince, when Warners' "Juarez" opened Tuesday night at the Hollywood theatre on New York's Broadway.

Also attending were Pablo Prida, theatre operator in Mexico City and a descendant of the film's chief character, Benito Juarez, and Quintin Rueda, chief of the Mexican Government's official press bureau. Mr. Rueda brought with him a message of "goodwill" for the industry here from his government. In an interview prior to the premiere he said that Mexico was planning to finance independent production in that country.

Representing the motion picture industry were Major Albert Warner, Gradwell Sears, Doris Warner LeRoy, Mr. and Mrs. S. Charles Einfeld, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney R. Kent, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Connor, Martin Quigley, Terry Ramsaye, Colvin Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Max Cohen, Morgan Kaufman, Leona Hertz, Mr. and Mrs. Nate Blumberg, Sam Shain, Mr. and Mrs. Jules Brulatour, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Doob, Sam Morris, Joe Hummel, Monroe Greenthal, B. S. Moss, Prince Hubertus Zu Lowenstein, Arthur Mayer, Jack Cohn, Moe Silver.

Also, Mort Blumenstock, Carl Leserman, Harold Rodner, Dan Michalove, Roy Haines, Marvin Schenck, Willard Patterson, George Skouras, Red Kann, Jack Alicoate, and others.

Present from radio were Donald Flamm, Major Edward Bowes, Alfred J. McCosker.

From Public Fields

Some of those invited from society, stage and screen, and from public fields, were: Prince and Princess Vladimir Koudachoff; Dr. Raymond Moley; Mrs. and Mrs. John Adams Mayer; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Sloan; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. McDonnell; Count and Countess Morner; Conde Nast; Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Jr.

Also George Gordon Battle; Mrs. Tiffany Saporta; Walter P. Chrysler, Jr.; Edwin P. Hill; Benjamin de Casseres; James Speyer; Henry P. Luce; Carl Van Doren; Howard Shelley; Prince Alexis Obolensky; H. V. Kaltenborn; Hendrik Willem van Loon; Peter Arno; Benjamin Glazer; David S. Muzzey; Bertita and Jack Harding; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey S. Gibson; Mrs. Alfred Knopf; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Harkness; Mrs. Benjamin Harrison; Mr. and Mrs. Messmore Kendall.

A record sale of tickets was reported by Warner Brothers. In the one hour after the boxoffice opened for public sale of tickets, 1,000 were sold, it was said, with the added comment that the sale of tickets had doubled the previous mark set by "The Life of Emile Zola."

The advance advertising campaign in New York newspapers started two weeks ago, under supervision of S. Charles Einfeld, Warner advertising director.

Another premiere of "Juarez," similarly arranged, and attended similarly by notables, this time of the West coast, took place Thursday evening, at the Beverly Hills theatre, in California.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Production Increases

The first signs of the intensity to which Hollywood production activity will be stepped up shortly are seen in the record of the mid-April week when 14 pictures were started and seven completed. In the list of pictures that went into work are several that will be the showcase attractions of new season release. The output on the other side of the ledger is mainly routine, schedule-filling stuff.

Three pictures were given the go-signal at 20th Century-Fox. Most important of these undoubtedly is the film production from Louis Bromfield's novel, "The Rains Came." Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy and George Brent head the cast. The feature support includes Joseph Schildkraut, Jane Darwell, Henry Travers, Marie Ouspenskaya, H. B. Warner, Nigel Bruce, Marjorie Rambeau and Mary Nash. The other two pictures are series activities. Sidney Toler, Sen Yong, Cesar Romero, Pauline Moore, John Carradine, Sally Blane and Douglass Dumbrille will be seen in "Charlie Chan at Treasure Island." The regular cast will be augmented by Eddie Collins, Helen Ericson and Robert Shaw in "The Jones Family at Grand Canyon."

RKO Radio Starts Two

Two pictures, both of more than ordinary significance, were started at RKO Radio. "Career" will introduce to screen audiences the winners of Jesse Lasky's "Gateway to Hollywood" radio talent quest, Alice Eden and John Archer, although Anne Shirley is the star and Edward Ellis and Raymond Hattan head the support cast. In "Memory of Love" Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, Kay Francis, Charles Coburn, Helen Vinson, Katherine Alexander, Jonathan Hale and Nella Walker will be seen.

Warners started two pictures. "The Hobby Family" will present Henry O'Neill, Gabriel Dell, Jean Sharon, Georgia Caine, Fred Tozere and John Ridgely. The leading trio in "Dust Be My Destiny" are John Garfield, Pat O'Brien and Margot Stevenson.

Two productions started at Paramount. The Frank Lloyd production, which he also is directing, "Ruler of the Sea," got under way with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, William Fyffe, David Torrence and Montagu Love working. Many more names will be added. In the second film, "Disputed Passage," Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Howard and Judith Barrett are the principals.

Columbia also started two. "Parents on Trial" will present Jean Parker, Johnny Downs, Noah Beery, Jr., Henry Kolker and Nana Bryant. "The Man from Sundown" again teams Charles Starrett and Iris Meredith with Bob Nolan, Hank Bell and the Sons of the Pioneers.

"Across the Plains" is Monogram's enterprise of the week. Jack Randall, Joyce Bryant, Frank Yaconelli and Glen Strange represent the name values.

Another Gene Autry picture was started at Republic. In "Mountain Rhythm" the western star will be supported by Smiley Burnette, June Story and Maude Eburne.

Wanger Active

For United Artists release, Walter Wanger started "Winter Carnival," a Dartmouth College story. It will feature Ann Sheridan, Richard Carlson, James Corner, Helen Parrish, Joan Brodel, Virginia Gilmore, Robert Armstrong, Alan Baldwin, Morton Lowry, Robert Allan and Marsha Hunt.

"The Best" in New Zealand

From Eric G. Sarten, Dorsett Street, Waitara, Taranaki, New Zealand, came the following this week:

"Your HERALD is the best film paper going. I've tried several."

Although 20th Century-Fox and Paramount each completed two productions and there are other important properties in the finished list, it seems that the week's most consequential picture is "Young Mr. Lincoln." This Kenneth Macgowan production, which John Ford directed for the Darryl F. Zanuck organization, will feature Henry Fonda in the title role. The support cast includes Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan, Alice Brady, Richard Cromwell, Eddie Collins, Pauline Moore, Eddie Quillan, Doris Bowden, Fred Kohler, Jr., Francis Ford, Ward Bond, Spencer Charters, Donald Meek and Charles Tannen. The second production, "It Could Happen to You," will feature Stuart Erwin, Gloria Stuart, Douglas Fowley, June Gale, Raymond Walburn and Clarence Kolb.

Paramount completed "What a Life." Jackie Cooper, Betty Field, John Howard, Janice Logan, James Corner, Vaughn Glaser and Lucien Littlefield are the principals. Harry Sherman finished "Lawful Outlaws," a Hopalong Cassidy story in which William Boyd, Russell Hayden and George Hayes are featured.

With Frieda Inescort and Otto Kruger featured, Republic finished "All the Tomorrows." Don Douglas, Adrianne Ames, J. M. Kerrigan, Ann Todd and Jane Darwell head the supporting cast.

"Down the Wyoming Trail" was completed at Monogram. Tex Ritter is starred with Mary Brodell, Bobby Lawson, Charles King, Bob Terry, Horace Murphy, Ernie Adams, Jean Southern and Jack Ingram.

At Warners, "Give Me a Child," a remake of "Life Begins," which was a rather sensational picture some years ago, was completed. It will present Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gale Page, Eve Arden, Johnnie Davis, Gloria Holden, Spring Byington, Henry O'Neill, George Irving, Jean Sharon, John Litel, Hobart Cavanaugh, Georgie Caine, Winifred Harris and Johnny Downs.

Another Half-Million

"He's a great violinist. He's the greatest property in the show world today. He's known everywhere. He's booked solid for the next seven or eight years." That was part of the answer Mr. Samuel Goldwyn made to our question, "Why did you sign Jascha Heifetz for 'Music School'?"

"Besides," he went on, "I know he will draw at least another 500,000 people to see the picture." Half a million additional patrons at, say, an average admission price of a quarter, yes, Mr. Goldwyn would realize a profit in his investment on Mr. Heifetz.

Charles R. Rogers says that 71-year-old Walter Damrosch, dean of American music conductors, musical counsel for NBC and conductor of the music appreciation hour for children, will draw new cinema patrons to see him play his own life and direct the Carnegie Hall Symphony Orchestra in "The Star Maker," which Rogers is producing for Paramount.

Mr. Goldwyn knows that many who ordinarily do not attend picture shows were attracted to "Goldwyn Follies" because Helen Jepson sang in it, and Paramount executives agree that Kirsten Flagstad was an unusual drawing card in the last "Big Broadcast."

Frank Lloyd sums up the situation tersely: "Millions who don't know one picture star from another know all about Richard Hageman. They know him as one of the foremost modern musical composers and directors of symphonies and operatic orchestras. Hageman doesn't get much publicity, as far as pictures are concerned. I never saw his name on any marquee, but I know that the score he prepared for and directed in 'If I Were King' drew uncountable thousands who seldom come to theatres. He'll do the score for 'Ruler of the Seas.'

MGM signed an opera star and "The Great Waltz" revealed Miliza Korjus as a picture star, but over at Culver City they'll wager that a score arranged and conducted by such music notables as Herbert Stothart, Dr. Arthur Gutmann or Dr. William Axt will draw scores of persons to any theatre, leaving the manager to wonder where the strangers came from and why they happened to drop in.

Disciples of classical music and the exponents of modern swing are as far apart as the North and South poles, but, aware of how many maestros of musical madness have improved theatre attendance, quick minded executives are turning more and more attention their way. Alert to the appeal of the modernists, Paramount is urging exhibitors to concentrate a great deal of their exploitation in connection with "Some Like It Hot" upon Gene Krupa, the drum king of the moment.

News in Brief

Twentieth Century-Fox will produce a picture based on the life of Mark Twain.

Max Gordon is in Hollywood preparing for the production of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." RKO-Radio will release the picture in which Raymond Massey will star. Production is scheduled to begin July 1st.

Anna Neagle and Herbert Wilcox are due in Hollywood May 1st to begin work on an RKO-Radio production based on the career of Edith Cavell, British nurse who was shot as a spy in the World War.

Warners and Samuel Goldwyn have completed a talent swapping agreement which gives each the first call on the services of ranking star and contract players.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Some Like It Hot

(Paramount)

Comedy and Music

Bob Hope and Shirley Ross, co-featured previously, will be in "Some Like It Hot." So will Una Merkel, Rufe Davis and others of more or less importance. They will be given their due, but Paramount is not depending upon them or the story for the publicity harvest.

Labeling the picture the studio's spring gift to the jitterbugs, the company is concentrating its exploitation attention on one of the idols of all alligators, shaggers and rug-cutters, Gene Krupa, the drum king.

Tentatively scheduled for release on May 19th, the picture is being tied in with Krupa's tour bookings which in May, June, July and August will have him appearing along the Atlantic seaboard from Maryland north and through New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and one or two other midwestern states. Where he plays, Krupa will exploit "his picture."

The plot of the piece, with its good title, concerns itself with a fast talking promoter who talks himself out of scores of opportunities, as well as his girl friend, until he discovers the drummer genius. Then, of course, he becomes lord of all her surveys.

Release date: May 19, 1939 (tentative).

On Borrowed Time

(MGM)

Imaginative Fantasy

"On Borrowed Time" will be one of the most unusual pictures to come to the screen since "Death Takes a Holiday." In a few words, it it a story of a grandfather fighting death to protect a grandson from the clutches of a scheming aunt. The story is more nostalgically sentimental than grim or tragic. While it is imaginative, it is also thought-provoking, and essentially inspiring and heart-warming.

Adapted from a stage play by Paul Osborne and a novel by Lawrence Watkins, the picture will faithfully follow the subject matter and spirit of both sources. There will be no love interest, as such, but its romance will portray the abiding affection between grandfather and grandmother and the tender fellowship that binds the grandfather and grandson.

While exhibitors will have a unique title and story upon which to found out-of-the-ordinary exploitation campaigns, they also will have a pair of screen names, which at this time appear to be about as attractive as any the screen boasts. Lionel Barrymore, renowned for many fine character performances, especially in the current "Dr. Kildare" series, will play the part of "Gramp." It is the kind of role in which Mr. Barrymore appears to best advantage. His companion is little Bobs Watson, whose performances in "Boys Town," "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" and "Calling Dr. Kildare" brought Mr. Barrymore's contention that the youngster is the screen's finest juvenile emotional actor.

The supporting cast will feature Sir Cedric Hardwicke, distinguished on both the American and British stage and screen; Beulah Bondi, who was last with Barrymore in "The Gorgeous Hussy;" Eily Malyon, Una Merkel, Charles Waldron and Ian Wolfe.

"On Borrowed Time" is being produced by Sidney Franklin, whose name is associated with such unusual films as "Smilin' Through," "The Guardsman," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "The Good Earth." The director is Harold S. Bucquet, who in "The Dr. Kildare" series has proved his ability to handle story, production and personnel material.

Release date: After July 15.

Maisie Was a Lady

(MGM)

Melodramatic Romance

Two kinds of romance, one of the kind that is beyond the pale and the other a combative love affair that can't find a common ground of affection until the crucial moment, are the entertainment substances of "Maisie Was a Lady." The production has a western setting, and while there is plenty of action of the two-fisted, hard-riding variety, the story has nothing to do with cattle rustling, land or gold mine robbing. Rather, it is a cross section insight into the lives of four persons. Basically melodramatic, the yarn also has considerable comedy. The principal characters are a woman-hating cowboy, a chiseling wife, a husband who did not know what was going on, and a showgirl whom life had treated unkindly.

The principal players are Robert Young, last in "Honolulu," who will appear in his first western character; Ann Sothern, last in Wanger's "Trade Winds;" Ian Hunter, now in "The Little Princess" and "Broadway Serenade," and Ruth Hussey, seen in "Spring Madness" and "Within the Law." This quartet will have Cliff Edwards, Anthony Allen and Art Mix as the featured support.

Responsibility for direction was trusted to Edwin L. Marin, whose latest credits are "Listen, Darling," "A Christmas Carol" and "Fast and Loose."

Release date: To be determined, but before July 15th.

6,000 Enemies

(MGM)

Prison Melodrama

An unusual title, a distinctive story plot, situations which provoke eruptive action, and cast names looms as the factors to exploit. The major locale is a prison.

"6,000 Enemies" is being planned as a melodrama of hate and vengeance, fighting and killing. A district attorney, convicted on a "framed" charge, is sentenced to a prison overcrowded with desperate men who have been sent there as a result of his anti-crime crusades.

For name values the picture will make available those which are represented by Walter Pidgeon, Rita Johnson, Paul Kelly, Nat Pendleton, Harold Huber, Grant Mitchell, John Arledge, J. M. Kerrigan, Guinn Williams, Raymond Hatton and a dozen or more less well-known players.

George Seitz, who has handled all the "Judge Hardy" pictures up to and including "The Hardys Ride High," is the director.

Release date: June 9, 1939.

The Dove

(RKO Radio)

Comedy-Melodrama-Romance

The basis of this photoplay is a Willard Mack stage play of the 1925 era. It is a triangle romance told against backgrounds which feature comedy, thrill and suspense. The locale is Northern Mexico, adjacent to the border.

The story concerns three characters directly. One is a Mexican bandit, a combination "The Bad Man-Casanova-Beau Brummel." The second is a Mexican dancing girl known as "The Dove." The third is an American dealer in a gambling casino. To prove his lady-killing abilities, the bandit makes a bet that he can win and marry "The Dove," but she's in love with "Johnny," the dealer. The girl, between ridiculing, scorning and playing up to the bandit's vanity, permits him to win his bet, but also wins his consent to her marriage to the gambler.

Leo Carillo, noted for his Latin characterizations, will be seen in the role which Holbrook Blinn created on the stage. Steffi Duna, who also has been successful in Latin characterizations, notably "Dancing Pirate," will be seen as "The Dove." Tim Holt, son of Jack and an able performer in his own right, is the gambler. The supporting cast includes Chris Pin Martin, Paul Fix, Julien Rivero, Donald MacBride, Edward Raquello and Henry Rocquemore.

Joseph Fields, credited with "The Girl from Mexico" lately, is doing the screen play and the Cliff Reid production is being directed by Lew Landers.

Release date: To be determined.

Charlie Chan in Reno

(20th Century-Fox)

Mystery Melodrama

Here are some facts that may well be kept in mind when it comes time to tell patrons about "Charlie Chan in Reno."

The production budget, the company says, will exceed by $100,000 that of any of the 17 previous "Chans." It will present the strongest name cast of the series. Featured is Sidney Toler, who has proved his right to fill the shoes of the late Warner Oland. The supporting cast will include Ricardo Cortez, Phyllis Brooks, Slim Summerville, Kane Richmond, Sen Yung, Pauline Moore, Eddie Collins, Kay Linaker, Louise Henry, Robert Lowery, Charles D. Brown, Iris Young, Morgan Conway and Hamilton MacFadden.

The picture will contain more feminine appeal but will retain those elements that have made the series a strong draw for men and children.

The story is based on a Liberty magazine serial, "Death Takes a Decree," written by Philip Wylie, whose stories many times have been the basis of pictures.

While there will be a full amount of comedy, in which Toler, Yung and Summerville are naturally featured, the real substance is murder mystery, the commission and solution of which involves a number of suspects and reunites a pair whose romance threatened to go on the rocks of the Reno divorce courts.

Release date: To be determined.

PARAMOUNT ANNOUNCES 60 FOR '40; THREE MORE CONVENTIONS NEXT WEEK

Universal Concludes Regional Meetings; Republic Considers Bonus Plan; Monogram, UA, Columbia To Meet

Paramount this week added 60 features to the more than 400 already promised exhibitors for 1939-40 by those majors whose new season's plans stand completed. And, though the company's convention is still seven weeks away, June 8-10, identities of two dozen of the new features now are disclosed.

New 26-Stage Studio

Barney Balaban, Paramount president, reported on the status of new product this week after conferences in Hollywood with executives of both coasts. In addition, Mr. Balaban announced that a new 26-stage studio will be built in Hollywood at a cost of $12,000,000, to be used as the main studio.

Monday evening, in San Francisco, Universal concluded its series of three regional conventions, J. Cheever Cowdin, president, attending the final session. Previously, in Chicago and Cincinnati, the company announced a $17,000,000 to $20,000,000 budget for 58 features, including 14 westerns, plus four serials, 57 short subjects and the newsreel (see MOTION PICTURE HERALD, April 22, page 24 for complete product announcement).

Studio executives and producers also attended, including Cliff Work, general manager of the studio; Matthew Fox, vice-president; Milton Feld, production executive; Dan Kelly, casting director; John Joseph, director of advertising and publicity; David Lipton, studio publicity head; Joe Pasternak and Harry Edington, producers, Walter Lantz, cartoon producer.

The meeting was presided over by William Scully, general sales manager; western sales manager William Heineman, and west coast district manager Al O'Keefe.

Mr. Pasternak described the plans for future Deanna Durbin and Danielle Darrieux pictures. Mr. Edington told of his plans for his new Famous Productions, and Mr. Lantz spoke on the new color cartoons scheduled for next season.

James Jordan and Tom Murray, home office department heads, also attended.

Republic Regional in Chicago

Republic's midwestern regional was held in Chicago last weekend. The company's series of regionals ends with the western division's session in San Francisco on May 8th and 9th.

All Republic Pictures franchise holders are considering the installation of a bonus plan similar to the one used by Arthur Bromberg of Atlanta, it was reported by James R. Grainger, president, at the convention.

Herbert J. Yates, chairman of the board, Mr. Grainger; Al Adams, publicity head, and other executives of the company returned to New York for the opening of "Man of Conquest" at Broadway's Capitol on Thursday and were to leave Sunday for the San Francisco Paramount premiere May 4th.

Three conventions are to be held within the next week: Monogram, May 4th to 6th, at the Drake Hotel, Chicago; United Artists, May 8th to 10th, Hollywood, and Columbia, opening the first of three regionals, May 8th-11th, in Atlantic City, followed by others in Chicago and Los Angeles.

Returning to New York this week after setting openings in the field for "Streets of New York," W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, started on product and convention plans.

DATE CHANGE AVOIDS CONFLICT WITH ALLIED

The date of Paramount's annual sales convention in Los Angeles has been advanced from June 12–14 to June 8–10, following the request of W. A. Steffes, of Allied States Association, who urged the change in order that the Paramount meeting would not conflict with Allied's convention to be held in Minneapolis on the later dates. Paramount's sales executives will attend the Allied meeting following their convention at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles.

Holding its convention in the middle of its four-week 20th anniversary sales drive, United Artists in Hollywood will announce about 30 features for 1938-39.

One of the highlights of Columbia's convention, besides the announcement of about 56 features, including westerns and serials, will be a new series of six one-reel shorts, entitled "Fools Who Made History," being biographies of persons well known in history, to be produced by Hugh McCollum and written by Jan LeMan.

Added to the product announced at its convention last month is a new Warner short series, based on prize fight stories, with Maxie Rosenbloom and Johnnie Davis tentatively slated to star. Gordon Hollinshead will produce.

RKO Radio remains the last of the eleven large distributors to complete convention plans, with indications, however, pointing to mid-June, in New York.

Returning Monday to New York from pre-convention product conferences, Jules Levy, RKO's general sales manager, reported that, "The greatest season in RKO history for number of big pictures and volume of product played will wind up in a succession of hits in the next six weeks."

Herbert Wilcox Arrives

RKO's British associate, Herbert Wilcox, with Anna Neagle, arrived Friday from London en route to Hollywood to start preparing for the Edith Cavell picture for 1939-40. To others on the RKO list next season, of course, will be the Broadway plays "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "The American Way."

Returning this week from a tour of RKO's 38 exchanges in the interest of the present "George Schaefer Sales Drive," Walter Branson and Harry Michalson, sales executives, announced "the greatest volume of bookings for features and shorts in the history of the company." Detroit, Buffalo and New York continue the three leaders in the drive at the end of the 11th of the 18 weeks it is to run.

At its convention next month the company will announce for 1939-40 a series of 13 one-reel "guest star" "Information Please" subjects, based on the radio program of the same name. Clifton Fadiman, book critic for the New York, will be master of ceremonies.

Paramount's Plans

"Specifically Paramount production plans as formulated during the last two weeks call for approximately 60 pictures, the bulk of which will be produced at the Hollywood studio," announced Paramount President Balaban in Hollywood. Before leaving there for New York last weekend, Mr. Balaban paid tribute to the studio heads William Le Baron and Y. Frank Freeman "for the progress Paramount has made during the past few months."

Returning to New York with Mr. Balaban were Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee; Russell Holman, eastern studio editor; Edwin L. Weisl, board member, and Leon Netter, home office theatre executive. Neil Agnew, who also was in Hollywood, will visit exchanges in the Northwest before returning.

Disclosing parts of the 1939-40 program, Mr. Balaban told of acquisition of two Charles Laughton pictures, both from London: "London After Dark," with Vivien Leigh, now making "Gone with the Wind," and "Jamaica Inn," by Dauphne Du Maurier, directed by Alfred Hitchcock. Another for 1939-40 from England will be "French without Tears," with Rav Milland and Ellen Drew, directed by Anthony Asquith.

Other product made outside will include Harry Sherman's Hopalong Cassidy series, and two other features.

"Paramount will have more important names on its program in 1939-40 than ever before," said Mr. Balaban. "In addition to our star roster the company has added the names of Ronald Colman, Gary Cooper, Melvyn Douglas, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paulette Goddard, Jackie Cooper, Joe E. Brown, Pat O'Brien, Fay Bainter.

"During the coming season Paramount will release pictures bearing such directorial names as Frank Borzage, Cecil B. DeMille, Edward H. Griffith, Henry Hathaway, Alfred Hitchcock, Mitchell Leisen, Frank Lloyd, Lewis Milestone, Theodore Reed, Alfred Santell, Ernest B. Schoedsack, Paul H. Sloane, Andrew Stone and William A. Wellman.

14 Young Players

He also mentioned 14 young players to be known as the "Golden Circle" group: Joseph Allen, Muriel Angelus, Judith Barrett, Louise Campbell, Ellen Drew, Betty Field, Susan Hayward, William Henry, William Holden, Evelyn Keyes, Janice Logan, Joyce Mathews, Patricia Morison and Robert Pearson.

Already completed for 1939-40 are four features: William Wellman's "Beau Geste," starring Gary Cooper, Ray Milland and Robert Preston; the two Charles Laughton pictures, and "What a Life," starring Jackie Cooper and Betty Field.

Five pictures now in work for 1939-40 are: Frank Lloyd's "Ruler of the Seas," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood and Will Fyffe; "Heaven on a Shoestring," Pat O'Brien and Olympe Bradna; "Disputed Passage," Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff and John Howard; "Geronimo," Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine and Ralph Morgan, and the Bob Hope-Paulette Goddard co-starring picture, "The Cat and the Canary."

By September 1 the company will have at least 15 1939-40 films awaiting release. In addition to those already mentioned there will be "Dr. Cyclops" and Ronald Colman in Rudyard Kipling's "Light That Failed."

Plans for the erection of the Paramount studio with 26 sound stages on a 150 acre tract of land acquired in Los Angeles away from the present site in Hollywood to cost $12,000,000 were announced by Mr. Balaban just prior to his departure for the east. No new financing is contemplated in connection with plans for the new studio which will centralize all of Paramount's activities on a plot of ground one mile long and one and one-half miles wide. The plant will be called Paramount City.

The present Marathon Street studio will be retained pending erection of the new plant which is to be located on a site in the southwestern portion of Los Angeles property bounded by Pico and National Boulevards and Kelton and Overland Streets.

Omaha Dresses Up for DeMille's "Union Pacific"

The city of Omaha, Nebraska, at the weekend was winding up a four-day "gala" celebration of the world premiere of Paramount Pictures' "Union Pacific" and its concomitant local celebration, entitled, "Golden Spike Days." The celebration began Wednesday, was to reach a high point Friday evening with the premiere of the picture, and culminate Saturday as the picture began its regular run, and the visiting celebrities and an estimated 400,000 visitors and natives of Omaha rested, or went back to their every day tasks. A review of "Union Pacific" appears on page 51.

Entire City Joins In

As far as the film industry is concerned, the Union Pacific Special Train, with producer Cecil B. DeMille, his associate staff and a raft of stars, including Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, George Raft, Lloyd Nolan, Brian Donlevy, and many others, is expected back to the coast by the week's end. The various other film executives, from all over the nation, and various trade and newspaper men, are returning to their posts, after a celebration which Paramount is convinced is equal, if not superior, to any like celebration in which a whole town—and a large one at that—was used to advertise, and "pitch in" for the celebration of a picture's premiere.

An outline of the four-day celebration at Omaha follows:

On Wednesday the historical museum was opened at 11 A. M. at the City Auditorium with a formal celebration built around the arrival of the "Golden Spike" from San Francisco. At 2 P. M. the Indian Village, on the grounds of the Court House, was opened, with a tribe of Burnt Thigh Sioux Indians in full regalia. Then there was an unveiling of the stockade and decorations at the Union Pacific Station.

At 7:30 P. M. the atmospheric store fronts of the 1869 period were formally unveiled. Two blocks were shut off to motor traffic, and only horse-drawn vehicles, stagecoaches, prairie schooners, mounted Civil War cavalry, Indians and pony express riders were allowed. The 1869 atmosphere was carried out even to old wooden barber shop poles, wooden cigar store Indians, hitching posts and water troughs. Fifty-two blocks, including the business section and Tenth Street from the Union Pacific Station uptown, were decorated.

On Thursday, special trains carrying railroad executives and celebrities from the East arrived at 9 A. M. All trains running into the city carried extra sections to handle the thousands of visitors. At 10 A. M. there was a military parade through the business section, with bands, modern war equipment, mounted cavalry and infantry in Civil War costumes.

At 4:00 P. M. the "Old Timers" trains arrived from the West carrying members of the railroad to the premiere. Cecil B. DeMille and his party of Hollywood stars arrived at 5.30 P. M. and were escorted from the Union Pacific Station to the Fontenelle Hotel in old-time horse-drawn vehicles. Preceding them as escort were a troop of Civil War cavalry, bands and a huge motorcycle police cavalcade. Three local radio stations covered the arrival of DeMille and his party.

On Friday, the Union Pacific Special train, consisting of the 1869 locomotive which was used in the filming of "Union Pacific" and the new 5,000 h.p. steam turbine locomotive, latest engine on the U. P. lines, were open to public inspection. At 10:00 A. M. there was an elaborate historical parade through the downtown business section, including 38 bands and approximately 45 floats heralding the "Golden Spike Day" celebration and the world premiere of "Union Pacific." Mr. De Mille and his party, and William M. Jeffers, president of the railroad, and his guests, led the parade in old-fashioned horse-drawn vehicles.

Following the parade a luncheon for the stars and distinguished guests was held at the Fontenelle Hotel. At 7:45 P. M. the Hollywood visitors were brought from the hotel to the Omaha theatre in horse-drawn vehicles, where they were met by radio announcers.

On Saturday the regular run of "Union Pacific" began. At 10:00 A. M. there was a band and drum corps contest and that night a grand costume ball at the Ak-Sar-Ben Coliseum.

All during the "Golden Spike Days" celebration a contest was conducted for the best retail store window display on "Union Pacific."

Two hundred and twenty-six charters were issued to local "Whiskers Clubs," members of which sprouted beards for the premiere. Total males with beards were estimated at 34,000. These beards included everything from mutton chops to goatees, burnsides, Van Dykes, and full beards a-la U. S. Grant. Twenty-two thousand dresses of the type worn by the feminine stars in "Union Pacific" were purchased by women in Omaha and the state. Hundreds of costumes were ordered and many were made by women themselves. Seven thousand hats, ranging from the forty cent paper mache imitation to the $25 genuine beavers were disposed of by local merchants.

Several nationwide broadcasts were made on the fete. Besides the actual broadcasts on the night of the premiere, Friday, in which NBC, Columbia and Mutual networks participated Mutual also put on a special broadcast including 141 stations on Wednesday from 8:00 to 8:30 P. M.

NOW TO SPRINGFIELD FOR "YOUNG LINCOLN"

Twentieth Century-Fox started the season's long-range previewing rage some weeks ago with an expedition of reviewers to Annapolis to view "Submarine Patrol," and followed this with a special-train trip to San Francisco, with stars and press aboard, for the premiere of "Alexander Graham Bell. Then came Warners' special-train trip to Dodge City, Kansas, to exploit "Dodge City," and Paramount's special-train trip to Omaha, this week, for "Union Pacific," also the special train used this week by Warners to bring Washington dignitaries to New York for "Juarez."

Next trip is to Springfield, Ill., Abraham Lincoln's home city, to where 20th-Fox will carry carloads of reviewers and newspaper men for the opening, on May 30th, of "Young Mr. Lincoln," at the Fox-Lincoln theatre.

Newspaper writers from 22 cities, from Boston to Kansas City, will attend, along with state governors, university presidents, Lincoln historians and others, invitations having been extended to governors of Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Missouri, Wisconsin, Ohio, Michigan and Kansas, U. S. Senators from Illinois, the Illinois legislature, courts and bar.

"Young Mr. Lincoln" will be generally released the first week in June.

Grand National Starts on New Product Source

Grand National Pictures this week seemed assured of new life as a result of agreements reached last week between its head, E. W. Hammons, and Franklyn Warner, producer of Fine Arts Productions, whereby Mr. Warner issued orders that the completed picture, "Panama Patrol," be given to Grand National for immediate release, and that casting and production start immediately on five more out of the 16 pictures which Fine Arts originally had intended to make for Grand National release.

Jeffrey Bernerd and Maurice Wilson, managing directors of Grand National Pictures, Ltd., in New York last week from London, expressed satisfaction with the deal, whereby the British company seems assured of enough product to carry out its five year distribution agreement with the American company. Mr. Bernerd sailed for England on Friday carrying with him a print of "Panama Patrol" which he called the best picture Mr. Warner has made up to this time." Mr. Wilson was scheduled to arrive on the coast from New York this week.

Financing from British sources for the completion of Grand National production plans, enlargement of its sales staff, and payment of obligations, was reported near.

The five feature pictures which Fine Arts shortly will make are, in order of their appearance on the lot: "Wings Over the Pacific," "Never Mind the Guard," "Wonder World," "Full Speed Ahead" and "At Your Age."

In addition to the Fine Arts pictures deal, Grand National is reported this week purchasing "Exile Express," a Eugene Frenke production starring Anna Sten, which the producer was to have delivered to Grand National for release, but which he had withheld.

Mr. Bernerd, before his departure for England on Friday, said that the British distributing company was "talking" over an "eight-picture" deal with B. F. Zeidman, coast producer.

$507,267 GTE Net Reported for 1938

General Theatres Equipment Corporation and subsidiaries reported net profit of $507,267 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1938, after depreciation, interest, federal income taxes and $225,000 reserve against advances to subsidiaries. The net is equal to 85 cents a share on 597,887 shares of no-par capital stock.

The profit compares with a net profit of $1,199,415 in 1937.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Scanning the list of "extra" players on the MGM lot in Culver City, one finds the names of George Melford and King Baggott. Oldtimers will remember both as film directors of the silent era, each responsible for many a well-known hit.

Melford dates his beginnings to 1907, as an actor when Sidney Olcott was directing for the old Kalem company at Fort Lee, N. J., one of the cradles of films.

Melford was drawn in by Olcott on a most attenuated thread of chance. Seems that Olcott had a picture with a society scene in work. He had to have a "nifty looking man in a morning suit.'" He looked about for days trying to find a player with such an item in his wardrobe. A few had evening dress and dinner jackets—but the morning suit, that was a step beyond. Probably few actors ever got up in the morning anyway. It seemed hopeless and Olcott was about to rewrite the scenario when he encountered George Melford, striding down Broadway in all the elegance of a profoundly correct formal morning attire, fresh from the tailor shop.

"You're it—come across the river." And Melford went across. The picture—it was the first "Ben Hur," "in 16 magnificent scenes" (one whole reel) with illustrated titles.

King Baggott's beginnings, like most others of the day, were equally unusual. There was the time when Baggott was working for the late Thomas H. Ince, in the early 1910's. Ince had to move his entire Imp Pictures company from New York to Cuba in flight from some process servers. Old "Doc" C. A. Willat in Cuba had leased a forbidden stone structure for Ince as quarters and studio for the company. There was that something about the place which seemed chilling, and inhospitable to the actors. But, as Terry Ramsaye relates in his "Million and One Nights," the players and company were vastly reassured when Ince explained that the place was nothing less than the "Palace del Carneado of Vedado." He could have told them that it was in fact an old, broken-down abandoned jail house.

Baggott and the company had been at work but a few days when everyone became mysteriously and desperately ill.

"Imp" in New York was dependent on its very existence on the uninterrupted output of the company in Cuba.

Ince and Baggott, recovering first, made a searching investigation. They found that Charlie Weston, the property man, with an eye to business and personal profits, had taken to Cuba with him a very large wholesale tin of cold cream. Weston calculated that there would be no drug stores in Cuba and that he would make a fortune out of selling his cold cream to the actors for nightly removal of their makeup. So far so good. But he had stored his drum of cold cream in the kitchen ice box. The Cuban cook decided it was just a fancy perfumed American lard and proceeded accordingly.

"BROADS," "GHOSTS" AND "GOBOS"

What with television appearing constantly in the news and trade press, Winfred Guenther, coordinator of television and facsimile for the broadcasting department of the Crosley Radio Corporation, Cincinnati, has compiled a "dictionary" of television terms, as follows:

BLIZZARD HEAD: A blonde actress whose hair presents a lighting problem.

BROAD: General illumination unit used in lighting a television set.

GHOST: An unwanted image appearing in a television picture as result of signal reflection.

GOBO: A light-deflecting fin used to direct illumination in the studio and to protect the camera lens from glare.

WOMP: A sudden surge in signal strength, resulting in a flareup of light in the picture.

TELECAST: A television broadcast.

PANNING: A horizontal sweeping of the camera. (Derived from panorama.)

SAWTOOTH: A wave of electic current or voltage employed in scanning.

SCANNING: Action of the electron beam in exploring, in the camera tube, or reproducig, in the cathode tube, the halftones of a picture.

FRAME: One complete picture, 30 of which are shown in one second on the television camera.

ICONOSCOPE: Type of television camera.

SCOOPS: Multiple lighting units in a studio.

TELECINE: Transmission of a movie program.

WINDSHIELD: A perforated metal cover fitting over microphone to protect it from drafts caused by powerful air-conditioning, which is necessary to remove heat caused by batteries of studio lights.

That House Bill (No. 149) introduced by Representative William I. Sirovich, to create a "Bureau of Fine Arts" for the promotion of art and literature, including motion pictures, winds up with a section prohibiting the employment by the Bureau of any person who is not a citizen of the United States.

How to Trick It Up Department:

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's press sheet of exploitation for exhibitors playing Mickey Rooney's "Huckelberry Finn" contains an item explaining the availability and use of a six-foot cutout easel of Mickey, with the added advice that exhibitors can get extra visual effectiveness by placing an old tree-limb fishing pole in Mickey's right hand and a string of fish suspended from his left. The pole, of course, is easily obtained, and Metro says the fish can be painted on a board. "If you can get a string of imitation fish, so much the better," adds Metro. "We doubt," they continued, "whether you can use real fish because of their quick decomposition and consequent odor." Even we city-slickers know that.

A dispute combining elements of a theatrical strike and a comic opera threatened this week to prevent the opening at New York's World Fair of Billy Rose's "Aquacade," in which dancing, singing and swimming beauties of Broadway and Hollywood Boulevard and points in between are to strive toward a performance worthy of the spectacular Mr. Rose.

It all started over the acquatic stars' insistence on $15 weekly for rehearsals to replace Billy Rose's present $5-a-week advance paid during the five-week rehearsals, which sum is to be deducted later out of their weekly pay. After they stopped work, the producer rushed to the players at St. George's pool in Brooklyn and urged them to reconsider. Didn't they realize, he argued, what it meant to be made glamorous; didn't they realize that he was going to have them swim at the Fair in purple water and have them earn the cheers of swooning thousands. Furthermore, he was going to put special heating gadgets in the water to stop the chills. But the girls insisted on feeling some of the coin of the realm, heated purple water or no. They won.

Juarez

(Warner Brothers)

A Picture About an Idea

by JOSEPH O'SULLIVAN

This is a picture, of sweeping proportions, about an idea. It dramatically relates a triangular issue between corrupt autocracy, Napoleon III; kindly but inept royalism, Maximilian; and a theory of democracy, Juarez.

There are stirring conflicts, movement of personages great and small, glamours and shudders, pageantry and politics, loves and hates—but the story is about Democracy expounded by Paul Muni as "Juarez" against a background of historical coloration pertaining to the Europe, but mostly the Mexico of three quarters of a century ago.

The product is rich in moods and vibrant, contrasting intensities, all given increased accent by exceptional attention to the musical component, which is so woven into the structure of the telling that the spectator has no intrusive awareness of it.

The basic materials are history, but history dealt with in about all the freedom accorded to the creative artist concerned with his special purposes. Most apparent among these elements of treatment is the stylized mantling of "Juarez" in Mr. Muni's role in the garb and mien of Abraham Lincoln—and to a degree perhaps beyond the acceptance of some adherents of the traditional Lincoln concept.

To those showmen who look beyond the thought-content and ideological impact, the picture offers, in addition to the obviously topmost personality appeals of Muni and Bette Davis, what perhaps will be revealed as a surprise in the role of "Maximilian" as portrayed by Brian Aherne.

Critics will call Muni's Lincolnesque "Juarez" one of his most notable roles.

But customers will find the pull of sympathy, and no little glamor, too, in Aherne's "Maximilian." In the opinion of many an observer at the Hollywood Theatre gala opening in New York's Broadway Tuesday night, Maximilian was the fat role, most abundantly laden with human appeal, no part of which Mr. Aherne failed to realize upon.

Bette Davis brings to the role of Carlota, the Empress, a sensitive, mobile perception of one of the most pathetic characters in history. The scene in which she confronts Louis Napoleon and upbraids him in a fury of passion, and finally goes insane, is overwhelming in its stark tragedy.

Claude Rains as Napoleon III; John Garfield as Porfirio Diaz, a general in Juarez' army and later to become Dictator of Mexico; Gale Sondergaard as Empress Eugenie; Donald as Marechal Bazaine; Joseph Calleia, Gilbert Roland, Henry O'Neill, Pedro de Cordoba, Montagu Love, and a score of others, contribute sharply-etched, distinguished characterizations.

To the making of this massive picture the producers have brought unusual production values. The Palace of the Tuilleries (residence of the French Kings until 1871), and the Aztec splendors of Chapultepec, the Palazio and the grand old Cathedral of Mexico City are the settings for the man who would be Emperor. The arid and rugged terrain, the Indian village and the mountain crag from the background of the indomitable Mexican Liberator.

An entirely original musical score, composed by Erich Wolfgang Korngold, accompanies the picture, in descriptive and interpretative tonal background, emerging at times to strike a dominant note in the furtherance of the action or to sound a diapason of otherwise inarticulate emotion. Like all of this music-master's scoring, the tonal content never obtrudes or overshadows the dramatic.

In pomp and circumstance, intrigue or tense situation, to the lusty song and rhythmic tramp of marching men or the fury of bloody battle, the music reinforces, connotes and gives significance.

When Carlota prays at the wayside shrine of the Virgin that she may bear a child to give as heir to the throne of Mexico, her fervent petition soars on wings of lovely melody. When the grim, ragged troops of Juarez, on the march and singing a rousing chanson, abruptly become mute when they see the corpses of their compatriots—victims of the Black Decree—the ominous silence is eloquent in its poignant pathos.

When, at Maximilian's request, "La Paloma" is sung outside the cell of the condemned "Emperor" just before he faces the firing squad, it links the disillusioned dreamer to the woman he loves who pleaded so desperately with the French dictator—and so tragically. And in her lonely room in Paris, the demented Carlota hears the strains of "La Paloma," discordant and distorted, perhaps a prescience of the fate awaiting her Maximilian.

The story of "Juarez" begins at that period (1863) when French troops had occupied Mexico for nearly two years, in a vain effort to collect loans made to the dictator, Santa Anna, now deposed, for concessions and lands. Benito Juarez, who had established a constitutional democracy and was now President, had declared a moratorium on these debts; and now the wily Napoleon III was weaving a web of international design, which resulted in Maximilian von Hapsburg accepting the "nomination" in response to a "plebiscite" in Mexico demanding an Emperor.

From these beginnings the action moves swiftly through blood-drenched Mexico to the inevitiable finale.

The screen version, based on a play by Franz Werfel and the novel, "The Phantom Crown," by Bertita Harding, bears out the conclusions of such writers as Jose Luis Blazio, who served as secretary to Maximilian during the Ephemeral Empire, that the brother of Franz Josef of Austria was a lamb among wolves, an idealist who believed he was 'called' to Mexico by the free expression of the will of the people.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Director, William Dieterle. Associate producer, Henry Blanke. Screen play, John Huston, Aeneas MacKenzie, Wolfgang Reinhardt. Based on a play by Franz Werfel, and the novel "The Phantom Crown," by Bertita Harding. Music, Erich Wolfgang Korngold. Dialogue director, Irving Rapper. Photographer, Tony Gaudió. Confessions of a Nazi Spy

Not Coincidental

The brief and unadorned main title of "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" lacks the customary note to the effect that the characters portrayed are fictional and that any similarity to real characters, living or dead, is purely coincidental. In point of fact all of the characters portrayed are, so far as is known still alive and they are portrayed for the most part under their real names.

That reality is a concomitant of the fact that the film, essentially and vividly a spy melodrama, is not a story of international intrigue constructed by an imaginative writer; it is a melodramatic relation on the screen of events spread in headlines not many months ago.

That story, incredible in its revelations of amateur and bungling but widespread spy activity conducted in close connection with intensive, energetic and closely controlled propaganda through the Nazi-American bunds, follows faithfully, naming names and depicting places as the newspapers told the story, the confessions and grand jury testimony of four Nazis now in Federal Prison for espionage and of two others who returned to Germany under sinister circumstances before the trial started in New York.

It is told as history, current history, and inevitably woven through its fabric are implications which under other conditions would result in diplomatic representations from an affronted country which is at present technically a friendly nation. The pointed and ruthless indictment of the Nazi regime, whose objectives, plans and purposes as outlined in the picture follow closely the facts as they are known to the world, is propaganda, perhaps the strongest propaganda of which the screen is capable. As such it is powerfully anti-Nazi but positive only in its stand for America and its ideals according to traditional interpretation. Its overriding note is a plea for the defense of our principles; its theme is that Nazism and Nazi propaganda constitute a threat to these principles, and its aim is to create in audiences an awareness of this menace and to arouse them to a defense against this or similar attacks.

Primarily and in every sense motion picture entertainment, the film uses every nuance of camera art and of dramaturgy not only to press its indictment but to tell its motivating story excitingly well, using vividly fresh newspaper background for an excellent melodrama. Told as pure fiction without the background of the news, it would be unbelievable. Told as present truth its only faults lie in the inconsistencies and lack of complete unity which adherence to the facts made necessary. These in part are overcome by the use of off screen narrative by means of which the story's widely scattered threads, and their untangling by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, are traced.

On two occasions in the film the point is made that the excesses of the Nazi leaders and of the Gestapo are not the will of the German people and that neither all German-Americans nor all those living in the Reich subscribe fully to the fanatical state worship of national socialism.

Skillfully produced and outstanding from a technical standpoint, the picture is rich in its characterizations, remarkably accurate casting showing itself even in the selection of minor roles, notably of German officers and Gestapo agents. The depiction of Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Reichsminister of Propaganda, by an actor whom Warners prefers to leave unidentified, is especially noteworthy.

Name value is available in the listing of Edward G. Robinson as the FBI agent in charge of the inquiry and of Francis Lederer as the amateur spy around whom the story revolves, but exploitation obviously must follow the more direct appeal inherent in the title and subject. Paeans of praise from the metropolitan critics are certain to follow first-run showings, and exhibitors should expect to see their audiences, except the Nazis and their sympathizers, on their feet, cheering, at the end of each showing.

Union Pacific

(Paramount-DeMille)

Epic on Wheels

In his much heralded railroad saga "Union Pacific" Cecil B. DeMille has again this week demonstrated on the screen his special art of the epic with an action tale on the big canvas of the America west and its romantic, dramatic tradition. Excitement is the dominant emotion, with swift succession of contrasting materials and episodes, grim and gay, often furious, sometimes funny. The narrative and action take hold at the start and never let go.

This sixty-fifth of the DeMille opera—which began you'll be remembering with "The Squaw Man"—is his most pretentious effort and performance in the glorification of the days of daring in the great West. Lavish is the word for it, in costs, in cast and materials of its drama.

For top billing the picture has Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea, and there is an abundance of other names of established value.

The telling is concrete, specific, making no arguments requiring the audience to think, making it only necessary to look and feel—all cinema, or all motion picture.

Into it have been poured sufficient thrills and chills to cook up a dozen chapter plays of a dozen chapters each, a parade of quick drawing gun fights, saloon brawls, hard and fast galloping over beautifully photographed countryside, a train robbery, the demolition of a gambling pest hole by a vigilante committee, a railroad wreck on a wintery mountain, an Indian raid of delicious and enjoyable excitement, and a rescue by army men that should rouse the audience to echoing applause.

At the same time the screen-wise Mr. De Mille has seasoned the suspense with a generous pinch of comedy relief, a rich dash of touching romance and the softening flavor of a tear or two from a death scene. One touch of his directorial artistry is superbly evident in the climatic scene wherein the principals, surrounded by murderous redskins, and with the ammunition supply depleted, await either their end or their rescuers' arrival. The raiding Indians' individual reactions to their spoils, such as a piano, feminine undergarments and a wooden cigar store Indian, should bring a tempestuous comedy reaction from any kind of audience under any kind of local conditions.

Miss Stanwyck as "Mollie Monahan," with a brogue as euphonious as her Celtic namepart, and Mr. McCrea, looking as dependable and handsome as ever, form a comely and capable couple. Akim Tamiroff, in a broadly humorous role reminiscent of the Falstaffian "Dominique You" of "The Buccaneer" memory, and Lynne Overman, in a natural human character portrayal of "Leach Ovemile," are responsible for many of the excellently played lighter moments. Robert Preston as the rival for Miss Stanwyck's affections is marked herewith for upper bracket productions. Brian Donlevy is the principal heavy. That fine old actor, J. M. Kerrigan, offers a finished study of a faithful Irish trainman. Credited for some skilled fiction building are Walter DeLeon, C. Gardner Sullivan and Jesse Lasky, Jr., who worked on an adaptation by Jack Cunningham from a story by Ernest Haycox. The camera manipulations under the sensitive skill of Victor Milner and Dewey Wrigley has caught the broad scope of the picture's broad plains, snow blocked mountain passes and the rough hill country.

The picture and the railroad begin with a conference of politicians and business men in Washington. One of the sponsors secretly plans to sabotage the work in the interest of a rival road from the west. The scene shifts westward into the districts of the rowdy labor camps where "Jeff Butler" is overseer. He meets "Mollie," postmistress along the route. A romance is complicated by the competition of "Dick Allen," former army pal of "Butler" and now in the employ of the gambler "Campeau" (Brian Donlevy). The pair have been hired to impede the progress of the railroad building by sponsoring such anti-labor distractions as gambling, liquor and women of the dancehalls.

The company pay train is robbed by "Allen" and a gang. He carries the haul to "Mollie's" car home, and is trailed by "Butler." To save "Jeff" from "Allen" and his confederates, the girl promises to marry the train robber. Later, she prevails upon "Allen" to return the money. "Mollie" is dismissed from the postal service when she becomes implicated in the holdup, and "Allen" flees. The three meet on a train beset by Indian raiders. The army comes to the rescue; "Allen" is killed by "Campeau," who in turn falls before "Butler's" sharpshooting confederates, "Fiesta" (Akim Tamiroff) and "Leach Overmile" (Lynne Overman). The finale finds the driving of the golden spike at Promontory Point for the completion of the "Union Pacific."

Such is the plot, but the real story is the picture itself.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

Ask a Policeman

(Gainsborough-MGM)

Police Extravaganza

The latest disguise for Will Hay, pursuing his saga of the elderly Englishman muddling through, is as the confused and bespectacled Budfoot, sergeant of the police force of the Olde Worlde Village of Turnbottom Round. Hay has his stooges, the portly youngster Moffatt and the senile Moore Marriott, as "Keystone Cops." The ingredients, exploiting the Britisher's good humored raillery at the arm of the law, and the townsman's genial superiority to the country village, are the same as before—an inconsequential welter of slapstick and comedy nonsense.

Such comedy is aimed obviously at the unsophisticates, among whom Hay has, as witness his HERALD POLL status, no small following. This laughter vehicle is an advance on some of his more recent films.

Hay and his buddies invent a smuggling racket only to find there are real smugglers in their own village, get mixed up with a phantom hearse with a headless driver, and end up by driving a London Transport bus into the smugglers' lorry on Brookland motor racecourse.

The customary team of director Varnel and screen playwright Marriott Edgar and Val Guest collaborate again, with both eyes on the lower priced seats.

Seen at the Cambridge theatre with a trade show audience, the film was obviously enjoyed without effort, appealing directly to the less adult sections of the critical mind, yet of safe popular comedy caliber.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Calling Dr. Kildare

(MGM)

Sequel to "Young Dr. Kildare"

Comment anent "Young Dr. Kildare" in the "What the Picture Did for Me" section of MOTION PICTURE HERALD indicated exhibitor approval of the series. In ways that extend farther than the continuation of a similar story idea and employment of the same principal characters, "Calling Dr. Kildare" is a sequel to "Young Dr. Kildare," a fresh order of the same amusement recipe.

The backgrounds and general dressing indicate that the budget for the follow-up picture was increased. More persons are employed to tell the story, and in the story itself more and different entertainment elements are introduced. The same principal players are there, Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Nat Pendleton, Samuel S. Hinds, Lynne Carver, Emma Dunn and Walter Kingsford. The most notable additions are Lana Turner, Laraine Day and Bobs Watson. Harry Ruskin and Willis Goldbeck are again the screen play writers and Harold S. Bucquet carries on as director.

Plans of that ogre with a tender heart, old "Dr. Gillespie," to knock sense into the head of his youthful protege, "Kildare," go awry when the young doctor involves himself in a murder case and in a romantic affair with "Rosalie," a throwback to the sirens of the flaming youth era. The mess is straightened out, but not before "Kildare" once more proves his detective ability, and "Gillespie" has to use all his diplomacy to get the young doctor out of trouble.

There is a full quota of human interest, romance, comedy, mystery, suspense and surprise. Two or three sequences involving "Gillespie" and "Tommy" (little Bobs Watson of "Boys Town" and "Alexander Graham Bell") undoubtedly will bring lumps into the throats.

Previewed at the Village theatre, Westwood, Cal. The choice of that theatre indicates MGM's belief that the series has caught on. The first "Kildare" picture was previewed at the Uptown theatre, in which the studio's secondary product usually is presented, but the Village is reserved for more pretentious ventures.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Lucky Night

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Comedy-Romance

Myrna Loy and Robert Taylor, two of 1938's Money Making Stars, are given almost exclusive roles in this comedy romance, and the supporting cast, with the exception of Henry O'Neill, have little to do.

The plot is novel but the dialogue overreaches for sprightliness, to the impairment of a picture which depends mainly on the spoken word.

"Cora Jordan," tired of life as a society girl, leaves home in search of a job and adventure. She meets "Bill Overton," a down and out play-boy. In a restaurant they find that neither can pay for the dinner. They invest their last coin in a slot machine, hit the jackpot. Now lady luck is with them. They capture a gangster who has jumped on their car, which they also have won, and collect the reward money. After celebrating, they awaken the next morning to find that they are married. Confronting "Cora's" father they find, for the first time, that they are in love and are determined to make a go of married life, much to the disbelief of "Mr. Jordan."

Robert Taylor here leans more decidedly toward comedy than he has before, a sagacious move that should register particularly with the feminine audience. Myrna Loy continues to be a glamorous leading woman.

Blind Alley

(Columbia)

Psychoanalytical Melodrama

What makes a killer kill?

Is psychiatry a cure for crime?

These are the kind of questions a showman advertising "Blind Alley" may hurl at his prospective customers and depend on the picture to answer.

The other way to exploit the film is as a forthright melodrama involving a gangster's escape from jail, the terrorizing of a houseful of plain folk, his coldblooded killing of a number of individuals and his ultimate demise at the hands of police.

"Blind Alley" is a most unusual type of melodrama. It presents Chester Morris at his deadliest best as an escaped convict and Ralph Bellamy in fine fettle as a psychiatrist who psychoanalyzes the desperado while held prisoner by him. Both give excellent performances. Competent supporting performances are contributed by the several able players listed after this report.

The screen play by Philip MacDonald, Michael Blankfort and Albert Duffy, from a play by James Warwick, is a well wrought composition contrived in such manner as to spread emphasis effectively between the active physical aspect of the story and the necessarily inactive passages during which the psychiatrist accomplishes his analysis of the killer's mental status. This is by orthodox psychiatric methods and they are adroitly explained as the analysis progresses. Unlike certain imported pictures in which dream symbols have been dealt with, these are fully identified for the customers. Director Charles Vidor has seen to it that every point is scored decisively.

The production, excellently staged by Fred Kohlmar, associate producer, may be offered as an extraordinary type of melodrama or simply as a melodrama, depending upon the class of patronage appealed to. Generally speaking, the intelligent theatregoer would seem somewhat more likely to respond enthusiastically to the film than the uninformed, although there is plenty of shooting and such for those who like their criminology gory.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, where it seemed to satisfy thoroughly.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Street of Missing Men

Melodrama

A melodrama, "Street of Missing Men" deals with the regeneration of a gangster. It is a slow process, with repeated changes of mind before the gangster emerges as a hero, a posthumous hero, who died befriending the man who had been instrumental in sending him to prison. The gangster's change of heart is predicated on the influence of a newsboy, played by Tommy Ryan, who starred in Republic's "Tenth Avenue Kid."

The story is well acted by well known players. Charles Bickford plays the gangster, Harry Carey the newspaper publisher, and Mabel Todd, Guinn Williams, Nana Bryant, Ralph Graves, John Gallaudet and Regis Toomey round out a cast of proved character actors. While the production is not swiftly paced, the authors and director built up the story structure to considerable suspense.

"Cash Darwin," formerly a top racketeer, is released from Alcatraz. He flies east to the offices of the "Evening Clarion," owned by "Putnam," the man who sent him to jail. In front of the "Clarion" building, "Cash" helps "Tommy," a newsboy, rout the henchmen of "Reardon," a gang leader out to destroy the "Clarion." "Cash" goes to "Putnam's" office with the intention to kill, but agrees to become the newspaper's circulation manager. His idea is to break down the "Clarion" from within.

"Cash" makes a deal with "Reardon," but meanwhile has become attached to the newsboy. When "Tommy" learns of the deal with "Reardon" he leaves "Cash's" apartment. "Reardon," impatient, has his henchmen set fire to the "Clarion" building. "Tommy" is shot trying to stop them. "Cash" rushes the boy to the hospital, has a fight with "Reardon" and hurries to the fire where he is instrumental in removing a time bomb, but loses his life in doing it.

Heroes of the Marne

(Spectrum)

War Story

Here is presented in chronological order but with little dramatic effectiveness the story of one French bourgeois family in the world war. The war is presented through newsreel shots shown in kaleidoscopic fashion. 'La Famille Lefrancois," which was the film's title in France, consisting of father, mother and three sons, are middle class farmers. They accept the war in a fatalistic way. In the presentation the picture is a condemnation of war and its aftermath.

The film was written and directed by Andre Hugon, and stars Raimu as "Pere Lefrancois," Germaine Dermoz as his wife and Bernard Lancret, Paul Cambo and Pierre Louis as his three sons. Jacqueline Porel plays the daughter of a neighbor, who bears "Jean" a son out of wedlock. The story begins just prior to the war. "Jean" and "Helene" are in love, but "Pere Lefrancois" will not permit marriage. War is declared and the three sons are sent by their father to defend France. "Jean" becomes a famous aviator and is acclaimed a national hero but dies in an air fight the day the armistice is declared. "Helene," who gave birth to "Jean's" son the day the war was declared, becomes a waitress in an Amiens restaurant and when that town is occupied is instrumental in informing the French of German planes. She is about to be shot as a spy when the French retake the town.

Reviewed at the Little Carnegie, New York. A particularly small afternoon audience was undemonstrative during the running of the film but a group applauded the film at its end.—P. C. M., JR.

Distributed by Spectrum Pictures, New York. Produced, written and directed by Andre Hugon. Original music by Jacques Ibert. Running time, 88 minutes. Release date, April 22, 1939. Adult audience classification.

The Curtain Rises

Gallic Stage Door

American audiences, comparing this French-made study of the scholastic manufacture of stage fledgings with Hollywood productions based on the same theme, say "Stage Door" and "Dramatic School," must find the American numbers far superior in entertainment values and technical makeup.

Oustanding in talent and dominating the film is Louis Jouvet, in the role of the dramatic coach, though the part is subordinate to the plot. The trio of young folk, who seem to be more concerned with their love lines than their stage dialogues, are assumed adequately enough by three newcomers to the French picture world, Claude Dauphin, as a collegiate heart breaker, Janine Darcey as an aspiring Bernhardt, and Odette Joyeux, as a discarded and spiteful rival. The playing of Roger Blin in the minor role of a demented farmer boy should cause the spectator to take notice. The uninspired script is by Henri Jeanson, who did the screen plays of the memorable "Life Dances On" and "Prison without Bars." Direction from Marc Allegret is routine. English titles from Martin J. Lewis and Harold S. Neuberger are satisfactory.

Seen at an early Monday afternoon performance at the cozy but tiny 55th Street Playhouse, a New York City little theatre specializing in the retailing of foreign films, where a rather large audience appeared to be interested. —JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

Their Last Bean

(20th Century-Fox)

Terry-Toon

The fox family have had a hard winter and when their last morsel of food is destroyed by the fox hunters and blood-hounds, one of the foxes decide to do something about it. Swift of foot he baits the hunters and hounds into a long and merry chase and then returns to the hunt club and appropriates the dnnner left by the hunters. An entertaining and humorous cartoon.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp

Cartoon

Max Fleischer, in this two-reel color cartoon featuring Popeye and Olive Oyl, has Olive as a Hollywood script writer who pictures herself a princess with Popeye as Aladdin, a poor, but honest, merchant. A magician, who is trying to become supreme in power, tricks Popeye into revealing the hiding place of a magic lamp. Popeye regains possession of the lamp and transforms himself into a wealthy prince to win the heart of Olive. The magician reappears, this time disguised as a lamp vendor, and trades one of his lamps for the magic lamp, through a servant. Now in possession of the lamp the magician commands it to carry the castle and the princess away. Popeye, with the aid of his spinach, overcomes the magician and rescues Olive.—Running time, 22 minutes.

Johann Strauss Music

The melodies of Johann Strauss are introduced in the latest of this series. Such favorites as "Vienna Woods," "Life in Vienna," "Voice of Spring" and the most popular "Blue Danube" are sung by Christine McIntyre with a choral background. The costumes and waltzing of the Strauss period lend color and charm to the picture.—Running time, 11 minutes.

The Londoners

(Realist-Technique)

Documentary

Made to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the London County Council, this stirring and resourcefully made chronicle must stimulate the civic pride of the Londoner. As a record of what municipalism has done for one of the world's greatest cities, it has an immediate and wide appeal to other than local audiences. The picture traces, with the aid of reconstructed episodes, and a very few early prints, the evolution of London from the stage of the gin-palace, blowsy midwife and sordid slum, to the enlightened and humane city of today, with its mighty and gratuitous medical service, its educational system, its dwellings, parks, fire brigades and docks. It is a moving and an inspiring record, handled with reportorial vividness, economy of expression and a telling commentary by Howard Marshall, commentator of the British Broadcasting Corporation. An example of the best grade civic documentary, the film also has entertainment qualities of appeal to the more intelligent audiences. It is destined for showing at the New York World Fair, where it should awaken no small interest.—Running time, 35 minutes.

Hollywood Stars

The Tropical Ice Garden on the outskirts of Hollywood is the setting for this short subject. The ice rink is open all year around for the professional skater, motion picture stars and their fans. Many Hollywood notables are presented such as Norma Shearer, Mickey Rooney, Rita Hayworth, Dick Purcell, Ann Sheridan and Franklin Pangborn, who adds a touch of humor to the reel with his efforts to skate.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

Sportscope

In this Sportscope subject the 100th birthday of baseball is commemorated. The Chicago Cubs are featured and they are shown limbering up in spring training at Catalina Island. Gabby Harnett, Larry French, Dizzy Dean and Gus Mancuso perform for the cameras, in both slow and regular motion, demonstrating the basic functions of each player in covering his position. Dean hurls a few pitches at a glass window representing the strike area, showing how an accomplished pitcher can put the ball where it is hardest for the batter to hit. The subject was produced by Frederic Ullman, Jr., and supervised by Frank Donovan. Running time, 9 minutes.

NATIONAL VARIETY CLUB IN ANNUAL GATHERING

Banquet for 1,000 Closes Three-Day Convention of Social Groups in Detroit

Several hundred motion picture exchangemen, circuit owners and independent exhibitors and executives and others from New York arrived in Detroit Thursday for the annual national convention of the Variety Clubs of America, the industry's own social and philanthropic organizations in the field.

Opening Thursday at the Book-Cadillac hotel, the meetings were to run on through Saturday evening when some 1,000 from the industry and Michigan business and civic circles are to attend the annual banquet at the same place. Among the stars to make personal appearances in the floor show terminating the banquet are George Jessel, Ethel Shutta, Lloyd Nolan and George Raft. Norman Prescott will be toastmaster. Speakers will include Walter Chrysler, William Knudsen, General Motors board chairman; William R. Rodgers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer general sales manager; Ned E. Depinet, RKO vice-president; Thomas Reed, state attorney general, and John B. Kennedy, radio commentator.

A two-reel film on charitable activities of the clubs will be shown at the banquet.

The Program

In addition to the banquet Saturday night, the program of convention follows:

Thursday, 1 P. M., meeting of national officers.

Friday, 10 A. M., opening session of general convention for all delegates, officers and guests.

Saturday, 10 A. M., closing session; election of national officers for 1940, and selection of 1940 convention city.

Sunday, visits to points of interests in and around Detroit by delegates and guests.

Among those planning to accompany the New York delegation were Mr. Rodgers, H. M. Richey, Nate Blumberg, Neil Agnew, Jules Levy, Ed McEvoy, Tom Connors, Ed Saunders, Ted O'Shea, Jack Alicoate, Dave Palfreyman, Chick Lewis, Ed Kuykendall, George Weeks, Max Cohen, Charles Reagan and W. C. Gehring.

Others to attend from out of town were Al Steffes and Bob O'Donnell, who are bringing large groups from Minneapolis and Texas.

John Harris, of Pittsburgh, national president, and Chief Barker Charles Parry, of Detroit Tent Five, will preside at the business sessions. Announcement will be made of the sponsorship by Detroit Tent Five of a building to house homeless boys. The Club will stage a midnight benefit show at which it expects to raise $8,000. Father Harold Markey of Trinity Church will direct the home, where the boys will receive education and training.

Twenty delegates and five alternates from the Pittsburgh Variety Club were to attend the Convention, headed by Chief Barker Ira Cohn. The National delegates are Harry Kalmine and Harold Lund; alternates are Dr. A. I. Wise and Mark Goldman. The national officers are Mr. Harris, John Maloney, national chairman, Heart of Variety Committee, James Balmer, national Dough Guy, and John McGreevey, national Canvassman.

The Chicago group, which will seek a charter for a local club, is headed by Johnny Mednikow, and includes Manny Gottleib, Peck Gommersall, Jerry Mack, Bill Bishop, Eddie Brunell, Gene Rich and Dave Dubin.

Plans were to be discussed to further the Variety Clubs' charity activities.

J. E. Flynn is general chairman of the convention. The general committee includes E. C. Beatty, William Carlson, E. E. Kirchner, F. J. Downey, David Idzal, George Trendle, C. C. Perry, H. M. Richey, David Newman, C. H. Merritt, Harold Robinson, Earl Hudson and Elmer Kiehler.

Kansas City Meets

The Kansas City Variety Club Bowling League plans to hold its annual end-of-the-season dinner May 8th. Jimmy Lewis of RKO, president of the League, will present the bowling prizes for the season. A business meeting was held April 24th.

Cincinnati Holds Dance

The Cincinnati Variety Club will hold its annual dinner dance and floor show at the Netherland Plaza May 13th, with proceeds to go to the Club's charity fund. Allan Moritz, Columbia branch manager, is chairman.

Kauffman Honored

Joseph R. Kauffman, Universal branch manager who was recently transferred from the Pittsburgh to the Cleveland exchange was tendered a testimonial dinner Monday under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Variety Club.

Translux Re-elects

Directors and officers of the Translux Corporation were all re-named and re-elected at meetings last week in New York City. The officers are Percival E. Thurber, president; E. H. Unkles, vice-president and general manager; A. C. Paine, vice-president; Robert Daine, vice-president; A. D. Erickson, treasurer; Aquila Giles, secretary; A. T. Mulcahy, assistant secretary. The directors are Percy M. Thurber, Percival E. Thurber, Robert W. Atkins, Robert Daine, George T. Eichelberger, Harold B. Farrington, Robert L. Gordon, Edwin G. Lauder, Jr., George H. Robinson, Walter Siemers, and Major Leslie Thompson.

Equity Election May 26th

The annual meeting and election of Actors Equity will be held at the Hotel Astor, New York, May 26th. At a meeting held this week, J. T. Schless, who will produce Shakespearean revivals at the New York World's Fair, appeared before the council to determine whether his agreement with Equity would be altered because of higher requirements for Fair shows which were set some time ago. The council ruled that the agreement made in January with Mr. Schless would be permitted to stand.

Chase with Trailer Company

Maurice Chase, who recently closed his independent exchange, Chase Pictures, Inc., in Cincinnati, to open the Avon, a neighborhood house there, has joined Trailer Made, Inc., from which Ralph Kinsler resigned to become branch manager for Warner Brothers in Cincinnati. Mr. Chase will retain his interest in the Avon.

Forum Decries Film Censors

Film censorship was variously described as "very, very vicious" and as "the cancer on the body of democracy" at a forum on the subject held under the auspices of the Film Division of the Theatre Arts Committee Thursday at New York's Hotel Astor.

Edward Golden, Monogram vice-president, said that "The motion picture industry is the only creative art hampered by censorship, which is a constant annoyance to the industry." Mr. Golden characterized censors as "essentially destructive," and said that there was no censorship in radio, press or theatre.

Langdon W. Post, Jr., member of the executive committee of the National Board of Review, who acted as chairman of the meeting, said that censorship was "insidious," and that "only the industry itself can fight it." "I am delighted," he added, "that you can see Communist and Nazi pictures in New York." Also, "motion pictures can never be an art," according to Mr. Post, "unless it allows itself freedom."

Harry Brandt, Independent Theatre Owners Association president, said: "We here in exhibition in the state of New York are vitally interested in the removal of censorship. Seventy foreign pictures were banned in New York last year, and most of them were thought suitable for the people of Jersey City!"

The other speakers were Rita Hochheimer, director of visual education, New York State Board of Education, and A. J. Isserman, counsel for Consumers Union.

Williams Adds Seven in Oklahoma and Arkansas

Seven more theatres have been added to the newly formed circuit headed by K. Lee Williams. Mr. Williams now has bought 10 houses in Arkansas and Oklahoma to be operated under K. Lee Williams Theatres, Inc.

The seven theatres are the New, Liberty and Gem, Nashville, Ark.; Best, Tower and Arrow, Broken Bow, Okla., and the Dixie at Ashdown, Ark. The three other houses, all acquired since January 1st, are the New Queen and Gem, Dequeen, Ark., and the Pine at Dierks, Ark.

Western Electric Reports on Fund

The pension fund for employees of Western Electric totaled $52,277,636 on December 31st last, according to a report made to employees Tuesday. Started in 1906, the fund now takes care of the more than 30,000 workers in the company. At the end of 1938 there were 1,280 retired employees receiving pensions for service and 118 getting disability pensions.

Richard Bennett, the actor, father of Joan and Constance Bennett, and Sir John Terrell, will be producer and manager, respectively, of the new Bucks County Playhouse in New Hope, Pennsylvania. The theatre will present new and experimental plays, with scholarships already provided by Constance Bennett, and other film stars.

George Mitchley has been named manager of the General Film Exchange in Seattle by Edward Hudson, owner. The exchange handles state right films.

UA & FOX TO COMPETE WITH THE SCHLESINGERS

United Artists Plans Own Exchange System, Says Kelly; 20th-Fox Already Active

Decision by United Artists to establish its own system of exchanges in South Africa, a project which virtually will end relations with the dominant Schlesinger circuit in that territory, was announced Friday in New York, by Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution. The new company, he said, will be known as United Artists South Africa, Pty., Ltd. It will be based in Johannesburg, will be headed by Al Lowe, and will service a circuit of independent theatres being developed likewise in competiton to the Schlesingers.

Up to Schlesinger

According to Mr. Kelly, who was in a mood described as jubilant, the end of relations with the Schlesinger chain was not United Artists' choice, but a matter for the Schlesinger interests to decide; they were still free to buy United Artists' film, he noted.

Loew-MGM has been expanding for some time in South Africa in competition to the Schlesingers.

Mr. Lowe, who will head the new servicing company, has been in charge in Japan. He has also been, for the United Artists' foreign department, in the Argentine, Brazil and India. While his headquarters will be in Johannesburg, branch offices probably will be opened in northern and southern Rhodesia, Mr. Kelly said. Operations in the field are to start in July, with release of the 1938-1939 product. The Consolidated chain (Schlesinger) has about 200 theatres, and is releasing the 1937-38 product.

17 in Independent Circuit

The independent circuit is called Cinema Theatre Investments, Pty., Ltd., with 17 houses operating already, and due to receive the United Artists product in July, as well as Twentieth Century-Fox product, and with a total of 38 houses expected eventually. While United Artists and Twentieth Century Fox are servicing these "independent" theatres jointly, Mr. Kelly emphasized that their exchange operations will be entirely separate.

The independent exhibitors will work under five to ten-year franchises, Mr. Kelly pointed out. Contracts already are set with first-run houses of the chain in Johannesburg. Durban, Port Elizabeth, Pretoria, and East London. As for Capetown, Mr. Kelly explained that a city-wide reclamation project made it unwise to erect a large first-run house at present; however, he said, the company probably would arrange distribution with a smaller theatre until the project is completed, whereupon the first-run would become a second-run.

Twentieth Century-Fox is providing product for most of the 17 houses already erected, Mr. Kelly said; United Artists' servicing will have to wait until July.

He emphasized that United Artists did not have any financial interest in the independent chain. Said he:

"Twentieth Century-Fox pioneered; it is to our advantage to trail along with them."

One of the objects in United Artists procedure in South Africa was to ascertain the exact value of its pictures at the box office, Mr. Kelly said, and indicated that the company is ready for the opposition of the Schlesinger interests.

Mr. Kelly emphasized the plan to use the first-run theatre being erected in Johannesburg with the help of Twentieth Century-Fox, on property owned partly by Harry Lourie, South African diamond merchant. He said that the contracts for erection of the theatre already had been awarded, and that the house would be completed by May, 1940.

As for United Artists' interests in Spain Mr. Kelly said.

"We have never closed there, with our head office always in Barcelona. We have been operating all through the civil war, on both sides. But we have not been able to take out a dime from the country; and, at the present time, we do not even know the value of the currency. We are sending some of our men over there to investigate, and to consolidate the offices in what for about two years were two territories.

"We have made money in Spain all through the war. At the present time we have a large balance in Barcelona, but I couldn't tell you whether it's worth one of Sammy Cohen's (United Artists' foreign publicity head) cigars, or whether it is real money."

Mr. Kelly was asked whether it should be expected, now that the Spanish war is over, that General Franco, the head of the victorious regime, would acknowledge the material aid of Germany and Italy by allowing their technicians and ideological principles to dominate the Spanish motion picture industry. Mr. Kelly replied that obvious inferences were not always true, pointing out that Italy barred "Marco Polo," while the picture was successful in Japan, though the countries are in close cooperation by treaty.

RCA Announces New Microphone

RCA Manufacturing Company this week announced that a new microphone had been developed in the RCA research laboratories that combined the characteristics of three different type microphones and can be used for radio, motion picture or public address purposes.

The instrument, according to the announcement, picks up only sounds reaching the front or live side when the control switch is in the uni-directional position, performs as an ordinary velocity instrument as a bi-directional microphone and in the third position permits sounds coming from any angle to be picked up.

Ohio Censor Board Doubles Eliminations

The largest number of reels in any one month since June, 1937, was reviewed in the five weeks of March by the Ohio censors, who ordered a total of 33 eliminations from 733 reels. The March figure compares with 594 reels reviewed and 16 eliminations ordered in February, and 676 reels reviewed and 33 eliminations ordered in March of 1938.

United Theatres, Inc., operators of 18 neighborhood theatres in New Orleans, has revised its advertising policy, cutting the lineage used in two daily newspapers from 116 to 86 lines each a week and in turn have given this reduced weekly total to four newspapers. As a result, the circuit has increased the aggregate lineage at a cost of several dollars a week.

$600,000 for New Theatres

With the announcement this week of the expenditure of $450,000 for theatre projects in the southwest, proposed expenditure in that territory in recent months for new theatres totals $600,000.

Pettigrew and Worley, Dallas architects, have prepared plans for $385,000 in theatre construction in the area. The plans include a 1,300 seat house at Tyler, Texas; a 700 seat show at Bryan, Texas; a 1,100 seat job in Houston, Texas; a 1,000 seat theatre at San Antonio and still another 1,700 seat house in that city in which they are consulting architects.

Corgan and Moore, Dallas architects, are preparing plans for a new Tower theatre at Little Rock, Ark., valued at $40,000 and plans for remodelling the Hiland theatre there to cost $24,000. The fireproof Tower will be started in two weeks and will accommodate 925 on two floors while the semi-fireproof Hiland seats 875 on two floors.

At Waxahachie, Texas, an office and store building is being converted into a theatre to be known as the Ritz, at a cost of $20,000, Houston and Smith, another Dallas architectural firm has announced. This undertaking is half completed and will open in about a month, seating 550 persons on two floors with a side entrance off the square for Negroes, who will have their own section of the balcony.

Japanese Newsreel Shows Rise in War

Showing of newsreels have increased in Japan since the beginning of hostilities in China, according to a report on censorship conditions in Japan, received by the United States Department of Commerce. The increase is provided by the portrayal of war scenes, the report notes.

Other pertinent facts: In 1938, the censor's office in the Home Ministry handled 120,944 reels; in 1938, 115,672 reels. There were 19,289 more newsreel reels in 1938 than in 1936, the report states.

Sign "Gulliver" Contracts

Lou Diamond as head of Paramount's licensee department for Max Fleischer's first feature length color cartoon, "Gulliver's Travels," has signed with seven organizations for the sponsoring of toys and novelties. They are the Saalfield Publishing Company, for books; Sun Rubber Company, rubber dolls; Ideal Novelty and Toy Company, composition dolls, segmented dolls and toys both in wood and composition, cable dolls and also stuffed goods; American Miniature Company; Norwich Knitting Company; Cramer-Tobias-Mayer, Inc., advertising agency, and Ira G. Katz, children's hats.

Engel Transferred to Albany

Joseph Engel, Universal's Cleveland manager, has been transferred to Albany and will be succeeded in Cleveland by Joseph Kaufmann, Pittsburgh manager. Mr. Kaufmann's place is being taken by Jules Lapidus, formerly district manager of Grand National.

ZUKOR OPTIMISTIC OVER SOME FOREIGN STATES

Home from European Tour, Objects to Propaganda in Films Unless They're Entertaining

Adolph Zukor, one of the founders of Paramount and home from a study in Europe of the company's production and distribution interests thinks that several foreign countries, far from vanishing as customers for Hollywood's films, are growing markets, he commented at a press conference in New York last Thursday, the day of his arrival from Europe. Mr. Zukor also attacked those in and out of the motion picture industry who would achieve reforms by legislation; indorsed the trade practice program idea; declared television no competition to theatres; and declared that politicallv significant pictures have no place on a theatre screen, though conceding a few moments later that if such pictures were dressed to be "entertainment" they were "all right."

"All we need to do," Mr. Zukor said of market potentialities, "is to make pictures with more appeal, pictures with a universal appeal." He said they prefer action pictures.

Mr. Zukor noted that English production was slow, but more sensible than the unwise and over-financed rush of a few years ago.

Decries Legislative Agitation

He pleaded that no groups in the industry be "foolish" enough to cause or demand legislation which would prevent producers from making "big" pictures "at a time when the markets are so unsettled." Said he:

"The picture business is utterly unlike any other business; and I believe that all the evils, if there are any, should be solved only by people in the business because they understand it," he explained.

"Nobody outside can write a ticket for it. There are so many people in the industry who can't agree on what the proper solution to troubles are. How can we expect the very many more people outside the industry to agree?

Mr. Zukor approved the "self control" moves in the industry, as exemplified by the trade practice program drawn up by the major companies and submitted to the various exhibitor organizations shortly before the hearings began in Washington three weeks ago on the Neely bill to bar block and blind booking. The bill has the backing of the Allied States Association and various reform groups outside the industry.

Entertainment Only

On "propaganda" in films Mr. Zukor said: "I don't think that Hollywood should deal with anything but entertainment. The newsreels take care of current events. To make pictures of a political significance, I think, is a mistake. People have enough of politics every day. When they go to a theatre, they want to forget."

He immediately amended this definite stand, however:

"Of course, if it's entertainment, it's all right —but not propaganda. They can make a story on controversal topics in Hollywood, and still make it entertaining."

On television, Mr. Zukor judged thus: "I don't believe that television at any time could be competitive to theatres."

Mr. Zukor did not anticipate any moves to oust Paramount from its position in Germany; nor did he anticipate, before the assembled trade press, any difficulties in Spain, which he thought would remain an open market.

Upon English production, he ventured an estimate of 30 to 35 pictures a year as a "good" average, and said that Paramount would make at least six pictures in England this year.

Mr. Zukor was three months in Europe, mostly in Great Britain, but also in France, Belgium, Holland and the Scandinavian countries. He expects to leave New York for Australia in late June or early July, with John Hicks, Paramount foreign chief. On his return Mr. Zukor will embark upon a survey of the Latin American areas.

St. John Exchanges Await Law Ruling

Instructions have been received by managers of film distributing headquarters in St. John, N. B., for the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland from home offices in Toronto to withhold further selling to Nova Scotia accounts until attorneys have time to consider provisions of the bill to prohibit "undue discrimination," recently passed by the Nova Scotia legislature.

Legislation might result, managers say, in the exclusion of Nova Scotia from contracts for film rental. If the Nova Scotia business is dropped they say, the remaining trade in films would not warrant a maritime distributing center in St. John. Films would have to be handled from Montreal as they were before the establishment of exchanges in St. John.

Under the bill the Government would have the power to penalize distributors if it considers there has been discrimination in the selling, leasing or renting of films.

There are 110 cases in recorder's court in Montreal waiting decision in a test case in superior court involving the children's admission provisions of the Motion Picture Act.

The test case is an application for a prohibition order to prevent the recorder's court from hearing a complaint against Joe Brown, theatre employee, of having admitted a child under 16. Mr. Brown had objected on the ground that authorization of the Attorney General for the charge had not been obtained. The recorder dismissed the objection and Mr. Brown moved for a prohibition order in the higher court.

NBC and CBS Announce Grosses

The new and renewal business at the National Broadcasting Company for the first four months of 1939 is 78.5 per cent above the billings for the same months last year. The January through April gross for 1939 amounts to $11,519,041, compared to the 1938 gross for the same period of $6,451,680.

CBS consolidated income statement for the first quarter of the year shows a gross income for the period of $6,707,567, compared to $6,998,773. Respective figures a year ago were $1,151,526 and $1,494,980.

New Regulations Issued by FCC

New regulations covering relay, international, television, facsimile, high frequency, non-commercial educational and development broadcasting stations have been issued by the Federal Communications Commission in Washington. Effective immediately, the new rules make several changes in the various classes of stations.

Modifications in the rules governing facsimile broadcast and high frequency stations include the addition of several frequencies from 25,000 to 116,000 kilocycles. This remedies the deficiency felt under the Havana allocation, which dropped three low frequencies, previously used for facsimile broadcasting.

Several additional frequencies are made available for high frequency stations, which are continued on an experimental basis.

Licensees of relay stations are required to specify the regular broadcast station with which the relay station operates, and must be associated with a specific standard broadcast station or network system. Relay broadcast operating on frequencies from 30,000 to 41,000 kilocycles have been removed from the experimental classification and new frequencies have been provided from 130,000 to 138,000 kilocycles to be operated either with frequency or with amplitude modulation.

No changes of significance have been made in the rules governing television stations.

FCC Concludes Radio Monopoly Hearings

The hearings on radio monopoly conducted by the Federal Communications Commission were concluded last Wednesday, with a request by Louis Caldwell, Mutual Broadcasting System counsel, that the FCC issue an order prohibiting stations from making deals extending their present contracts with the networks until the results of the inquiry were announced. The FCC will take the measure under consideration, and will receive briefs in opposition up to May 19th.

CBS Deal to Buy World System Falls Through

The proposed purchase of the World Broadcasting System by the Columbia Broadcasting System has fallen through. It is reported that the chief obstacle was inability of CBS to come to terms with Electrical Research Products, Inc., on sound recording licenses.

CBS has announced that it will enter the electrical transcription business through its recently acquired American Record Corporation. Complete recording and processing equipment will be installed.

Two Plan New Exchanges

Twentieth Century-Fox is planning its own exchange building in Cincinnati, probably at Central Parkway and Elder streets in the film district.

Universal Pictures will build its own exchange building in Kansas City. It will be of two stories, cost about $60,000, be air-conditioned, and be complete by July 1.

ARE THEY
CATHOLIC, JEW, PROTESTANT?

(Think of this when you read tonight's headlines!)

You'll be proud to be part of this. You'll be glad that in this topsy turvy world there's some sanity left and it's working right in your own city. You'll agree this is Americanism in its truest sense and you'll get a tug at the heart to think that the brotherhood of man touches you closely today.

Whatever you give to the GREATER NEW YORK FUND goes to a united effort of all races and creeds to take care of the sick, the needy, the troubled. As you glance at the headlines in your newspaper tonight, think deeply what this means. Protestant, Catholic, Jew in the world's greatest city join hands for the common good, to help all of its people now, to "build for tomorrow" a healthier, happier city. 380 allied groups are benefitted, covering all communal obligations in one annual solicitation.

Some who read these lines may have great wealth . . . each should give in proportion . . . but everyone who bears the name of American should contribute at least a day's pay a year to the GREATER NEW YORK FUND . . . a united gesture whose significance will roar across America and the world.

The Fund Chairman of your company will communicate with you. Others kindly send contributions direct to Motion Picture Division, Greater New York Fund, 1540 Broadway, New York City

Political Refugee

Twentieth Century Production has acquired an original story, "Report on a Fugitive," as a starring vehicle for Margaret Lockwood and Michael Redgrave in the autumn. Margaret Lockwood will have the role of a political refugee smuggled into Britain.

"Report on a Fugitive" is to be released by Twentieth Century-Fox, and will be made at the Islington Studios.

Wembley Busy Again

After twelve months in the dark, Wembley Studios, for some time under the aegis of Twentieth Century-Fox, has blazed into activity again with the production by Victor M. Greene of a comedy drama, "Midnight Mail." This is being directed by Maurice Elvey.

Victor Greene has adapted an original story by Henry Holt, and the film will be handled by General Film Distributors.

Among the artists are Derrick de Marney, Diana Churchill, Jean Gillie, Cecil Parker, Frank Cellier, Edward Lexy, Allan Jeayes and Anthony Holles.

After Two Years

After an absence of two years Nova Pilbeam, star of "Nine Days a Queen," comes back to film work in "Cheer Boys, Cheer!", which Michael Balcon is producing at the Ealing Studios. Miss Pilbeam was signed five years ago, at 14, by the Balcon organization to play in "Little Friend."

Walter Forde will direct "Cheer Boys, Cheer!" The cast includes Irish Jimmy O'Dea, Edmund Gwenn and Moore Marriott and Graham Moffatt, stooges of the Will Hay comedies.

Nova Pilbeam and Messrs. Marriott and Moffatt are lent to Ealing Studios by Maurice Ostrer of Gainsborough Pictures, with which all were previously associated.

"Cheer Boys, Cheer!", an original story by Ian Dalrymple, is being adapted by Rover MacDougall and Allan MacKinnon.

Exploitation

What is probably a unique example of exploitation of a film before trade show stands to the credit of John Ware, publicity director of Alexander Korda, in his campaign on "Four Feathers."

In eight months, with a week yet to go before trade show, London Films has netted 6,630 column inches in the British press. "The Drum," London Films record breaker, netted 1,750 column inches up to the premiere, [now, long after release, this total is 6,700.]

The press campaign on "Four Feathers" has reached every national daily. Even the sober Times gave the film 31 inches. National Sunday papers, provincial dailies, fan magazines, trade publications and illustrated journals all supplied their quota.

An estimate of the number of times "Four Feathers" stories have been read by members of the public is 323,750,000 (based on an average of two readings in each family).

The campaign opened with the launching of June Duprez. Success of the drive is reflected in a cable to Korda from Selznick asking for the loan of the player.

Picture Post, leading British picture magazine with a 1,700,000 sale, arranged to give six pages to the film.

New York's Life will also run a colored supplement.

Press publicity, however, has not been the only factor in the campaign. There have been personal appearances and broadcasts have been organized over the BBC network.

Previously John Ware was publicity director to Warner-First National Studios at Teddington. Before that he was in charge of the Gaumount British newsroom under the publicity directorship of Francis Meynell, going there from the entertainments page of the Daily Express.

"William" and his outlaws in a scene from the Associated British screen version of Richmal Crompton's widely read bad boy stories. The juveniles are Roddy McDowall as "Ginger," Norman Robinson as "Douglas," Peter Miles as "Henry" and Dick Lupino in the title role of "William."

Vaudeville Stars

A galaxy of vaudeville stars make their appearance, many of them make their film debut, in "Music Hall Parade," in production at the Walton on Thames studios for release by Butchers. Oswald Mitchell is directing.

Much of the action unfolds in a theatrical office and a music hall, and among the artists, most of whom are well known to English audiences, are Billy Cotton and His Band, Jack Stanford, the Arnout Brothers and Hughie Green. The scenario is by Con West. Geoffrey Faithfull is cameraman and Dan Birt editor.

Preliminary work has begun at Denham on the Ludwig Berger film, "The Thief of Baghdad," which the French director is to make for Alexander Korda under the marque of his new company, Alexander Korda Productions.

The cast includes Conrad Veidt and "Elephant Boy" Sabu.

Llewellyn Play

Work is now in full swing at Elstree on "Poison Pen," the screen version of Richard Llewellyn's play in which Flora Robson plays the part of Miss Prynne, the Vicar's sister. The Llewellyn story is being directed by Paul Stein.

Early scenes were shot on a set representing a tithe barn, locale of a village dance.

Reginald Tate is playing the Vicar's son. Ann Todd, Edward Chapman, Cyril Chamberlain, Belle Chrystall, Robert Newton and Catherine Lacey are in the cast.

Itemized

Merle Oberon, absent in Hollywood for a year, has arrived in England, and Alexander Korda has two films scheduled for her.

Bela Lugosi, "Dracula" of Hollywood, has arrived in London and is playing the leading role in John Argyle's Edgar Wallace film, "Dark Eyes of London." Lugosi's portrayal is a dual one. Greta Gynt has been cast in the feminine lead.

Following the resignation of Jerome Jackson, a production interval intervened at the Warner-First National studios, Teddington. Production now has recommenced with Roy William Neill directing "Murder Will Out," a film with a Chinese setting but with most of the action in London. John Loder and Jane Baxter head the cast.

"Doc" Salomon is in charge of production until a new production chief is appointed at the studios. It is reported that Sam Sax will be the man.

GAP BETWEEN BRITISH CIRCUITS AND INDEPENDENTS GROWS WIDER

KRS Hints CEA's Campaign Against Renters on Grading Has Strengthened Chains; Committees Only Debating

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

in London

Facing the menace of a product shortage more acute than any heretofore experienced, independent exhibitors—if that term may be applied precisely to any one particular section—are finding it increasingly difficult to bridge the gap between themselves and their new-old enemies, the circuits. The problem itself is today, with twelve months of acrimonious battling behind it, more acute and less likely of solution than ever.

Find Definition Puzzling

The formation of independent committees within the local branches of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, key center of which has been London, does not seem, on the experience of the first few moves, likely to help at all. Inability to define exactly what is an "independent," or for that matter what is a "super," inertia on the part of vocally rebel groups, indifference on the part of the circuits themselves, are phenomena which evince the present condition.

Even the Kinematograph Renters Society itself, reporting on the year's activities, has found it difficult to refrain from the acidulous suggestion that the CEA's campaign against the renters on grading actually has strengthened the circuits instead of the small exhibitor.

"What have the independents gained as a result of the campaign against the KRS? As usual the major circuits were the only exhibitors to benefit from the plea that they were out to help the small exhibitor, against the KRS attempt to grade films and regulate releases."

Elsewhere the report comments, "Divided opinion and vacillation has resulted and can only result in more power being obtained by the major exhibiting interests . . . this division of opinion already has strengthened the position of the circuits, a position they will not readily see lessened."

Twin "Supers" Still Shown

Despite the formation of rebel independent groups and much wordy warfare, despite even the dissolution of the old negotiating committee and the formation of another to approach the circuits, twin supers still are being shown in nearly all the larger provincial areas. In Yorkshire so acute has become the problem that Charles Metcalfe, erstwhile president of the CEA, has threatened to establish "bank night," already condemned by the General Council and categorized as illegal, as a weapon against duals and overlong programs.

Up to the present the new committee formed mainly of independent rebels, which supplanted the inactive previous committee, has remained just as inactive as its predecessor, and has not met all of the circuit groups.

Meanwhile in CEA branches up and down the country the fear is being expressed constantly that, difficult as are the present times, more difficult times are yet to come, when the product shortage foreseen and forecast by Sam Eckman aggravates matters by giving the circuits a greater monopoly of releases. "We shall feel the shortage over here about this time next year," Mr. Eckman said.

103 BRITISH FEATURES IN FIRST YEAR OF ACT

In the first full year of the Films Act only 103 British features were registered compared with 228 the year previous to the Act, according to figures released by the Economist, London publication. Actual comparative figures of feature films registered in each of the last five years ended March 31*st in each case are:*

	British	Foreign	Total
1935	190	477	667
1936	215	506	721
1937	225	521	746
1938	228	614	842
1939	103	535	638

In the first eight months of the 1938-'39 season, according to the Economist, the average footage for all British films registered was 6,800 feet, and the minimum average cost for each of the three categories of the Act was £21,000, £62,000 and £105,000, respectively.

It is Mr. Eckman's belief that the shortage will be sufficiently acute to make itself very keenly felt in highly competitive areas, sufficiently acute to make the trade consider seriously single feature programs.

Exhibitors Concur

Exhibitors, for the most part, find themselves ready in acceptance of Mr. Eckman's estimate, noting that product is being used at such a rate that a crisis cannot be far removed.

Little hope, however, is now entrusted, save by the most optimistic, in the new principle adopted in London of independent groups within the local CEA branches. Such a group has been formed within the London CEA, is composed of independents and acts as a subcommittee of the branch. They already, however, have found themselves face to face with two problems.

The first problem is what constitutes an "independent." Among the more ardent members of the group are exhibitors owning perhaps a dozen houses. Already individual or two-house exhibitors are questioning the independence of members who have such a bargaining advantage over the smaller man. For the secretary and officers of the branch, too, faced with the duty of calling together meetings of independents, the riddle is no less easy of solution.

Constitutional Problem

Most difficult, however, is the constitutional problem. The formation of committees of this caliber must be strictly constitutional for them to have any status whatsoever. They thus cannot trespass upon the ground or cut across the functions of the executive to whom they are responsible. They become in fact a caucus within the association, but a mere debating caucus without actual functioning.

Such committees obviously form a debating ground and afford the opportunity for an exchange of independent viewpoints. Their members can be advised or instructed to raise incidental matters at executive meetings, but obviously individually only, and not as a group.

The experience of the London independent group which is superficially not anti-circuit, which is strictly constitutional, which admittedly has certain problems for immediate discussion, will color to a great extent the future operations of the independent groups in other areas. If other districts are to face the experience of London, then they will find it equally difficult to agree on the precise terms of reference of independent committees, even more difficult to define their immediate and ultimate powers.

The very fact that they can exist only constitutionally limits their operations. Any desire to abrogate to themselves the functions of the executive would remove them from the constitution of the CEA.

The independents demand machinery which will meet the desires of the non-circuit exhibitor. They are now wondering if the machinery does not already exist in the CEA itself.

CEA Elects Mears

Harry Mears has been elected vice-president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, in a runoff election following a tie for the position at the annual elections recently.

African Theatres, Ltd., recorded a net profit for the year of $820,090. A final dividend of 10 per cent, making 20 per cent in all, has been declared.

Movietone To Cover Europe by Airmail

Plans are now being completed by Movietone News to use the Trans-Atlantic airplane service when it is started by Pan-American Airways this summer to ship newsreel shots across the Atlantic.

It is said that four to six days will be saved in getting important stories on the screen by use of the airplane service, and it will be possible to put an important news event on the American screen within 36 hours after the actual filming in England or France.

Movietone is making plans for the reopening of its Spanish office and all Movietone forces throughout Europe generally have been strengthened recently to be prepared for any eventuality, it was said.

Exchanges Change Quarters

The Allied Film Exchange in Oklahoma City has moved to new quarters at 702½ West Grand Street in the quarters formerly occupied by Monogram Pictures Exchange. The Monogram exchange moved to Allied's old quarters at 704 West Grand. The Sumner Theatre Supply Company has also moved to the building where Allied is now located.

Comerford Adds Three

The Comerford Amusement Company has acquired three theatres operated by the Jackson Enterprises, Inc., Lebanon, Pa. The houses are the Colonial, Capitol and Jackson. The acquisitions expand the Comerford circuit to 115 theatres and marks another extension by the circuit into southern Pennsylvania.

Herman G. Weinberg has resigned as director of publicity of World Pictures, but will retain offices at the company's New York quarters as a free lance film editor and publicity writer.

MAJORS' MANAGERS BRING WORD OF INCREASING AUSTRALIAN TROUBLES

Field Executives in New York for Conferences as Tide of Legislation Against Distributor Rises

That the large distributors of American motion pictures in Australia may expect to find continuing and increased legislative restrictions is the consensus of the majors' managing directors for Australia now in New York to report to their home offices.

Four Arrive, Fifth Coming

While the managers interviewed—N. Bernard Freeman of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Clay V. Hake of Twentieth Century-Fox; Ralph Clark of Warner Brothers and Cecil Mason of Columbia—asserted that there is nothing but "coincidence" in the fact that they are now all at their home offices at the same time, with Harry Hunter, Paramount managing director in Australia, due shortly from the coast, many a story has been heard along Broadway and elsewhere that the majors soon will hold a series of conferences in New York with their Australian managers to discuss the rising tide of anti-distributor legislation throughout Australasia, especially strong in New South Wales.

Also in New York is Norman B. Rydge, head of Australia's Greater Union Theatres, the second largest circuit; while Maurice Sloman, general manager of White's Circuit, and Dan Carroll, manager of the Prince Edward Theatre, are to arrive on the coast Sunday and may participate in discussions.

New South Wales Bellwether

Meanwhile the importance of Australia as an English speaking film market in a time characterized by an ever-lessening world film rental, is evinced by the trips planned to that country by Paramount's Adolph Zukor and John Hicks, early this summer, and by Harry Warner and Sam Morris, of Warners, this fall.

Leader among the Australian states in its anti-distributor measures, spurred by the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association composed of independent theatremen, is New South Wales. That it may act as the bellwether of the other territories is noted in the fact that now Victoria and New Zealand have the same 25 per cent cancellation right on American product.

With New South Wales and Victoria two of the largest revenue producing states, and the possibility of adoption of similar legislation in Queensland, South Australia and West Australia, action by the distributors is called for, sales managers say.

There is an Australian government quota giving the right of two and a half per cent rejection of the total American product used, in order to allow for the showing of that amount of native product. Australian films now number about six a year, made almost entirely by the Cinesound Company. The Government, however, has agreed to subsidize production as of January of this year.

Further Cancellation Demand

New South Wales, through its Cinematograph Act of 1934, to which amendments have been added, has provided for another 15 per cent cancellation right in order to provide more playing time for British pictures, if and when a reciprocal quota is made by Great Britain for the compulsory exhibition of Australian product. The 15 per cent cancellation would not become effective until the New South Wales Government so determines.

If and when it did, New South Wales theatres would have a rejection right of 42½ per cent of the American product purchased. If the 15 per cent quota is adopted, the measure may well spread throughout the Commonwealth, which is reported to be the wish of British authorities.

In New South Wales, a bill has been passed for appointment of a commission of three men to supply the state with a uniform exhibition contract within three months of its appointment. This is expected to be ready to go into effect in August, and it is said that the commission also can regulate the supply of product. New Zealand already has a standardized contract form.

New Zealand has a theatre licensing measure, and also has the runs of theatres designated and set. A Film Board of Control has been started and is expected to start activity this week. The Board consists of four distributors and four exhibitors, presided over by a magistrate appointed by the Government, and was instituted to take control of the industry out of the hands of the government, which has had an "investigator" for the industry for the past five years. In New South Wales there is a "Film Commission," formed this year, with Fred Marks chairman, to iron out intra-industry disputes. After a life of three years, the New South Wales Film Board dissolved this week. Its function, under the leadership of Dan Carroll, had been that of a general trade body operating within the industry. The Film Commission will take over a large share of the duties handled previously by the Film Board.

Despite the growth of restrictive legislation, with South Australia seen as the next state most likely to follow the lead of New South Wales, Clay Hake has said that "We'll always be able to do business with the democratic governments, though it might be restricted."

The New South Wales Motion Pictures Exhibitors Association has proposed to the Government that the eight pence per foot duty on imported film be replaced by an ad valorem duty based on the individual film's earnings at the box office. If adopted, this would do away with the situation whereby American distributors would have to pay duty on all pictures brought into the country, even though they might be rejected and so have no chance of making any profit.

War Talk Retards Investment

It was agreed that the fear of war is "slowing things down" in Australia, with little money being invested at present. The country is starting to arm; a recent call for 50,000 volunteers was more than filled in less than the alloted time, and the budget includes an outlay of £63,000,000 ($315,000,000) for armaments. It has been said that the country feels it must keep up its strength at home, in the event of another war, rather than sending forces to Europe.

As yet no one has been named to succeed Sir Victor Wilson, who in June will leave the office of president of the Motion Picture Distributors Association of Australia. Among those mentioned for the office are Sir Archdale Parkhill, former Minister of Defense, Mr. Marks, Senator Foll and Major Condor.

The foreign managers will remain in New York for another two or three weeks. Mr. Freeman, who started Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in Australia in 1924, plans to sail for England on the 3rd of May to spend a month there. Mr. Hake and Mr. Clark both plan to sail in May, and Mr. Mason, after attending Columbia's sales convention in Atlantic City, will return at the end of next month.

NEW COAST ALLIED UNIT THREE GROUPS TO MEET

Offices in Los Angeles for Exhibitor Group for California, Nevada and Arizona

Allied States Association is invading the Far West territory, with the setting up of offices in Los Angeles for a unit to include exhibitors of California, Nevada and Arizona.

The New York Allied unit is expanding its plans for its World's Fair equipment exposition in the Hotel Astor, New York City, on May 23-25 and for the possible acceptance of a new unit for Rochester.

The Allied Far West unit will vie for membership with the present Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California, headed by Albert Galston. Officers of the new unit are Seth Perkins, president; Jules Wolf, vice-president; Fred Hersborn, treasurer; James C. Quinn, executive secretary; and L. L. Bard and B. J. Leavitt as directors.

Mr. Quinn was formerly executive secretary for the defunct American Federation of Theatre Operators, whose offices the new Allied unit is occupying, and which campaigned against the ITO agreement to a policy of arbitration between independent and affiliated exhibitors.

Rochester Approval

The executive committee of the New York State Allied was scheduled to meet in New York City this week to approve the newly formed Rochester unit. This week also, the Syracuse unit met in that city to hear from its grievance committee on print shortages, clearance problems, and legislation.

Arkansas ITO Convention

The Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas, at its annual convention at Little Rock Sunday and Monday, centered their interest around the fair trades agreement that provides for arbitration between producers, distributors and exhibitors. The pending Neely bill in Congress, designed to outlaw block booking, was also vigorously discussed.

Although only about one-third of the members of the association were in attendance, President J. F. Norman reported the largest registration in several years.

J. H. Rhodes, owner of the Crittendon Theatre, West Memphis, urged the organization to back the government's efforts to help the industry.

Colonel H. A. Cole of Dallas, Texas, president of the Allied Theatre Owners' Association of Texas and director of the National Allied Theatre Owners' Association, spoke on the new trade practice agreement, which he called a "one-sided deal." He said that at present the independent exhibitor must pin his hope to government action in his favor.

D. R. Milsten, Tulsa, Oklahoma, counsel for Arkansas and Oklahoma of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, explained the work of that organization.

E. C. Mills, chairman of the Administrative Committee of ASCAP, also spoke on the service that his organization is rendering the industry, declaring that ASCAP is the most serviceable single factor in helping the exhibitor to transact his business.

The slate of new officers consists of: President, O. G. Wren, Little Rock; vice-president, W. E. Malin, Augusta; secretary-treasurer, K. K. King, Searcy; directors, J. H. Rhodes, West Memphis; W. L. Landers, Batesville; J. F. Norman, England; D. E. Fitton, Harrison; W. R. Lee, Heber Springs, and Lew Haven, Forrest City.

Arrangements for the staging of the New York Allied's first annual convention and exposition, to be held in New York, at the Hotel Astor, on May 23-25, are being completed. The major motion picture companies and the other New York City exhibitor organizations, will participate in the exposition.

H. M. Richey, director of exhibitor relations for RKO, is chairman of the reception committee. At last week's first meeting of the reception committee, present were Charles Stern, of United Artists; George Weeks, Monogram; Eddie Schnitzer, Warners; Milt Kusell, Paramount; Lou Weinberg, Columbia; E. Thornton Kelly, executive secretary of the Allied unit; Max A. Cohen, its present; others.

Expected are 100 booths, of the major companies, equipment companies, exhibitor organizations, and others interested in entertaining the 200 or more exhibitors expected to attend the convention. Visiting exhibitors will attend business sessions each of the three afternoons; on the first night, they will attend the theatres; on the second, the World's Fair; on the third, a banquet at the Astor.

Virginia MPTO

June 11 and 12, at Roanoke, have been selected as the dates for the annual summer convention of the Virginia Motion Picture Theatre Owners.

Kansas Exhibitors To Meet

The Kansas Missouri Theatres Association will hold its annual convention and election of officers on May 23 and 24 in Kansas City. The trade practice code and clearance problems will be the chief topics of the convention. Frank Cassil is the president.

Oklahoma Independents

A buying pool is expected to be the result of the meeting on May 9, at Oklahoma City, of independent exhibitors from all the state. George Sumner, Oklahoma City theatre supply man, has been acting as liaison between various independents.

Dissolve Buying Pool

The pool in St. Louis, in effect since 1937 between the Ansell Brothers Theatres and the St. Louis Amusement Company, will be dissolved on May 31st. The Ritz, the Empress, and the Varsity theatres at that time will revert back to the sole operatorship of the Ansell Brothers Theatres. The St. Louis Amusement Company controls about 30 theatres, and is operated by Fanchon and Marco.

Agren Resigns

Ben S. Agren has resigned as comptroller of Monogram Pictures Corporation. His place has been taken by Harry M. Iverson.

The Cooperative Theatres of Ohio, a booking and buying pool, opens a Cincinnati office this week. Milton A. Mooney has organized the combine. Harry Bugie, formerly of Warners, will be in charge at Cincinnati.

$170,000 Claim Against ERPI Upheld by Court

The right of John G. Paine, as assignee and representative of some 100 music publishing houses, to recover approximately $170,000 from Electrical Research Products, Inc., in royalties due on musical compositions recorded for sound track use with motion pictures and exported in foreign trade, was upheld Monday in federal court in New York by Judge John C. Knox in a 13 page opinion. At the same time Judge Knox threw out a claim for approximately $40,000 which Mr. Paine had asserted for royalties on pictures exported before 1929.

The suit filed in 1936, sought judicial interpretation of two licensing agreements made in 1927 and 1929 authorizing the use of compositions for exported motion pictures. Mr. Paine contended that under the agreement, ERPI was to pay royalties on exported pictures regardless of whether the music houses held copyrights in the countries where the films were exhibited.

Judge Knox in sustaining Mr. Paine's contention, pointed out that music publishers could have effectively prevented recording of the compositions in the United States, and that the "suggestion that the defendant, as to these recordings, was to have a free gift of property rights of great value, is simply repellant to the ideas upon which business is transacted."

As for compositions used in films exported before 1929, Judge Knox sustained ERPI and ruled that it would not be compelled to pay at a higher rate than provided in the 1929 agreement. Judge Knox overruled a claim of the plaintiff that ERPI was to pay 100 per cent royalties for pictures exhibited in more than one foreign country, rather than a reduced percentage provided for exhibition in a single country. The exact amount due to Mr. Paine under the agreements for royalties will be determined under the decision in an accounting hearing to be held later.

Columbia, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists and Universal had intervened in the suit as defendants.

Form New Company

Peninsula Pictures has been formed in San Francisco to produce six and possibly eight pictures a year there. The first production will be "Moon Over Monterey," to be made in both English and Spanish for the United States and South America markets. Executives of the company are listed as Gordon Burdge and Ed Blas, San Francisco theatrical agency owners.

Gus Sun Jubilee

All Springfield, Ohio, houses will participate in the Golden Jubilee Week, starting Monday, in honor of Gus Sun's 50th anniversary in the show business. Phil Chakeres, head of the Chakeres-Warner Theatres and Regent-State, Inc., is handling the arrangements, which will include a banquet April 29th. The banquet will be broadcast over WHIO, Dayton.

Fund Film Available

A one-reel film titled "Neighbors in Need" has been produced for the Greater New York Fund by March of Time and is available to theatres without charge. The film describes the work of the Fund's 388 agencies. The Fund started its $10,000,000 drive Monday.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

BLONDIE MEETS THE BOSS: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—These are getting better and ought to prove a good bet anywhere. This one proved a good entertainment.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

LONE STAR PIONEERS: Bill Elliott, Dorothy Gulliver—Good enough western feature that has enough action to please all. It pleased here where my patrons like only a rootin'-tootin'-shootin' action picture for Friday-Saturday. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Min. Rural and small town patronage.

First National

BLACKWELL'S ISLAND: John Garfield, Rosemary Lane, Dick Purcell—A prison story that did not go over well. It has Vitagraph's new star, Garfield, of which there is no question of his ability. But, he is not yet well known and I think that they are pushing him too fast not to cast better support with him.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, Roland Young, May Robson—Good entertainment for everyone with May Robson outstanding as the grandmother. Did not see anything objectionable in the picture and all were well pleased.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Walter Connolly, Rex Ingram, Lynne Carver—Something missed fire here and the result is only a fair picture. What has happened to MGM this season? Only one good picture so far this season. Mickey Rooney not suitable for this role and parts of the picture are too silly for even children to enjoy.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Walter Connolly, Rex Ingram, Lynne Carver—A fine picture and pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BOYS TOWN: Mickey Rooney, Spencer Tracy, Henry Hull—No more can be said about this picture than already has been said. Running time, 89 minutes. Played April 7-9.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

CHASER, THE: Dennis O'Keefe, Lewis Stone, Ann Morriss—A very good picture. I believe if times were better we could have enjoyed some nice build-up business on this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FAST AND LOOSE: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—Not so good. It took a long time to get started and by that time we had a lot of walkouts. There was an overabundance of dialogue and a modicum of action, and if there are any more of this team they will have to come better than this one. Also the lion roared too loudly in his trailer. The picture did not measure up to the eulogy that too often comes in these company produced trailers. The public may be gullible but not to accept as much baloney as there was in that advance trailer.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

FAST AND LOOSE: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—A murder mystery with plenty of comedy to relieve the tension. An excellent picture that was allocated too high for the class. MGM, however, has the knack of easing tension with comedy, something the balance of the producers fail to do. Just average. Running time, 79 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FLIRTING WITH FATE: Joe E. Brown, Leo Carrillo—Consider this the worst yet. You'll be better off without this one.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Kent Taylor, Una Merkel, Alan Marshal, Ann Rutherford—Good entertainment. Seemed like a super-special since it followed "Idiot's Delight." A nice picture enjoyed by most everyone.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Clarence Kolb, Rita Johnson, Eddie Anderson, Willie Fung—This one is a honey. Charming Eleanor Powell gives her usual perfect-plus performance; Robert Young is great in a dual role; Gracie Allen is a scream, while George Burns, Clarence Kolb and Rita Johnson are all very good. An outstanding sequence is the show on board ship with the passengers representing such famous screen stars as the Marx Bros., Mae West, the Seven Dwarfs, while Eleanor Powell gives one of her best performances as Bill Robinson in his famous stair steps dance. I must not forget Eddie Anderson and Willie Fung, who are both tops. The musical numbers are good; in fact, this is one of the outstanding films of the year and pleased them all. Running time, 83 minutes. Played April 7-9.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HONOLULU: Robert Young, Eleanor Powell, George Burns and Gracie Allen—A honey if there ever was one. 100 per cent satisfactory. Not one voice cried out in protest. You can't miss on it. Running time, 83 minutes. Played April 12-13.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Very good musical show which played to average business, although I expected more. Played April 12-13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey Okla. Small town patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres, Original Ice Follies Cast—Dandy show, entirely different, and like a breath of spring to the screen. You will enjoy every inch and so will your patrons. Running time, 81 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres, Original Ice Follies Cast—This is a big and lavish production that drew only average business. Joan Crawford does not pull them in. She doesn't skate in this, and all our patrons seemed disappointed. Lew Ayres is grand, and James Stewart did well with the part he had. The Ice Follies sequences are superb. Played March 30-31.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town patronage.

ICE FOLLIES OF 1939: Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres, Original Ice Follies Cast—The ice skating spectacle put this over. This in color proved the entertainment. Otherwise this was an average offering.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Edward Arnold, Burgess Meredith, Joseph Schildkraut, Charles Coburn—Just is not there, that is all. Gable saves what is left of picture. Audience dissatisfied and did not hesitate to say so.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Clark Gable, Norma Shearer, Edward Arnold, Burgess Meredith, Joseph Schildkraut, Charles Coburn—The first time patrons have left our theatre holding their noses. I agree with a patron who said, "I doubt if this picture would delight an idiot." Positively the worst picture we have played this season. How any person could rate this picture one-half a star is beyond me. And it won't help Gable and Shearer any. Lay off this one and you will be better off. Shame on Leo.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Virginia Weidler—This is excellent entertainment and gave us a high gross for the past four years or more. However, this record can not be entirely credited to the picture as we happened to hit the first really decent weather for it that we have had in 10 weeks. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 18-19.—Dr. G. A Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

SERGEANT MADDEN: Wallace Beery, Marian Martin, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day—We always depend on Beery to put over a good performance. This proved a very good program but not up to "Stablemates" or "Stand Up and Fight."—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

SERGEANT MADDEN: Wallace Beery, Marian Martin, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day—Wallace Beery still carries a punch here, and this picture, while not his best by any means, is well done and takes on a new angle that pleased everyone 100 per cent. We had it on a weekend with very favorable results. Any small town will welcome this picture for sheer entertainment. Running time, 83 minutes. Played April 2-3.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SHINING HOUR, THE: Joan Crawford, Margaret Sullavan, Robert Young, Melvyn Douglas, Fay Bainter—Personally, I did not care for it. To me it has too much talk, not enough action or comedy and a rather unconvincing plot. But we did a nice business on it and all comments have been decidedly in its favor. So, since it pleases the ticket buyers, it must be good. Running time, 76 minutes. Played April 1-2.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

SOCIETY LAWYER: Virginia Bruce, Walter Pidgeon, Leo Carrillo—I believe this is a remake of "Penthouse," but I don't believe your patrons will recognize it. We did fair business on a weekend and the picture will hold interest in small towns. All comment was favorable. Above average for a "B" picture. No big names but good, sincere acting and enough comedy to break the monotony of the flood of gangster films coming our way. Running time, 78 minutes. Played April 9-10.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

WITHIN THE LAW: Ruth Hussey, Paul Kelly, John King, Lynne Carver—Good drama, well acted and directed, but failed to draw because it lacked star power. Played April 9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Monogram

MYSTERY PLANE: John Trent, Marjorie Reynolds—Well, Mr. Ray Johnston, you have something in this new series of Tailspin Tommy pictures that you and your organization can be proud of, if you keep up the good work. We played the first and you can be sure that we play every one, as I think that each in the series will build to great business. You exhibitors who have Monogram pictures, don't wait; get after this Tailspin Tommy picture and you will get great results. I have played this picture against heavy opposition and got great results. Business very nice. Running time, 63 minutes. Played April 16-17.—William Dabb, Lyric Theatre, Shenandoah, Pa. Small town patronage.

Paramount

IF I WERE KING: Ronald Colman, Frances Dee, Basil Rathbone, Ellen Drew—This historical spectacle will certainly appeal to those who desire a change from modernism. Ronald Colman comes through with another fine bit of acting, as does Frances Dee, but our hats are off to Basil Rathbone. As Louis XI, he was superb, and from our point of view his acting contained all of the qualities necessary for one to be considered as a candidate for what is known as the Academy Award. "If I Were King" is one of the finest productions of its kind to ever be released and will without question be thoroughly enjoyed by any audience fortunate enough to see it. It is filled with action from start to finish and has been neatly and understandingly directed. Congratulations to Frank Lloyd, director par excellence ("Mutiny on the Bounty," "Wells Fargo," "Cavalcade"). Running time, 100 minutes. Played April 8.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

I'M FROM MISSOURI: Bob Burns, Gladys George—This was not up to the standard, although the average comments were good. Have had better Burns' pictures.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

MEN WITH WINGS: Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Louise Campbell, Andy Devine, Virginia Weidler, Donald O'Connor, Billy Cook—The youngsters, Virginia Weidler, Donald O'Connor and "Billy" Cook, come very close to stealing this very fine, thrilling historical picture from such stars as Fred MacMurray, Louise Campbell, Ray Milland and the one and only Devine. Each give excellent performances, with "Andy" providing much of the comedy. "Men With Wings" traces aviation from the first flight of the Wright Brothers at Kitty Hawk in 1903 to the present day. Natural color photography adds to the picture. With talk of impending war in Europe and the value of airplanes as weapons of war, the picture is indeed timely. Running time, 105 minutes. Played April 1.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

ONE-THIRD OF A NATION: Sylvia Sidney, Leif Erikson—Am very sorry I played this. It has an interesting story but it leaves a very bad taste in the mouths of the very few who will come out for a picture of this type. Not for small situations like this. Running time, 76 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

RENEGADE TRAIL: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—We can always depend on "Hopalong Cassidy" for a Saturday date, and this picture is one of his best. He ranks with Gene Autry here and no small town would be without either. Your Saturday patrons will like this one, I am sure. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 8.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

RIDE A CROOKED MILE: Akim Tamiroff, Frances Farmer, Leif Erikson—A drab picture that failed at the box office.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

SILVER ON THE SAGE: William Boyd, George Hayes—Another good Hopalong Cassidy which pleased good business. No complaints on this one. Played April 14-15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SUDDEN MONEY: Charlie Ruggles, Marjorie Rambeau—No cast to draw and shoddy stories and productions. I don't understand an outfit like Paramount slipping as they have this year. I know of some fifteen pictures that have not played their houses in this vicinity and if they are not good enough for them, they won't do for me in the future.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SUDDEN MONEY: Charlie Ruggles, Marjorie Rambeau—Just another program picture from Paramount on which I failed to take in film rental. Played April 10-11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE: Donald O'Connor, Robert Kent, June Travis—A good programmer for child fare. Lots of grownups liked it, too. Running time, 68 minutes. Played April 14-15.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence Iowa. Rural patronage.

ZAZA: Caudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, Bert Lahr—The only way you could possibly come out is to advertise the world's worst picture and you may get somebody. I didn't.—J. M. Nix, Castle Theatre, Brackettville, Texas. General patronage.

Republic

FIGHTING THOROUGHBREDS: Ralph Byrd, Mary Carlisle, Robert Allen—A good picture but lacked direction. Story OK; actors OK; photography OK.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HOME ON THE RANGE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Autry don't rate here like he has in past. Still a good bet but set your sights on Roy Rogers. Running time, 56 minutes. Played April 7-8.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

MEXICALI ROSE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Played this two days midweek to less gross than Saturday run. Patrons were divided in their opinions and personally did not think it as good as some of the other Autry pictures.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

PRIDE OF THE NAVY: James Dunn, Rochelle Hudson—This is a good little action picture which will please the men and boys. I played it on Sunday. Average business. Played April 9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SANTA FE STAMPEDE: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), June Martel—Another western. They pleased our western fans.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SHINE ON HARVEST MOON: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Lulu Belle and Scotty—Playing up Lulu Belle, this was a natural. They came and stayed 'til midnight. Proved a better draw than Gene Autry. The WLS broadcast helped to put this over. Picture OK.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

RKO Radio

FISHERMAN'S WHARF: Bobby Breen, Henry Armetta, Leo Carrillo—Just fair. No box office delight for us. Will do business where Bobby means anything. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 24-25.—Rudolf Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

GUNGA DIN: Cary Grant, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Victor McLaglen, Joan Fontaine—A big spectacular production. Great sets and plenty of action. As a box office draw, it is not up to standard. However, we did well on the opening with rain.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

GUNGA DIN: Cary Grant, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Victor McLaglen, Joan Fontaine—Did not gross the guarantee. An excellent picture but this class of picture all buttoned up in the small town. Will the producer never discover this fact?—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SKY GIANT: Richard Dix, Chester Morris, Joan Fontaine—A good show for my patrons but spoiled by a poor print, the sound being very poor indeed, which spoils a show at any time. Running time, nine reels. Played April 6.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Jack Haley—We had a late engagement on this and naturally suffered at the box office. However, it is grand entertainment throughout. Enough cannot be said about the story, the acting and the music. It is one of those fine pictures that come all too rarely. Running time, 126 minutes. Played April 4-5.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town patronage.

DOWN ON THE FARM: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Louise Fazenda—This picture, of course, pleased the very few fans who came to see it. No, we don't make any money on pictures like this. Played April 5.—Rudolf Covi, Covi Theatre Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER: Shirley Temple, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell, Armanda Duff, Bill Robinson, Bert Lahr—I have to agree with numerous other exhibitors on this picture. It is certainly not Shirley Temple's best effort. We have not had one of her pictures in a long time and those who saw it felt satisfied but she has lost a great deal of her draw. Let's all hope her new picture, "The Little Princess," is a good tonic for failing appetites. Running time, 71 minutes. Played April 6-7.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—Everyone tried to tell me this was a great box office picture. My own analysis failed to see it in this light. We played it to average business. It takes more than horses to bring them in nowadays. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 26-27.—Rudolf Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—The best picture I ever saw. A fine story that holds interest all the way from the prologue of the days of '61 and the beginning of the Goodwin-Dillon feud down to the last thrilling race at Churchill Downs and the lowering of the Elm Tree colors at the grave of Peter Goodwin. The entire cast is excellent but the outstanding stars are Walter Brennan as Peter Goodwin, proud, impoverished southern aristocrat, a horseman first, last and always, and little Bobs Watson, who portrays Peter Goodwin as a child. A very pleasing innovation is an off stage narrative describing Kentucky's famed thoroughbreds and showing such "kings of the turf" as Man O' War, Omaha, Gallant Fox and what appear to be all the colts in Kentucky in one blue grass pasture. The old plantation, its mansion, family portraits, stables and happy-go-lucky darkies are all authentic. One pleasing sequence is the stable boys singing "Goin' to the Races." The color is beautiful and natural. I saw this picture four times and would pay fifty cents to see it again. Twentieth Century-Fox may well be proud of this one. Running time, 96 minutes. Played April 5-6.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WIFE, HUSBAND AND FRIEND: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero—It runs around in a circle over the question of voice and Loretta singing. A bad case of much ado about nothing. Walkouts too many.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

United Artists

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon, Patsy Kelly, David Niven, Walter Brennan, Thomas Mitchell—Very good for small towns. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 14-15.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

PRISON WITHOUT BARS: Corinne Luchaire, Edna Best, Barry Barnes—I presume this is not supposed to be more than a program picture and I guess it is just that. But it is good enough and interesting enough that I feel no inclination to find fault with it in any way. And that is just about a record as far as our experience goes with the product of foreign companies. Running time, 79 minutes. Played April 8-9.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly, Alan Mowbray, Nancy Carroll, Eugene Pallette—Fine comedy that is well balanced. Good for midweek.—J. M. Nix, Castle Theatre, Brackettville, Texas. General patronage.

TRADE WINDS: Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern—A picture that is "different" and we do not get a chance to use this adjective very often. It was quite satisfying at the box office and appeared to be satisfactory to the patrons. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 25-26.— Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

Universal

IMITATION OF LIFE (reissue): Claudette Colbert, Warren William—This still rates among the good ones. We did only average business but felt satisfied that we gave our public entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LITTLE TOUGH GUY: Robert Wilcox, Helen Parrish, "Dead End Kids"—Played this one late. However, it is good and pleased all. These Little Tough Guys do business for me. If you haven't tried them, do so and be surprised as I was and make some money. Running time, 83 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

PIRATES OF THE SKY: Kent Taylor, Rochelle Hudson—Pleased. Had enough action and suspense to satisfy the majority. Running time, 61 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

STORM, THE: Charles Bickford, Preston Foster, Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Nan Grey—Not only did the nurse perform the appendix operation in mid-ocean with radio instruction from the surgeon on land but she did it during a terrible storm. Picture fair.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN: W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," Frank Jenks—Sure fire at the box office. Plot weak but certainly drew laughs. Fields No. 1 on the hit parade to me. Running time, 79 minutes. Played April 9-10.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

YOUTH TAKES A FLING: Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds—Youth didn't come to see itself take a fling. Yours truly felt like taking a fling after seeing the box office. Didn't do film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, David Niven, Basil Rathbone, Donald Crisp—This picture holds them on the edge of the seat throughout and, boy, she will hit the ceiling in receipts.—J. M. Nix, Castle Theatre, Brackettville, Texas. General patronage.

DEVIL'S ISLAND: Boris Karloff, Nedda Harrigan—A little picture that I believe might do better than average business. Our audience enjoyed it. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 22.—Rudolf Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID, THE: James Cagney, Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart—Swell outdoor picture that drew well and pleased. Some said they enjoyed it as much as "Jesse James." Played Monday and Tuesday date to more than double usual gross those days.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID, THE: James Cagney, Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart—Good in any spot, an overgrown western to be sure, but if they like Cagney it will click. Plenty action and good story. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

VALLEY OF THE GIANTS: Wayne Morris, Claire

Trevor, Charles Bickford, John Litel—A perfect action picture with wonderful scenery that should do extra business in any spot. Good any day in the week. Running time, 79 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—Swell picture that drew extra business and pleased all. Something different in air picture your patrons will enjoy.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—Plenty of thrills and action in this strictly man show. The women will not go for it so good. It is a wonderful production but we feel that we have enough air plane pictures to last the balance of the season. Wonderful shots and very entertaining. Running time, 89 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

GORILLA HUNT, THE: Color Rhapsodies—As good a color cartoon as you would want to show. No kicks on this. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALFALFA'S AUNT: Our Gang—The usual hilarious comedy that keeps them laughing through half the first reel of the feature. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ANAESTHESIA: Pete Smith Specialities—Very good. Showing the advancement of medical science.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BEAU HUNKS: Laurel and Hardy Reissue—No extra draw on these but a good laugh in them.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DOUBLE DIVING: Pete Smith Specialities—A very good Pete Smith single, showing how diving should be done, and my patrons really like it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HOW TO READ: Robert Benchley—His stuff is wearing out. The last three have not been worth running.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HOW TO SUBLET: Robert Benchley—A typical Benchley short and pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MAMA'S NEW HAT: Captain and the Kids—A lot of laughs in this one.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

MAN ON THE ROCK, THE: Historical Mysteries—Another Historical of Metro's. The only thing wrong they get too much for their subjects.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAN'S GREATEST FRIEND: Pete Smith Specialties—Good. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: Very good. All news issues are much the same. I doubt if any one brings you more business than another.—Harland Rankin. Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

OPENING DAY: Robert Benchley—Some liked it; some didn't.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BUSSE RHYTHM: Henry Busse and His Orchestra—All band acts the same. Running time, one reel.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

ORRIN TUCKER AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—A very interesting musical short. It contains enough variety to please any theatregoer. The glee club and songstresses render their numbers in a commendable manner. "Bonny" Baker was especially well liked here for her rendition of "Especially for You." Leader Tucker appears to have a "sufficiency" of what it takes to make the "big time" in Hollywood. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Very good indeed. Running time, 10 minutes—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

RUBE GOLDBERG'S TRAVELGAB: Paragraphics—Employing the dry wit for which he is noted, Rube gives one the "inside dope" on the great city of buildings, New York, in a laughable manner. It is highly amusing. Running time, nine minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SO DOES AN AUTOMOBILE: Betty Boop Cartoons—Average Betty Boop.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STRIKE!: Grantland Rice Sportlights—This short is right up the alley for fishermen. Has its share of action and thrills. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

THAT'S AFRICA: Paragraphics—Average traveltalk.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

DONALD'S GOLF GAME: Walt Disney Cartoons—Our favorite cartoon here. Running time, one reel.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

PLUTO'S QUINPUPLETS: Walt Disney Cartoons—One of his best to date. Running time, nine minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

SELF CONTROL: Walt Disney Cartoons—Another admirable donation from Disney.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ATHLETIC ODDITIES: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Very good. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HUNTING DOGS: Ed Thorgersen—Perfect. These trained setters are wonderful to see. Photography simply great. Audience thrilled. A real sportsman pronounced it perfect.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

MYSTIC SIAM: Magic Carpet Series—Not an A-1 travel picture for us.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

NUTTY NETWORK, THE: Terry-Toons—An excellent colored cartoon from Fox.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SHOOTING FOR PAR: Ed Thorgersen—Just nothing for a small town.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE BEARS, THE: Terry-Toons—A good color cartoon from Fox.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TIMBER TOPPERS: Ed Thorgersen—Very good sport reel showing of horses for horse shows.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

VIKING TRAIL: Magic Carpet Series—A fair travelogue in black and white.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

BANK NOTES: Mentone Musical Comedies—A good musical with plenty of talent in the various acts. You cannot go wrong on this one. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 56—This series as a whole is excellent and number 56 is no exception. Good. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

COUNT ME OUT: Merrie Melodies—Good enough cartoon in colors.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOME CHEAP HOME: Henry Armetta—Armetta pleases our customers. I have a friend who is even funnier. I travel 50 miles to get those laughs.—Rudolf Covie, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

NIGHT WATCHMAN, THE: Merrie Melodies—A very good colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PORKY IN WACKYLAND: Looney Tunes—The goofiest cartoon we have seen and it drew plenty of laughs. Excellent. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RAY KINNEY AND HIS HAWAIIANS: Melody Masters—Hawaiian music and hula dances make this short different from the usual run of orchestra shorts. Interesting and entertaining. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RAY KINNEY AND HIS HAWAIIANS: Melody Masters—The first good band reel we have run in two seasons from this company. It is all too short. Very good. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SWING TIME IN THE MOVIES: Broadway Brevities—One of the best Brevities we have played. Fritz Feld is wonderful. In fact, the entire cast including Mr. O'Donnell of the Interstate Circuit, who makes his bow as an actor, is excellent. Do not waste this one. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TOYLAND CASINO: Broadway Brevities—This proved an exceptional entertainment. The kids put this over in a big way and each and every one did their part like a veteran. It went over so well that many stayed to see it again.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

IN COURTS

Another Stockholder Suit Against Paramount Filed

Paramount Pictures, Inc., its officers and directors, and Paramount Theatres Service Corporation were named defendants in a second stockholders' suit filed this week in the New York supreme court by Rae Nasoff, holder of 200 shares of common stock. A $20,000,000 loss to the company from 1935 through 1938 is charged through, it is claimed, mismanagement and waste on the part of officers and directors.

Inefficiency in the preparation and shooting of pictures and in protracted idleness of expensive stars and directors are charged. Abandonment of pictures, according to the plaintiff, caused substantial loss to the company, that of "Hotel Imperial" alone purportedly amounting to $1,250,000. An accounting and judgment for damages are asked.

Paramount filed notice Wednesday that it will apply to the federal district court in New York May 5th for an order dismissing a previous suit, instituted by Frank Jablow and Sam Acker against the corporation, its officers and directors, on the ground that the complaint fails to state each course of action separately.

Plea Granted

Benjamin Golder, holder of 1,500 shares of common stock of Radio Corporation of America; Frank Blum, holder of 107 shares, and Anna Weill, holder of 100 shares, have been granted permission to intervene in the eight consolidated stockholders' suits against RCA, its officers and directors, Westinghouse Electric Company, American Telephone and Telegraph Company and General Electric Company. Stockholders are claiming transfer of a large block of RCA shares without compensation, and waste and mismanagement.

Lourau Quiz Ordered

Georges Lourau, president of Films Sonores Tobis, Societe Anonyme, plaintiff in a suit against Charles Chaplin, Charles Chaplin Film Corporation and United Artists Corporation, was ordered to appear for examination before trial on June 9th by Alfred C. Coxe, federal judge. The plaintiff seeks an injunction, accounting and damages, charging plagiarism of the film "A Nous La Liberte," in "Modern Times."

File Disney Suit

The Ned Mann Corporation in federal court in Hollywood this week filed a suit against Walt Disney Productions, Inc., RKO and 10 John Does charging them with infringement of its patented method of making animated cartoons in color. The action seeks an accounting and damages. The Mann corporation claimed it had patented the method in 1934.

Orders Examination

The suit charges plagiarism of plaintiff's "Russian Soldier's Song" by "Whistle While You Work," a song in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

Files Bankruptcy Petition

Everett Marshall, actor, opera and radio star, has filed a petition in receivership in the United States district court in New York and listed $28,318 in liabilities and no assets.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

"The Everyday Part the Herald Plays"

In the Round Table of April 15th, Manager Joe Samartano, Loew's Palace, Meriden, Connecticut, read of the campaign waged by Ferd Nessel to keep his theatre open in the face of a local "flu" outbreak. Samartano was especially impressed. His town was then battling a scarlet fever epidemic. Public gatherings were frowned upon, schools closed and theatres similarly threatened. So, as did Nessel, Joe consulted with his health authorities. He was given a special prescription for mixture in the air-washer system to purify the atmosphere. Next came the delicate job of publicly announcing this precaution. The Round Tabler solved this by duplicating the Nessel newspaper ad, reproduced in the same issue.

The papers made much of it. Mayor and health department officially cited the theatreman for his fine cooperation. Writes Samartano:

"By referring to the advertisement run in the Round Table on the same situation, I was able to improve my display and discuss a ticklish situation in good taste and understanding. This is just another example of the part played by Motion Picture Herald in everyday theatre life."

In the same April 15th issue, your Chairman referred editorially to the comprehensive service manual compiled for the personnel in his houses by Rudy Kuehn, district manager in Don Jacocks' New Jersey division of Warner Brothers' theatres. What happened then? Let Kuehn tell it:

"Your editorial put me in the mail order business. I am busy answering letters from managers all over the country and complying with their requests for a copy of my manual."

Down in the Southland, those up-and-at-'em Lucas & Jenkins men are members who also attest to the part played by this publication in the operation of that organization. In a recent number of "Spotlight", L. & J. weekly house organ, "Whit" Whitaker, circuit executive, has this to say:

"We take it for granted that each L. & J. manager reads every word of the Managers' Round Table section of Motion Picture Herald. This section is considered the 'bible of show-business' for all of us."

Now, there is no magic in the Round Table. Nor is it conducted by magicians. Your Round Table has long given, and continues to give, definite service to theatremen of every shade and opinion. For this reason, it is regarded as the industry's clearing house for ideas of merit that have been proven at the boxoffice. In so believing, forward-looking showmen with their own interests and the interests of their operations at heart have come to depend upon the weekly arrival of the Herald for solution of whatever showmanship problem found difficult to unravel.

Essentially, this is a business of ideas. Ideas are the life-blood of the industry. Ideas are the bread-and-butter of the man in the field. Ideas aid the theatreman to keep his job. Ideas help him to a bigger position.

There never was, isn't, nor will be a theatreman talented enough to get by indefinitely on his own imagination and brain cells for the big ideas that bring in the paying customers. The smart showman is the one who knows there are other ways of doing it and seeks those ways where they are more conveniently to be had.

By the unsolicited testimonies of the readers themselves, Motion Picture Herald is definitely the place where the most effective "ways" are to be found most often.

THERE'S ALWAYS ANOTHER WAY

Usage of the giant theatre pass for exploitation purposes has been reported in these pages in all the familiar ways. Now comes Manager "Ev" Steinbuch, Loew's State, Cleveland, with a new slant on "Made for Each Other", wherein 5-foot passes, properly lettered, were given to women who promised to carry them to the theatre, displayed so that all could see. Out of 50 ducats so distributed, 45 were brought to the theatre in the manner prescribed. Of course, the stunt was good enough to crack the local dailies.

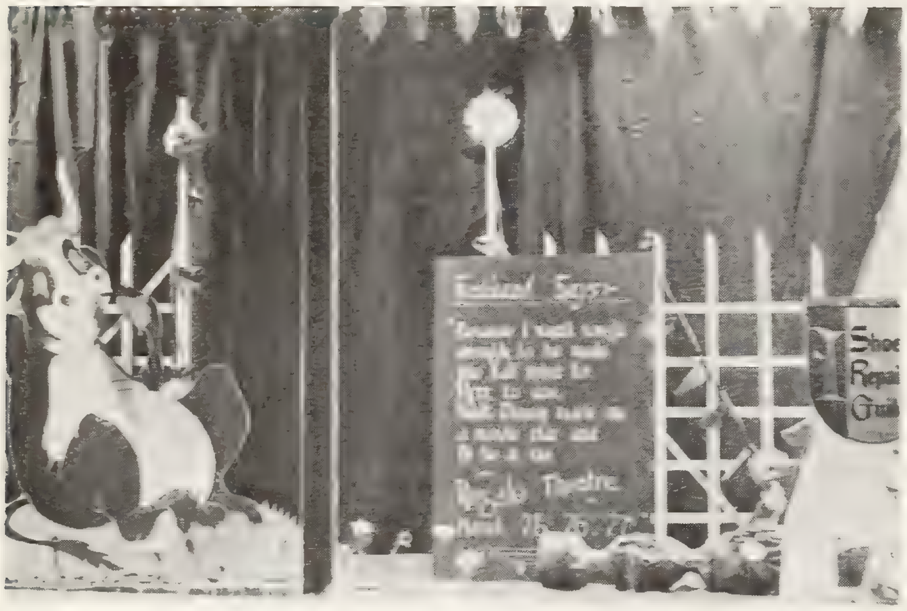
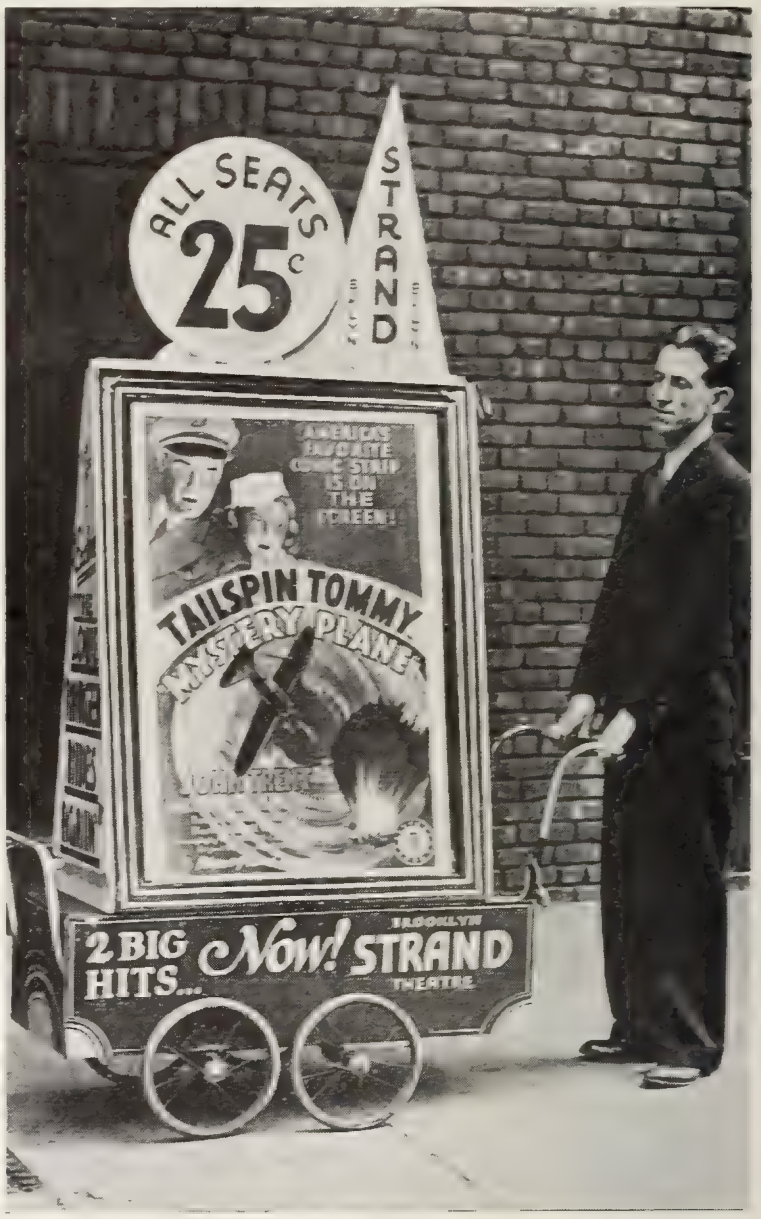
Round Table In Pictures



Reproduced at left is photograph of two of the four attractive girls used in connection with a city-wide exploitation stunt in advance of showing of "Love Affair" at the Paramount Theatre, in Portland, Oregon. Girls travelled around town in trolleys, busses, etc., studiously engaged in looking through a scrapbook of clippings on the picture. Idea was originated by Manager Herb Sobottka.

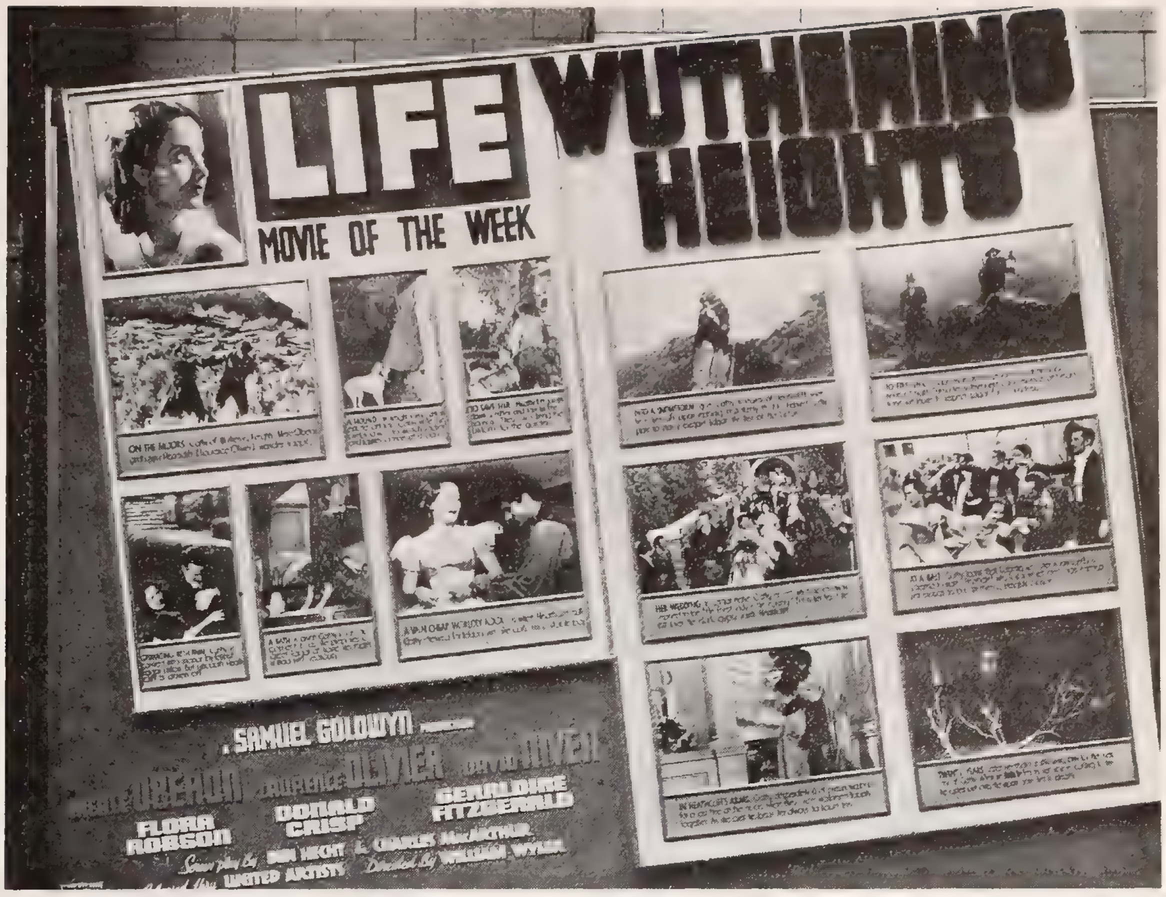
The Brooklyn Strand constructed stand illustrated below for engagement of "Mystery Plane", posters were mounted on baby carriage and wheeled through streets. Stunt was conceived and arranged by Teddy Trust, publicity director for the theatre.



Above left shows what happens to a "sissy" bovine, and to what use Manager J. E. Jorgensen, of the Regale Theatre, Salem, N. D., put him. Tying in with prominent shoe repairing merchant, theatreman planted cutout of "Ferdinand" in the window with tiein copy to the effect that because he wasn't tough enough to be made into half soles, he could be found starring in the Disney short at the Regale.

In exchange for house-to-house herald distribution on "Sergeant Madden", Milt Harris rigged up a number idea whereby members of the Cleveland Boystown organization could see the picture at Loew's State. Boys were given numbered badges, those corresponding with numbers posted by the doormen were allowed in as guests of the house.

Stand-out attractor in the elaborate front for "Wuthering Heights" at the New York Rivoli is proving to be reproduction of Life magazine's famed "movie of the week" layout on the picture in a recent issue. The same scene and star stills used by the publication were blown up in the display as illustrated with explanatory captions immediately below given similar treatment.



By Cosmo-Sileo

At a recent quarterly meeting of Warner Bros., Albany theatre zone held by zone manager M. A. Silver, the gathering listened to Harry Goldberg, national director of advertising, who spoke on merchandising campaigns for spring and summer. In the group, standing (left to right), are C. L. Hollister; Eddie Selette; Al Newhall; Dalton Burgett; Jim Faugham; Sid Sommer; Joe Weinstein; Al La Flamme; Andy Roy; Charles A. Smakwitz; Jules Curley; Jack Swartout and Jack Breslin. (Seated, rear) Jimmy Macris; Max Friedman; Ralph Crabill; Jack L. Warner, Jr.; M. A. Silver; Harry Goldberg; Bob Rosenthal; F. M. Westfall and Leo Rosen. (Seated, front) Mel Conhaim; Bill Leggiero; Bill Haynes; Ralph Booth; Murray Lafayette and Al Beckerich.

Since the story, author and star of "Pygmalion" make up an all-British combination, Larry Graburn for his date at the Capitol, Halifax, Nova Scotia centered his entire campaign for the date upon wide publicity for these three main selling points. Topping the outside billing was an unique 24-sheet stand as illustrated made up of a series of one-sheets of the regular posters made up on the picture. The one-sheets were laid out as shown with theatre name and date below.

Teaser Sidewalk Stencils Used for "Love Affair"

With city ordinances prohibiting permanent sidewalk stencils, Bob Haley, manager at the Orpheum, Kansas City, aided by RKO exploiteer Arthur Denman for "Love Affair" used a water stencil to imprint the picture's title on main streets. Two pieces of leather cut into shape of hearts into which were cut, in reverse, the letters "l-o-v-e" and "a-f-f-a-i-r-s," were attached to shoes and worn by theatre employees, who covered business districts. To heighten curiosity, men were in street attire with nothing to identify them or the theatre.

In addition, Haley flew from the roof of theatre a sevenfoot kit which trailed pennants, each carrying a word in the title. Trucks carried banners, menut stickers were used in downtown locations and a four-day tieup was planted with the Journal on a want-ad promotion for which passes were awarded.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Limerick Hosts Injuns

With "Oklahoma Kid" depicting life in the Cherokee strip which is located within 75 miles of Enid, Okla., City Manager George Limerick, for the opening at the Aztec Theatre held a private screening with members of the Cherokee Strip Cowpunchers Association as guests. Theatreman served hot coffee from a chuckwagon in front of the theatre night of screening. Stunt broke papers in advance.

Edelstein Promotes School Mimeograph

With the students of local high school sorely in need of a mimeograph to get out their newspaper, Max Edelstein, of the Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn., staged a special show consisting of "Penrod and his Twin Brother" together with "Ferdinand the Bull." Through cooperation of Paul Weld, principal of the school, an advance sale was held, with teachers of all classes distributing the tickets to students who made a concentrated effort to dispose of them. So great was the sale that extra shows had to be presented in order to accommodate the crowds. Proceeds were used to secure the mimeograph and help finance the school papers.

MANAGER PRESENTED WITH COLLEGE LETTER

The "A" Club, composed of men who make their letters in major sports at Auburn, in Auburn, Ala., recently inducted Manager G.H. Coates, of the Tiger, in that city for the cooperation he has given the organization during his operation at the theatre. The tapping for membership took place on the stage in the presence of a capacity house gathered to witness these honors to the popular showmen.

Lykes Cops Legion Parade for Advance On 'Freedom Ring'

The recent street parade in Cleveland in advance of the annual Rodeo, sponsored by the American Legion was ingeniously tied in to his first-run showing of "Let Freedom Ring" at Loew's Stillman, by Manager Jack Lykes through his contacts with the Legion officials. Lykes tied in with the local Packard dealer, who furnished a new convertible coupe. Properly bannered with co-op copy, the car was used by the Legion Commander-in-Chief to head the parade in company with a local girl garbed in cowgirl costume. The parade made the main streets and the wide attention drawn to the cowboys, cowgirls, Indians and brass bands was thus "copped" by Lykes as an entirely costless and efficient buildup for his date.

Burro Used for Ballyhoo

Similar to the animal in the picture, was a small burro which, bannered with theatre copy and led by a man in Western costume was also used for a street ballyhoo in addition to taking part in the parade. Jack reports that the "animule," with the usual stubbornness of his kind, often took a notion to recline in the middle of the street, causing a lot of extra but unexpected attention. As another bid for newspaper attention, Lykes extended an invitation to the mounted Rodeo cowhands to see the picture, their horses tied out front to an old parking sign. It was arranged that local traffic cop would be shown giving the horses "no parking" tickets.

The breakfast matinee used previously by the theatreman on another attraction was repeated for his current date, promoted coffee and doughnuts served to patrons at 8:30 at the opening day first show. Papers used the story and photos and Jack found that patrons appreciated the courtesy which bolstered regular business as the house opens regularly at nine in the morning.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Caldwell Gives "Finn" Well Rounded Campaign

Local youth resembling Mickey Rooney was dressed in fishing garb, bannered back and front with title and playdates, paraded streets as part of Wally Caldwell's "Huckleberry Finn" opening at Loew's Valentine, Toledo. Special letters were mailed to all schools, women's clubs, etc., calling attention to the opening and bookmarks were distributed through 15 branches of the public library system, plus scene still displays on all bulletin boards.

Windows included fishing tackle equipment with seven-foot cutout of Mickey serving as background, a Rooney clothing window with art, picture and playdate credits and book store featured editions of "Huck" with tiein copy. Announcements were made over WTOL in addition to a 15-minute "man-on-the-street" broadcast in front of lobby and papers were generous with stories and art on the picture.

Schools Pay Full Admission Price At 'Finn' Preview

A special invitation screening on "Huckleberry Finn," which actually made money for the theatre is reported by Manager Glenn H. Nelson, Harris, Findlay, Ohio, the show put on especially for the 6th, 7th and 8th grade students of the county schools at the regular children's admission price.

Nelson arranged for a print of the picture to be sent on in advance and then sold his school officials on allowing the children to see the show at 9:30 in the morning, which would allow them to get back to classes before the noon hour. The importance of the Mark Twain classic was so well emphasized that over 700 children attended. In addition to the actual gross obtained by the theatreman, he had that many youngsters in all parts of the county plugging the show in advance. Further buildup was obtained in the local press, the newspapers making much of the event.

Campaign Proves Costless

Outside of Nelson's time and effort in promoting the show, there was no money expended in exchange for the publicity and word-of-mouth advertising. The countup found the theatre actually making a profit on the screen.

The Round Tabler writes he is pleased with this accomplishment since by so doing he avoided the usual advance screening for a selected few of the city's prominents, a proceeding he has discovered not very profitable. It is his contention that the restricted preview does not return overly enthusiastic newspaper publicity, nor is the word-of-mouth advertising of great value. The special screening for the school children, he found, also avoided the expense incidental to the usual invitational preview.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Lifesize Star Cutout Helps Exploit "Kid"

Street stunt which Harry Unterfort reports attracted plenty of attention was used by him for opening of "Oklahoma Kid" at Keith's, in Syracuse. Lad carrying giant cutout of Cagney with title, playdates, etc., walked and rode through streets attracting the attention anticipated by the theatreman. Another street bally consisted of boy dressed as cowhand in buckskin suit with fringed edges, plus back sign heralding the opening. Through cooperation of Station WFBL, a street quiz in front of theatre was engaged in, with picture coming in for its share of plugs.

Held at the Municipal Airport for "Wings of the Navy" was a glider contest with the Journal American cooperating by running stories and pictures ahead of opening and through engagement. Old plane was promoted from airport and planted atop marquee, lad wearing aviator's suit with helmet, goggles and back sign paraded streets and complete fleet of Jonrnal American trucks were bannered with appropriate copy.

Quigley Grand Awards Ceremonies to Be Held in New York, May 16

The Silver and Bronze Quigley Grand Awards for 1938 are to be presented to John Burhorn and George Limerick in New York, at the Hotel Astor, on May 16th. The presentations will be preceded by a luncheon given by Martin Quigley in honor of the winners, at which leading industry heads will be in attendance.

As guests of Motion Picture Herald, winners are expected to arrive on May 15th, for a week's stay. In addition to the Awards ceremonies, a full program of entertainment is being arranged with the cooperation of the various motion picture companies and other industry organizations. Special luncheons, dinners, theatre parties and other divertissements are planned for the visitors, as are trips to the World's Fair and similar points of interest.

The theatremen were voted their honors at the annual Quigley Grand Awards Judging, which took place on February 7th. Burhorn, voted the Silver Grand, is manager of the subsequent-run Gayety Theatre, in South Chicago, a unit of the Indiana-Illinois Theatres. Limerick, voted the Bronze Grand, is city manager for the Griffith interests, in Enid, Oklahoma.

Backseat Driver's License Distributed by Martin

Gag novelty throwaways were distributed by Dave Martin, of the Fox Paramount, Hollywood, in the form of "baskseat driver's license," issued from the State of Insanity. Card certified that the holder had passed all tests for hysteria and nervousness and was therefore permitted to operate, dominate, irritate and criticize the chauffeur either from the rear or front seat. Note at bottom of the card was to the effect that holders of the license were advised to "shut up, stop worrying the driver and make an appointment to see," etc., etc. Martin distributed the cards to all gentlemen as they left the theatre.

Candid Camera Tieup

As a tie-up with "Jesse James," Francis Falkenburg at the Alabama Theatre, Birmingham through the Birmingham News offered a $25 cash prize to the amateur cameraman getting the best picture of a modern Jesse James with boots, mask, brace of six-shooters and all, who paraded up and down the streets for one day. Two other cash prizes were offered runnersup also tickets to the show. Birmingham Camera Club induced to tie in on the promotion. Pictures became property of theatre for display.

LOEW PATRONS GIVEN "CAFE SOCIETY" NIGHT

Five couples, one from each borough of New York City, among Loew's Theatres patrons were recently given a tour of the leading New York night spots popularized by "cafe society" on a contest arranged by Oscar A. Doob's ad department for the picture of that name.

Entrants were requested to answer in no more than 100 words why they wanted to see the picture. Winners were allowed to pick the spots where they wished to dine and dance.

Johnson Launches "Quiz" Programs

To announce to his patrons the inauguration of a weekly "quiz" program at the Opera House, Millinocket, Maine, Manager Bill Johnson distributed mimeographed heralds week ahead of opening series with full information. Five simple questions are asked the audience each week with 10 seconds allowed for answering each. The first person to supply the correct answer to each question receives a week's pass. If no correct answer is received, a two weeks' pass is given to the person answering the next question. After five questions have been answered, a sixth, slightly harder, is asked, allowing a full minute for reply. First person supplying correct answer receives a $5 cash award and if no one answers the cash is carried over to the following week. Three prominent local residents serve as judges and their decisions are final.

A comprehensive teaser campaign was engaged in by Johnson for "Gunga Din," through judicious use of stickers on which was printed "You're a better man than I am, Gunga Din." These were plastered on doors and windows all over town several weeks ahead of opening, and by the time the picture opened, the line was a real catch word.

Theatre Anniversary Gets Comprehensive Campaign

Gala first anniversary celebration for the Highland Theatre, in Akron, Ohio, was arranged by District Manager Harry Brown, Jr., with entire theatre block decorated with pennants and electric lights provided by cooperating merchants. Each store held a special anniversary sale, local dailies coming through with stories and editorial in addition to devoting full column to Brown.

Special anniversary meeting of the theatre kid club was held with extra prizes and gifts promoted for the entire aggregation. Local baker donated an eight-foot cake for lobby display, each member of the house staff wrote 15 letters to telephone subscribers, and as an added feature, story was run in papers that anyone possessing original invitation from opening night a year ago would be admitted free.

Carlson Secures 'Follies' Premiere In Honor of Star

Since Bess Ehrhardt learned to skate and went to school in Superior, Wisconsin, and since that community is credited with being the center of winter carnival activities, it was Manager Gus Carlson's idea that the world premiere of "Ice Follies of 1939" co-starring the local girl should be held in her home town. His efforts in this direction, in cooperation with John J. Friedl, Minnesota Amusement Co., president, Charlie Winchell, circuit ad head, H. C. Buchanan and M-G-M distribution executives were successful, with the opening held at the Palace in Superior reported as the greatest event in local theatrical history.

Although the event was held early in March, publicity began in the last months of 1938, the local Evening Telegram assigning its Hollywood correspondent to forward publicity stories, feature articles, etc., to keep interest high. The advance barrage of publicity was topped with a special seven-page souvenir section of the paper, the front page an elaborate art display made up by Winchell and run free of charge. Rest of section was filled with congratulatory outside ads, publicity and art on the picture.

Skating Float Wins First Prize

Exploitation started a month ahead, the theatre entering a special float in the Chamber of Commerce winter carnival. Featured on the float was a specially constructed skating rink upon which two local skaters performed intricate figures. Metallic signs with theatre copy were used for decoration and four boys dressed in carnival costume walked on each side of the float carrying large railroad flares. The theatre exhibit, incidentally, was awarded first prize.

Consistent publicity and exploitation during the weeks ahead led up to the night of the premiere, when the theatre front was decorated with special lighting effects such as railroad flares, giant flood lights, etc. For lobby decoration a giant skating shoe used in the St. Paul ice carnival parade was secured for Carlson by Winchell. Platform to support skate was erected and bannered with copy made up of silver tinsel. Four lifelike penguins decorated each corner, their eyes flickering on and off. The official queen's float used in the St. Paul carnival was also promoted for the opening.

Star Telephone Hookup Arranged

At the theatre prominent guests broadcast greetings from the lobby where congratulatory wires from Hollywood stars were read. Later the broadcast was transferred to the stage with Mr. Buchanan in charge of the official ceremonies. The highlight here was a phone call from Miss Ehrhardt on tour, the call amplified so that the audience, sidewalk crowds and those listening to the broadcast at home could hear the message.

Following the premiere a special midnight show was put on to accommodate the waiting crowds and other events publicized later included a "Bess Ehrhardt Day" sponsored by the high school which she had attended, the student body attending special performance.

PARAMOUNT PORTFOLIO FOR "U. P." PRESS BOOK

Measuring up to the advance publicity job on "Union Pacific" is the unusual press book portfolio put out by Paramount, the material coming in three different books covering exploitations, advertising and publicity. All are of standard size for convenience in filing.

The promotions are headed by a breakdown of Paramount's national campaign so far, the countrywide tiein with the Union Pacific railroad, and the Omaha premiere. In addition, there are 20 other national tieups with top advertisers in different fields, besides a wealth of promotional suggestions for all manner of local tieins that should fit most any situation.

Candid Camera Fans Snap "Jesse James"

Dressing lad as "Jesse James," Ed Fitzpatrick, Poli, Waterbury, Conn., sent the "outlaw" about town to remove "reward" tack cards previously posted on telegraph poles. Having promoted time from Station WATR, announcements were made that on a certain day, man attired as the famed desperado would make his way about town removing the signs.

Where James would go was not divulged, but guest tickets were awarded to candid camera fans who succeeded in snapping the bandit as he removed one of the posters. Cash prizes also went to those submitting clearest and sharpest "pieces of evidence."

Fitz reported that the stunt created citywide interests and that the picture and theatre received innumerable plugs in papers. Entire cost to the theatre being salary of ballyhoo man.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Civic Choral Society Tied to "Great Waltz"

Highlighted by the personal appearance of the Civic Choral Society of Connellsville on the stage singing appropriate Viennese music, "The Great Waltz" was sponsored by this society and was a grand success both financially and for publicity purposes, by Earl Bower, at the Orpheum Theatre, Connellsville, Pa.

Special ads in the newspaper by the Choral Society and the theatre, attractive posters with violin cutouts on them in the store windows, a large bass violin with the "Great Waltz" information on it in the lobby of the theatre, and a special trailer on the screen helped herald the opening.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Teufel Sells "Jamboree"

Numerous upright signs showing Gene Autry eating Wheaties were planted in store windows through city by George Tuefel, Liberty, Wheeling, West Va., as part of his campaign on "Western Jamboree." Sandwich man on streets exploited the attraction, chain grocer carried plug on their mimeographed mailing list sheets and newspapers came through with stories and art work on the picture.

Schine-men Find New Juvenile Club Popular with Kids

A new idea for juveniles, the "Honesty-Pays" Club has been launched at Schine's Vine Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ohio, the promotion originated by Kroger Babb, Schine's ad-man and carried out by Manager Ron Sturgess.

Local dairy and ice cream company underwrites all costs and provides prizes distributed at every meeting.

Members are given official booklet, containing rules and regulations and number of coupons. For each meeting children fill in coupons affirming that in the past week they have purchased one or more designated products handled by the sponsor and enumerated in the coupons. Included also are ads for the serial "Scouts to the Rescue," which is shown at each meeting. Prizes include ice cream and major items such as baseball outfits, cameras, vanity cases, etc.

School officials, church leaders and merchants have been found willing to cooperate. Each week the youngsters are given an opportunity to confess any wrong-doings and then are pledged to another week of honesty at school and at play. The club will elect its own officers soon with stage programs and other features being carded for future Saturdays.

Arranges Style Show

Reported by Babb to have brought in a record evening's business was recent style show put on at the Vine Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ohio, in cooperation with department store which produced and advertised the event. Arranged by Manager Jim Platt was a special promenade walk built out over the first 10 rows of seats on which the models displayed latest styles. All costs were borne by store.

In conjunction with the recent series of round trips to the New York World's Fair promoted by the Schine Mt. Vernon Theatres from local merchants, Babb forwards a 24-page special tabloid newspaper put out with Platt and Sturgess to build up interest in these prizes. Ads of 25 leading merchants paid for the cost of the edition which includes scene shots of coming pictures and photos of the Fair.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Newspaper Contest Builds "Frankenstein"

Inspired by "Son of Frankenstein," George Sarvis, Library Theatre, Warren, Pa., held a newspaper contest with prizes going to those submitting best letters on their most frightening experiences. Most hair-raising letters together with winners' names were published in the paper.

For his front, giant cutout of Lugosi was used, title letters set against a spider-web background, radio announcements were made over WJTN, and an old reliable worked for Sarvis in the form of a fish bowl in lobby, patrons invited to stop and look at the invisible South American sail fish created by Frankenstein.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

Contacting Leland Abbott and his partner who were en route from Alaska to New York with their troupe of huskies, "Chick" Tompkins, of the Voge Theatre, East Chicago, Ind., contacted the lads and prevailed upon them to include that city on their line of march to the New York World's Fair. Figuring out a way to tie the team into his current showing of "Kentucky," "Chick" paraded the aggregation through the streets with banners reading "We came all the way from the Canadian Arctic to welcome 'Kentucky' at the" etc., etc. Local dailies picked up the stunt with stories and photos.

Entire staff of the Strand Theatre, Oshkosh, Wis., were dressed as gobs ahead and during run of "Wings of the Navy," all part of Manager F. B. Schlax's buildup on the picture. Theatreman further contacted parents of local boy who at present is a flying instructor at Pensacola and secured pictures for tiein lobby board. Small gasoline planes were promoted from airplane club and hung throughout theatre, propellers, wheel, connecting rod, etc., etc., were also secured for display purposes and through tiein with Naval Recruiting Station at Oshkosh, Schlax arranged with the officer in charge to send over a special two-reel naval short which was shown in conjunction.

Designed especially for mailing to railroad men as well as farmers in the vicinity of Danville, Ky., was the card distributed by Bill Yeakle, of the Kentucky, as advance for "Let Freedom Ring," copy tied directly to the railroad sequences in the picture. Also broadcast by Bill for "My Lucky Star" were small envelopes containing a puzzle. Copy on outside read "We're puzzled as to how we can adequately describe Sonja Henie in," etc., etc.

Visiting cards, the fronts of which carried copy reading "What did she ask, when mother said 'Yes, My Darling Daughter?' " were distributed by J. B. Clements in advance of that picture's opening at the Egyptian Theatre, Sioux Falls, S. D. Reverse side informed readers that they would get the answer by seeing the picture at the etc., etc.

Gag lobby setpiece was used with the instructions on "how to get your man," planted on display were a gun, book of poems and other paraphernalia.

A card that not only told that the thrills of "Trader Horn" would pull your hair out, but also supplied the hair, was the novelty distributed by Glenn Fannin, publicity director of the Cactus Theatre, Lubbock, Texas for that date. Slits in cards were threaded with a number of actual horse hairs through small photo of a clenched fist. Tiein copy together with playdates, etc., followed.

Pick-A-Star Competition Launched by Friedman

Reported as being one of his brain children is the pick-a-star contest inaugurated by H. L. Friedman, Ritz Theatre, Pittsburgh, Penna. Numbered slips of paper are placed in box in lobby and as each patron purchases a ticket he has a chance to draw a slip. On table are photos of stars, all turned face down and all numbered. If the number drawn by the patron corresponds to the one on picture of star advertised as the "lucky star," he receives in addition to the photo, guest tickets.

If the number the patron draws is not one calling for a "lucky star," yet the number corresponds with one of the numbered stills, he receives the photo as a gift. Friedman reports the gag as proving highly successful and that the scheme affords a good opportunity for the distribution exchanges to get rid of odds and ends in star photos.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Limerick Tiein Aids "Gunga Din"

Planted in the Cleveland Plain Dealer by Manager Ed Miller and publicist Manny Pearlstein, at Warners' Hippodrome was a limerick contest in advance of "Gunga Din." Cash prizes and guest tickets going to winners. Art and publicity breaks were started five months ahead and subsequent breaks were received right through to opening. Also effected was tieup with advertising agency which conducts a quiz-bee program over WHK, tickets also offered on this with picture plugs secured.

For "Wings of the Navy," tie up was made with the Cleveland Press, then currently conducting a contest awarding aviation scholarships as prizes. Theatremen invited about 150 of the contestants to view the first showing in return for gratis newspaper space. Study guides were furnished the school board, who in turn distributed them among high school English classes for discussion in classes three weeks in advance of opening.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Missing Letter Contest Planted on "Antoinette"

Conceived by Walter E. Mock, assistant manager, Loew's Kameo, Brooklyn, was the missing letter contest in connection with "Marie Antoinette." Fifteen leading stores in the neighborhood cooperated, distributing entry blanks and prominently displaying window cards. On card in each store one of the letters which would aid spell out title name was conspicuously spotted, entrants were then invited to find the other 14 letters in neighborhood store windows and when the list was completed, turn it in to the theatre. First 20 submitting correct list received guest tickets to the picture.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Beery Appointed Honorary Sergeant

Harvey Kny, of the Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis., really went to work on "Sergeant Madden" and had Wally Beery made an honorary sergeant of the Racine police force with commission issued to the star. Stories received prominent mention in local press, together with play dates and picture copy.

Rules for the Quigley Awards

Awards are now voted on single exploitations and not on complete campaigns as formerly. This includes goodwill and institutional ideas as well as those on pictures.

Each Quarter is divided into two-week preliminary contests.

Winners in each preliminary are appointed Fortnighters.

Entries of Fortnighters in each Quarter are judged for the Quigley Quarterly Plaques, Medals and Citations.

Quarterly Plaque, Medal and Citation Winners are appointed Quartermasters.

Entrants registering the best records of Quigley Plaques, Medals and Citations in the four Quarters will be eligible for the Grand Awards judging.

There are no classifications of population or situation. Everyone starts from scratch.

Every theatreman everywhere is eligible to compete.

All product is eligible — features, shorts, serials. Also stage shows, amateur presentations, etc.

More than one idea may be included in one entry but Preliminary Awards will be voted for best individual idea.

No fancy entries are necessary. With the usual "evidence", submit brief description and "reasons why" an entry should be considered.

When complete campaigns are forwarded, entrants are requested to mark individual ideas for Awards consideration.

There are no more deadlines. All exploitations will be entered in the Fortnightly competition underway on date they are received.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Col-Mel (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

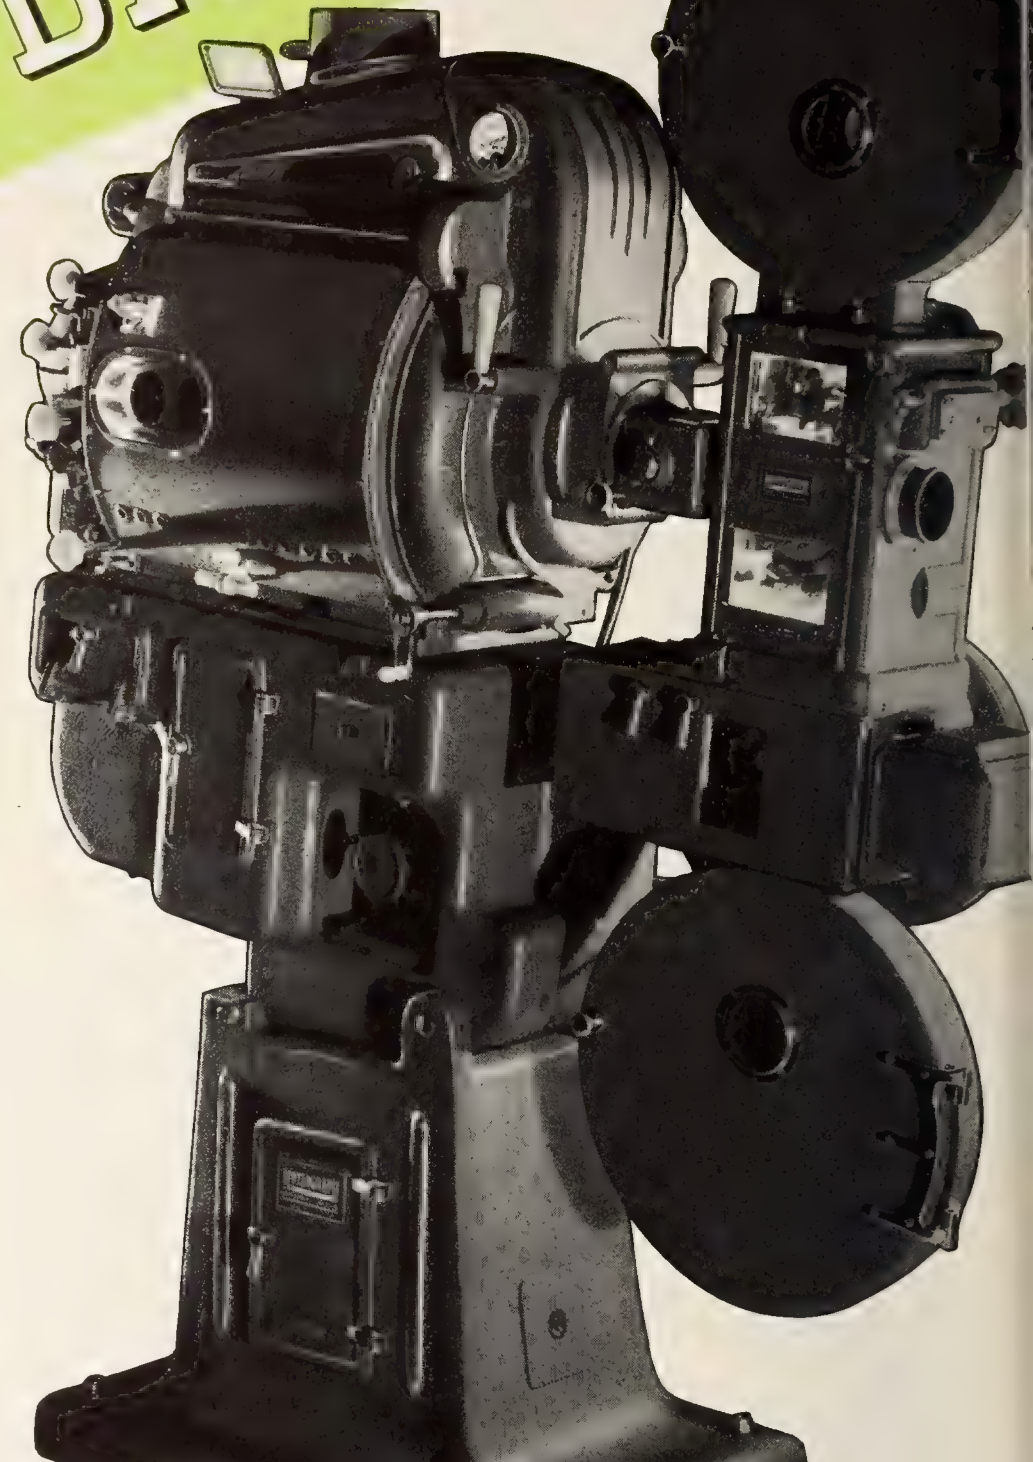
DEPENDABILITY



● Every exhibitor insists that his theatre's projection equipment be dependable — first, last and always.

Opinions may differ as to whether this or that mechanical feature gives a better picture on the screen—just as tastes may vary in the theatre's appointments.

But few exhibitors are willing to accept anything less than proved projector dependability as their insurance against interrupted screen performance.

That is why Motiograph Projectors have been the preference of exhibitors for over 42 years. Their dependability has become a tradition. It is no new claim.

The leading independent theatre equipment dealer in your film center is the authorized distributor for Motiograph Projectors — and Mirrophonic Sound Systems. Talk to him before you buy any major booth equipment.

■ With the completion of the Avenue theatre, Manila, capital and principal port of the Philippine Islands, located on relatively populous Luzon and having a population of its own approximating 300,000, attained a total of nine motion picture theatres. Most of these, however, are quite large. Like a number of store and office buildings built in more recent years, they are more or less modern structures of American inspiration, set in a scene still predominantly Asiatic. Of the nine theatres, six are owned by three Filipino families: Tuason, operating the Lyric and Capitol (which latter is shown in the picture above of the Escolta); Roces, the Ideal; and Rufino, operating the Grand, the State and the new Avenue. . . . The Avenue theatre has a capacity of 1,600; lines and decoration are modern, executed in materials that liberally include marble; it makes a striking use of modern lighting devices. These are shown in the accompanying views of the foyer and auditorium. In the foyer are ceiling boxes arranged in a pattern, and coves; in the auditorium, light coves participate in a panel-and-rib ceiling pattern, and along the walls, light is cast into recesses from great urns. Facilities include a stage designed by C. E. Tompkins of the American J. R. Clancy, Inc., and the proscenium opening has luminous glass pylons.

Large Projects Liven Theatre Building Scene

REPRESENTATIVE reports from various sections of the country during April point to the coming months of 1939 as one of the most active periods in recent years in new theatre construction and substantial remodeling. Project reports at the beginning of the year indicated a busy summer in modernization and equipment replacement, but the larger programs apparently were held up until the box office curve showed definite signs of bending upward.

The Fox West Coast circuit, for example, estimates that three theatres projected immediately for California, and remodeling of a number of its circuits, will cost in the neighborhood of half a million dollars. The new theatres will be built in Los Angeles, Fresno, and Oildale.

Curving around to the Southwest, one notes another half a million involved in projects in Texas, Arkansas and neighboring states. The Dallas architectural firm of Pettigrew and Worley, alone, report they are preparing plans for theatres in that area totaling $385,000 in cost. These houses will be in Tyler, Bryan, Houston, and San Antonio.

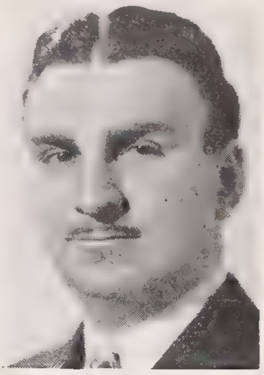
From the Middle West comes the announcement by Harry C. Arthur, Jr., chief executive of Fanchon & Marco, in St. Louis, that about $200,000 will be spent on the modernization of theatres under the management of this firm.

Three Malco theatres in Memphis, Tenn., alone are to be modernized immediately at a cost of $100,000.

Matthews Named New Head of Motiograph

H. THORWELL MATTHEWS, who since 1924 has been associated as one of the owners, and more recently as an executive, of the organization manufacturing Motiograph projectors and sound equipment, has been named president of the company. He was appointed president of Motiograph, Inc., plant and general offices of which are in Chicago, following the resignation of Joseph B. Kleckner, who has headed the company for several years.

Mr. Matthews has been secretary and purchasing executive of Motiograph for the past two years. In his new position he will also hold the post of general manager. Following his appointment he said that the policy of the company would continue as it has been with respect to the manufacturing of both projectors and sound reproduction apparatus, and also that no other executive changes, "either in the sales or manufacturing departments" are contemplated. He added tha the common stock holdings of the company would also be maintained.



H. T. Matthews

The new Motiograph president is a brother of Francis E. Matthews, who is attorney for interests associated with reorganization of the company following change in management a few years ago.

Boston Contributes an Office Building Theatre

A MINIATURE theatre housed within a commercial structure, its very "front" merely an entrance from the main floor corridor of the building, is Boston's new contribution to the exhibition of newsreels and shorts. It seats only 250. But its facilities include complete air-conditioning, and altogether it is appointed and equipped in modern fashion.

Called the Telepix Cinema, it is the project of an organization headed by Irving A. Isaacs, and the theatre was designed by Peter & Stubbins, Boston architects.

The Telepix is located on the first floor of the Park Square Building, which is rated as New England's largest office structure. The theatre as a whole occupies the space of four stores. Entrance to the lobby is off the arcade of the building, where it is recessed into the wall. At one side of the doors is the box office, and entrance is through a turnstile.

The lobby is 22x18, carpeted in broadloom, and equipped with modern furniture.

The auditorium, which measures 34x85 feet, has a rear wall of corrugated Transite, colored terra cotta; the right wall is similarly finished, with terra cotta color to the height of about 6 feet; however, the remaining wall area is finished in acoustic plaster, with the right wall tinted gray, and the left wall brown, while the ceiling is painted beige. This painting of various surfaces with different color was adopted for the purpose of giving an effect of greater spaciousness. The auditorium seating uses a Cable chair developed a year or so ago, with a "rocking" cantilever type seat suspension.

The projection room, on the second floor directly above the lobby, is 20x11 feet. Equipment includes Simplex projectors, RCA Sound, and Strong projection lamps. The screen image is 9x13 feet.

The Telepix Cinema is owned by a holding company called the Telepix Corporation, with an authorized stock issue of $200,000. The corporation was created last summer with the purpose of "developing research in, and the commercial exploitation of, agencies and methods for generating, transmitting and utilizing light and sound waves." The president is J. Stanley Graves, now of New Hampshire but formerly of Boston, who before this has had no theatrical affiliations.

Mr. Isaacs, the treasurer, was for many years an associate of Nate Gordon and was actively engaged in the development of the Olympia circuit, now owned by Paramount. He also helped in the formation of First National Pictures.

And now "Black Light"–

● Something new and different—especially something that excites curiosity as well as the senses—that is what the showman is always looking for. He has it in "black light." The materials and equipment with which "black light" are produced are not entirely new, but their application has become better understood, so that now it can serve a number of practical purposes in the theatre and give truly spectacular effect to interior treatments. Here are many suggestions for its application.

By FRANCIS M. FALGE

Socalled "Black light" is harmless, invisible ultraviolet radiation which is used to produce luminous effects by energizing fluorescent materials. It has had its greatest acceptance in the past in the production of luminous stage settings and costumes, but recent improvements in materials, light sources and lighting equipment have made it possible to use fluorescent effects much more extensively. Some of the places where "black light" has promising possibilities are:

Lobby and foyer poster displays.

Luminous murals for auditoriums.

Illumination of screen surroundings to soften picture contrasts.

Luminous end standards for aisle lighting.

Decorative niches with luminous figures, flowers or other designs.

Atmospheric effects in the foyer.

Decorations for special occasions, special lobby displays, etc.

Before considering these application problems, a knowledge of the equipments to make these things possible is essential.

What "Black Light" Is

Ultraviolet, or "black," light is radiant energy, invisible to the human eye; it has many properties, including that of affecting certain materials in such a way as to make them glow and give off visible light. Ultraviolet radiation is shorter in wave-length than blue light and may be divided into three parts as follows:

A. Ultraviolet near the visible blue: It may be transmitted by ordinary glass; is not harmful to the eyes.

B. Middle ultraviolet: It is useful for health purposes; not transmitted by ordinary glass.

C. Far or short wave ultraviolet: It is useful for sterilization purposes; very harmful to the eyes.

Whereas the short wave ultraviolet is used to activate the powders of the new fluorescent lamps used for illumination, the near-ultraviolet is used for advertising and decorative purposes.

There are many substances that have the property of fluorescing, some brightly and others faintly. Some 600 different minerals, a wide variety of chemicals, aniline dyes, common greases, many cosmetics, and certain glasses are among the available fluorescent materials. In addition, there are phosphorescent materials, which continue to glow for some time after the energizing source applied has been entirely removed.

In the past, some of the more active minerals and chemicals have been available in powder and in paint forms for application to various surfaces for special fluorescent effects.

Luminous Lacquer-Enamel

Recently one manufacturer has made considerable improvement in the luminescent qualities of these materials. Available in a lacquer-enamel form, they may be readily applied by painting or spraying, and they have adequate opacity so that it is no longer necessary to use a reflecting under-surface in order to obtain effective results.

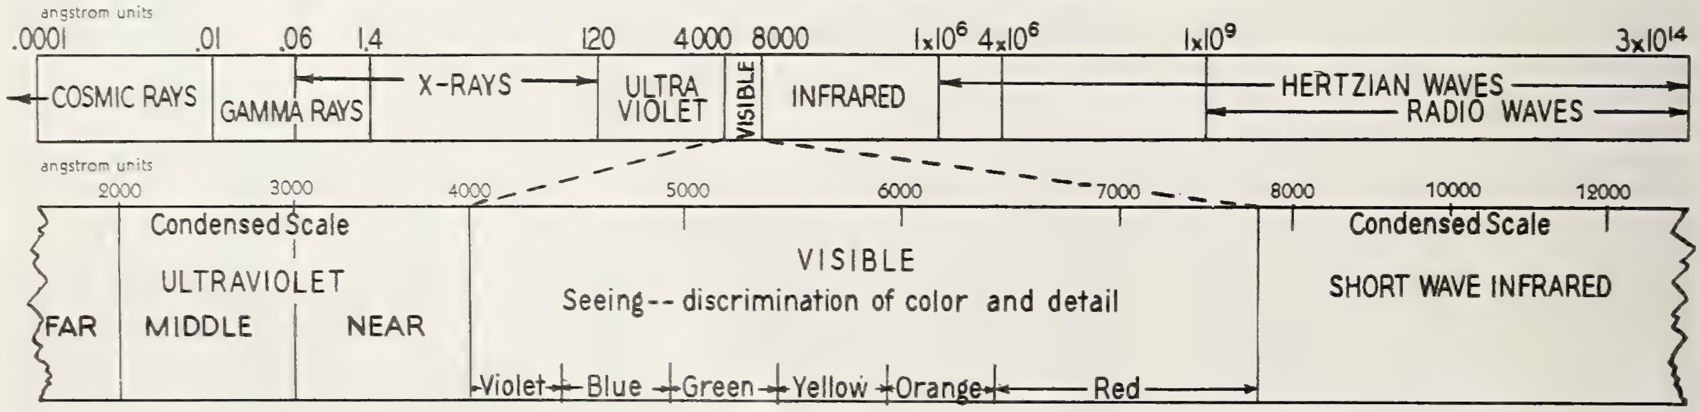
These lacquer enamels are available in a wide range of colors, and for the most part the colors, when seen under visible light, are somewhat similar to the colored appearance under ultraviolet. In addition, several colors are available which are invisible under filament (regular mazda) lamp lighting. Although the lacquer enamels are rather expensive, a pint will cover approximately 60 square feet, and most "effects" do not encompass many square feet, so that the finished job is not unduly expensive.

Luminous Lithographs

In addition to perfecting these materials and paints, a method of processing paper has also been developed, applicable to the processing or lithographing of posters of any size, and utilizing such standard illustrations as are employed for ordinary printing.

Ultraviolet Light Sources

The sun, arc lights, filament lamps, and mercury discharge lamps are all sources of ultraviolet. For the purposes here under discussion, however, filament and mercury lamps are the most practical sources of the



Representation of the spectrum, indicating location of the near- and middle-ultraviolet, which is "black light" as distinguished from true ultraviolet.

Another Tool of Showmanship near ultraviolet needed for display purposes.

It is important to note that the source of ultraviolet "black light" is vital to the finished effect, and that the more watts of effective ultraviolet energy per square foot, the more brilliant the finished result will be certain to be.

Filament lamps give off ultraviolet to some extent; the higher the temperature of the filament, the greater the output of ultraviolet. For that reason the higher wattage spotlight and floodlight lamps and the photoflood lamps, are the most practical of the filament sources.

These sources, however, do not compare in ultraviolet output with the mercury lamps (see below) and the heat from these lamps makes it difficult to operate them satisfactorily; they should be limited to simple temporary applications where simplicity and keeping cost down to a minimum are of major importance.

Mercury Discharge Lamps

The mercury discharge lamps are best suited to providing large enough amounts of ultraviolet for striking display results. A wide variety of lamps are useful for this purpose, including the S-1 and S-2 sunlamps, and the high-intensity mercury lamps. The 50-inch Nico tube has been used to good advantage in many cases where a wide flood rather than a controlled distribution is satisfactory. Because they appear to be the most practical at the present time for providing control of the ultraviolet, our discussion will be limited to the lamps listed in the accompanying "Black Light" Rating Chart [this appears on page 32].

The relative ultraviolet "Black Light" ratings of the various lamps are indicated in the last column of the chart. From this it can be seen that the 250-watt capillary mercury lamp gives double the effect of the 100-watt. The argon glow lamp figure is without a filter so that here the visible blue plays an important part in the result, making it more useful than the rating figure would seem to indicate.

The heat of the lamps has the result of reducing the near-ultraviolet output; if ventilation can be provided, the output will be increased 30 to 50% on both the 100-watt and 250-watt lamps.

Visible Light Filters

In practically all cases light sources which produce ultraviolet also give off a considerable amount of visible light as well. It is necessary to screen or filter out a major portion of this visible light for satisfactory results, at the same time interfering as little as possible with the passage of the ultraviolet. For this purpose a nickel-cobalt glass has proved most satisfactory. Such filters have been available either as square plates, roundels, or sleeves. Three types of glass are available as follows:

1. Heat resisting red-purple ultra—rather brittle, but suited to applications involving considerable heat.

2. Red-purple ultra where less heat is involved—somewhat higher transmission than No. 1.

3. Blue for substances which flouresce under blue light as well as ultraviolet—used where visible blue light does not detract from the display.

Control Equipment

Because the amounts of ultraviolet which can practically be produced are limited, it is important to utilize every possible means of controlling the radiation so as to redirect as much of it as possible to the fluorescent surfaces. For the near-ultraviolet, any of the usual types of reflecting surfaces are satisfactory, the one of highest efficiency, with the most suitable surface for light control, being best. Because of the "black" bulb, the curvature of the reflectors should be so designed that light is not redirected through the bulb.

To control further these equipments, spill rings and shields can often be used to advantage to concentrate the light where needed, at the same time eliminating the spilled light, which may reach people, causing their eyeballs to fluoresce, which results in a hazy view. These equipments may be used as spotlights, or as downlights, mounted at or above the ceiling. The problem of brightness at the source is minimized because of the lack of visible light.

The wattage needed to produce satis-

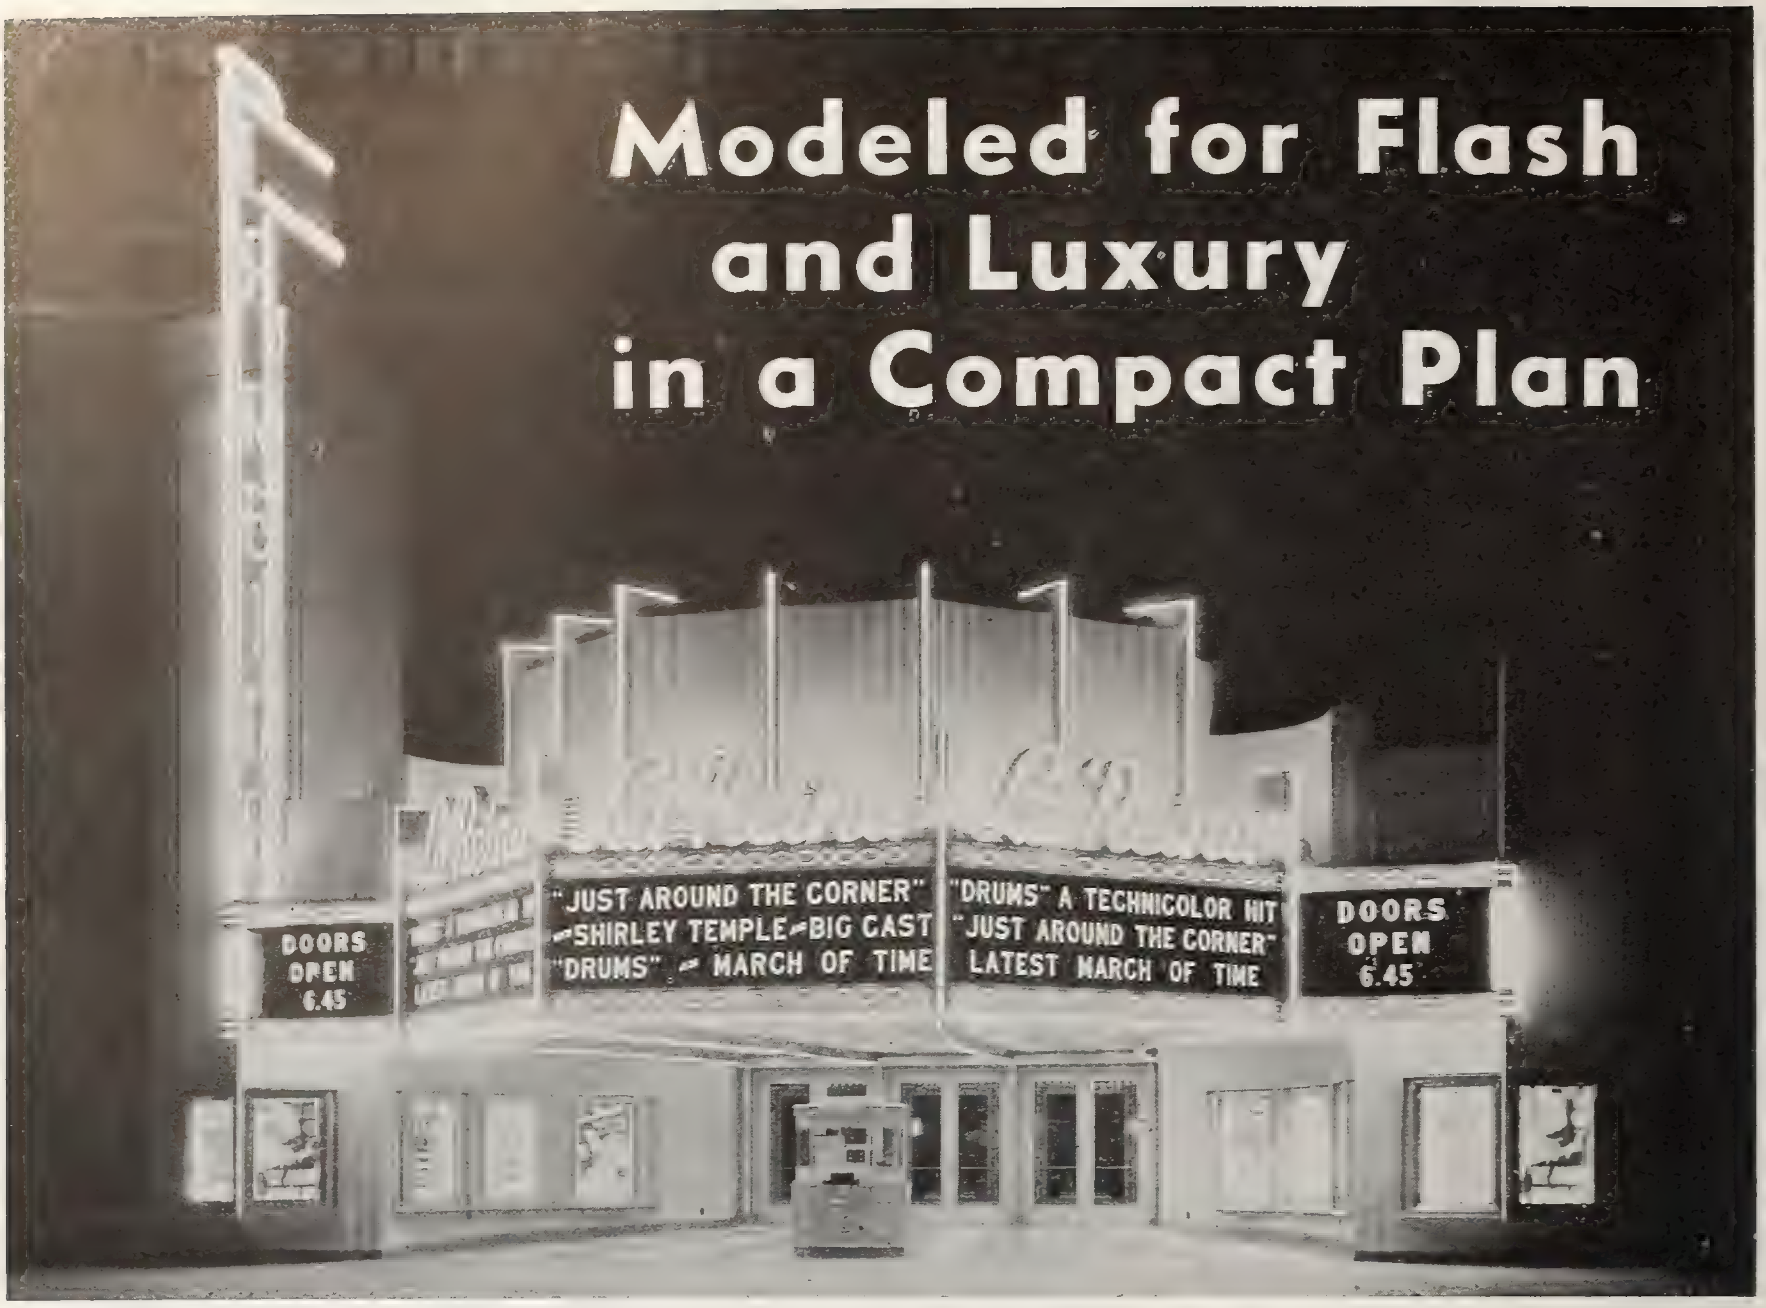
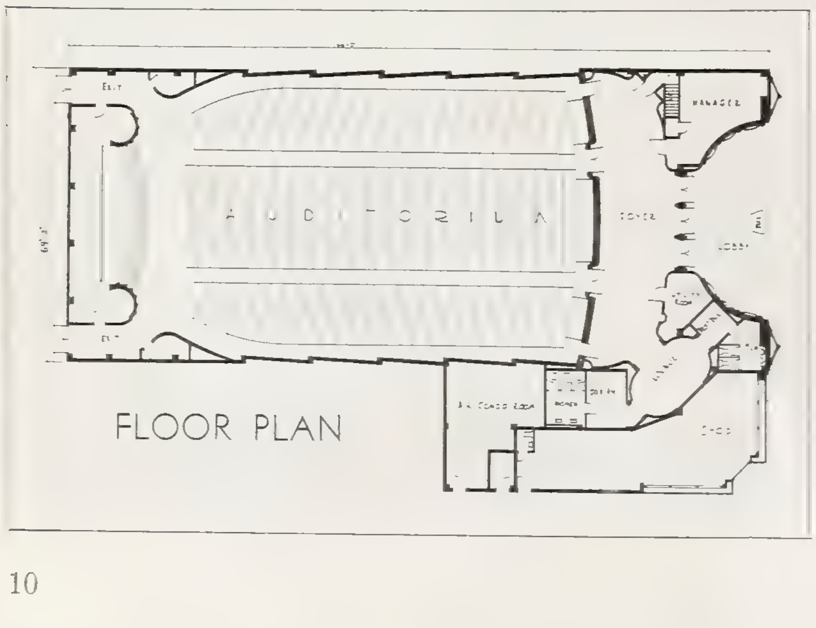
One of the two niches with fluorescent figures on opposite sides of the auditorium of the Interstate circuit's Lakewood theatre in Dallas, Tex., lighted by three 100-watt "black bulb" mercury lamps. The ultraviolet sources show in the photograph, photographic plates being extremely sensitive to ultraviolet radiation. Actually, the sources are practically invisible to the eye.

Modeled for Flash and Luxury in a Compact Plan

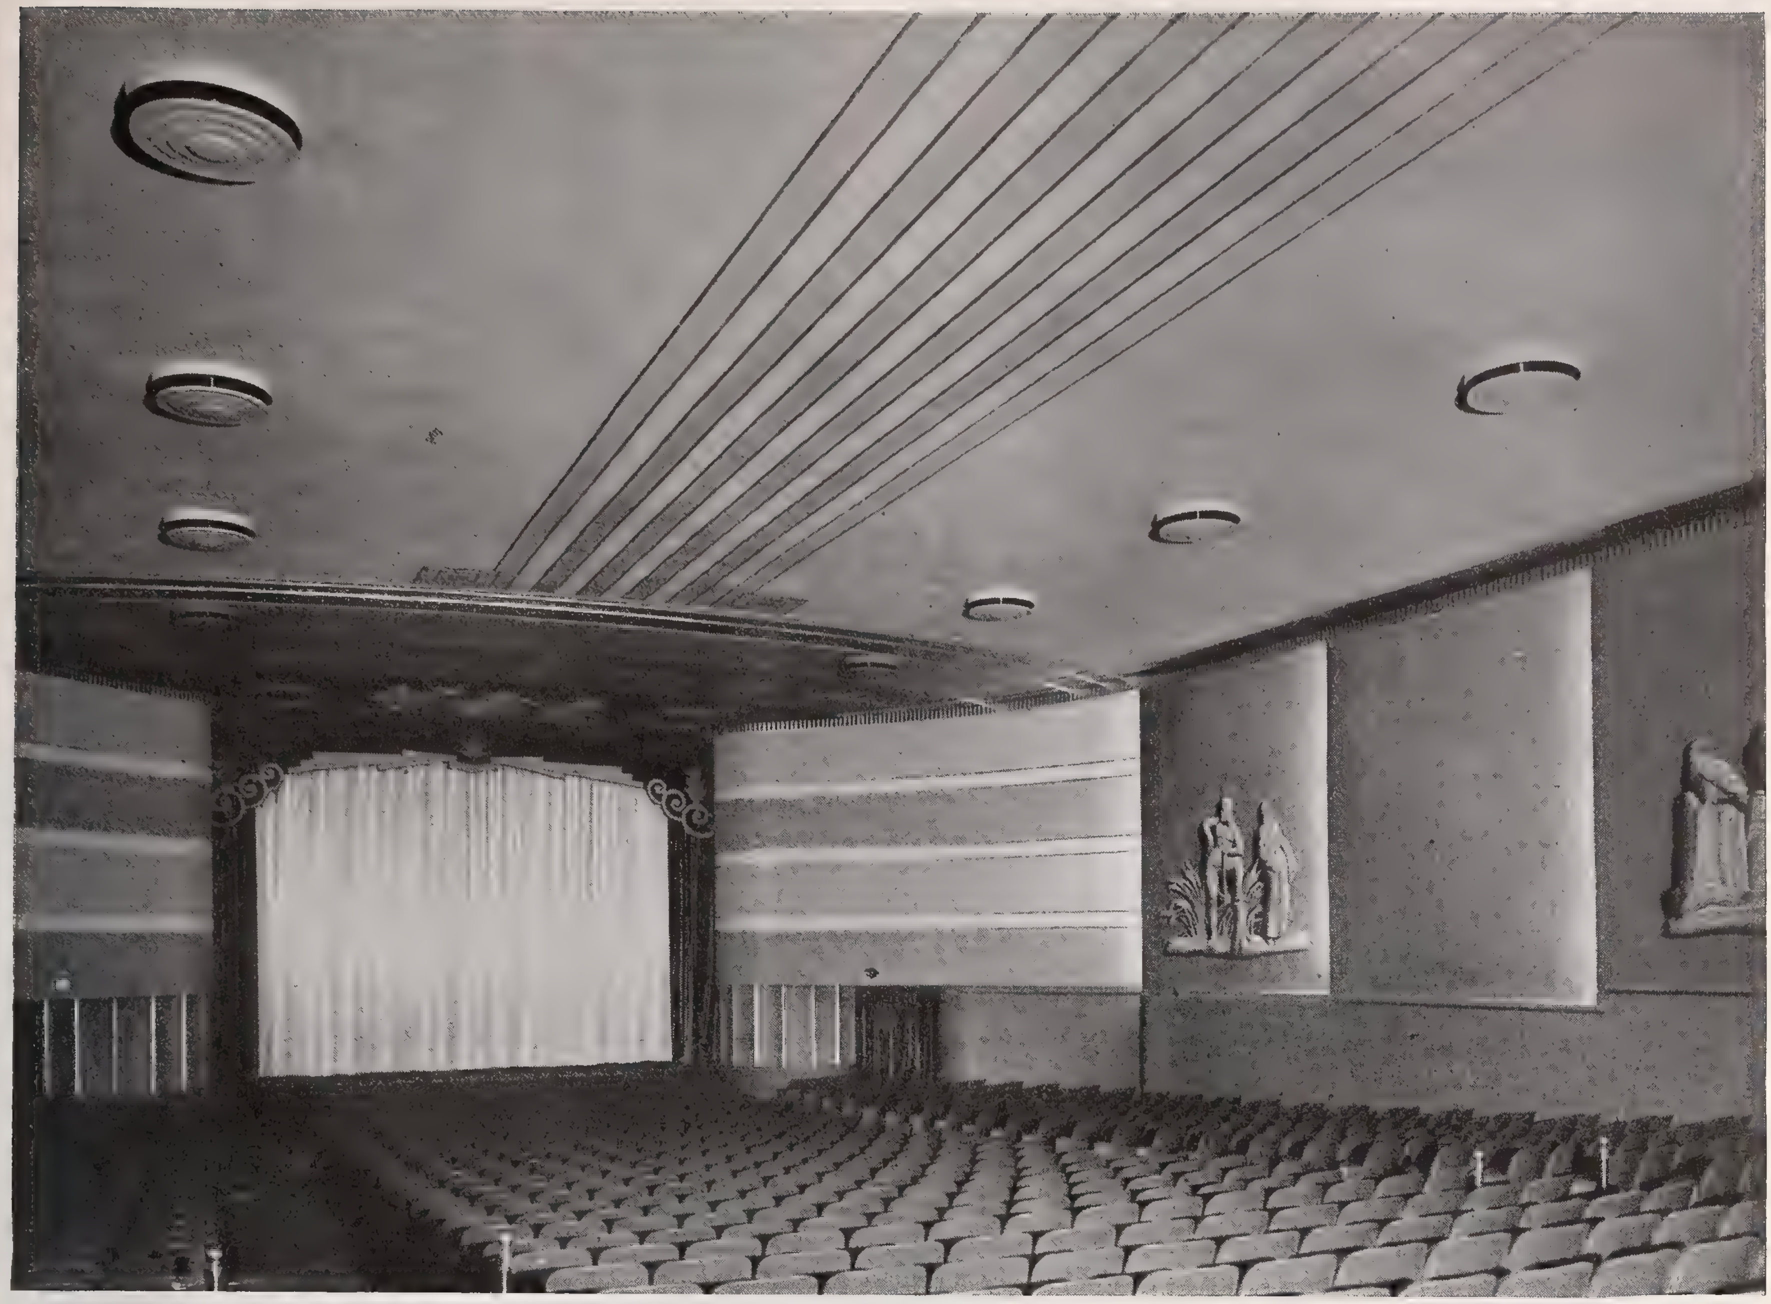


¶ One of the newest theatres on the Pacific Coast, the La Reina in Van Nuys, Calif., offers many a suggestion for the application of modern materials and principles of functional design to the peculiar needs of the theatre—a front with active "pull," an interior of imagination, yet of practical purpose. The La Reina is a Fox West Coast Theatres property designed by S. Charles Lee, Los Angeles theatre architect. Located in a new business section serving a rapidly growing residential district between North and West Hollywood (near Burbank), the La Reina, with a cubage of 310,000 and 900 seats on one floor, was constructed at a cost of $76,000 (prevailing hourly wages for common labor 62½c.; for masons, $1.50; for carpenters, $1.12½). The equipment cost $15,000.



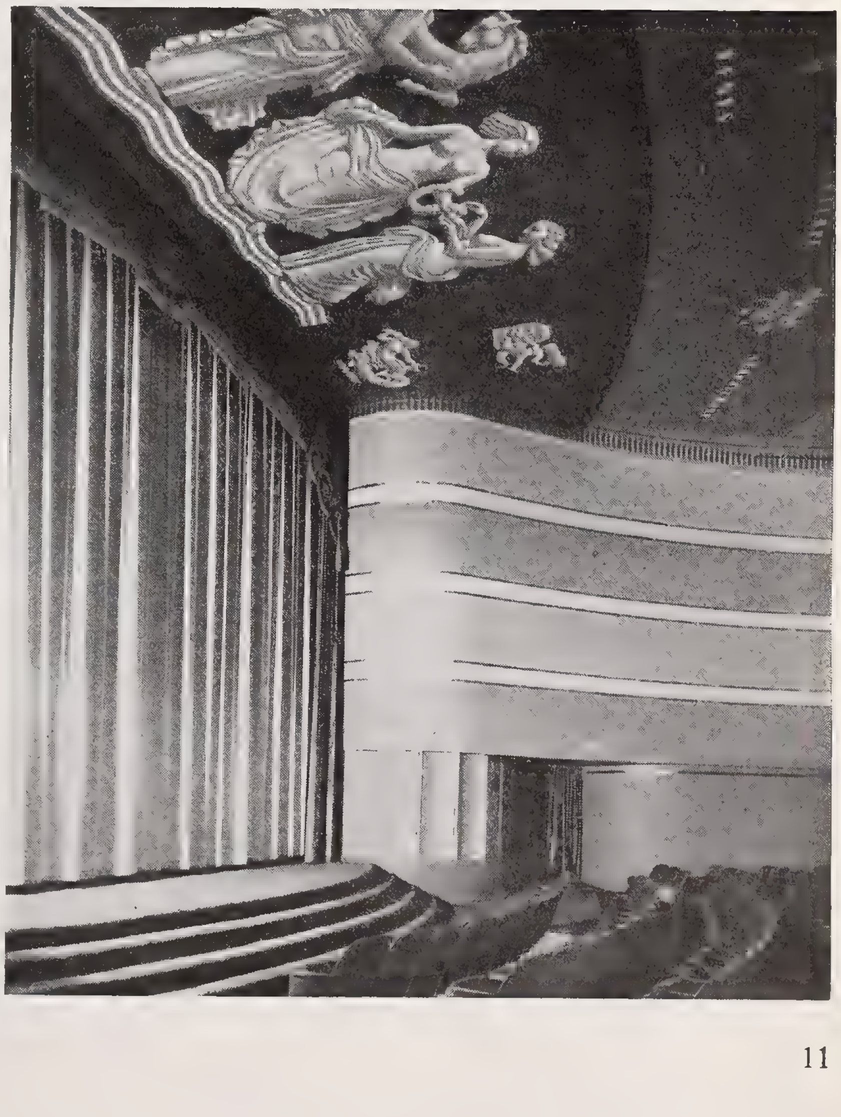
FLOOR PLAN

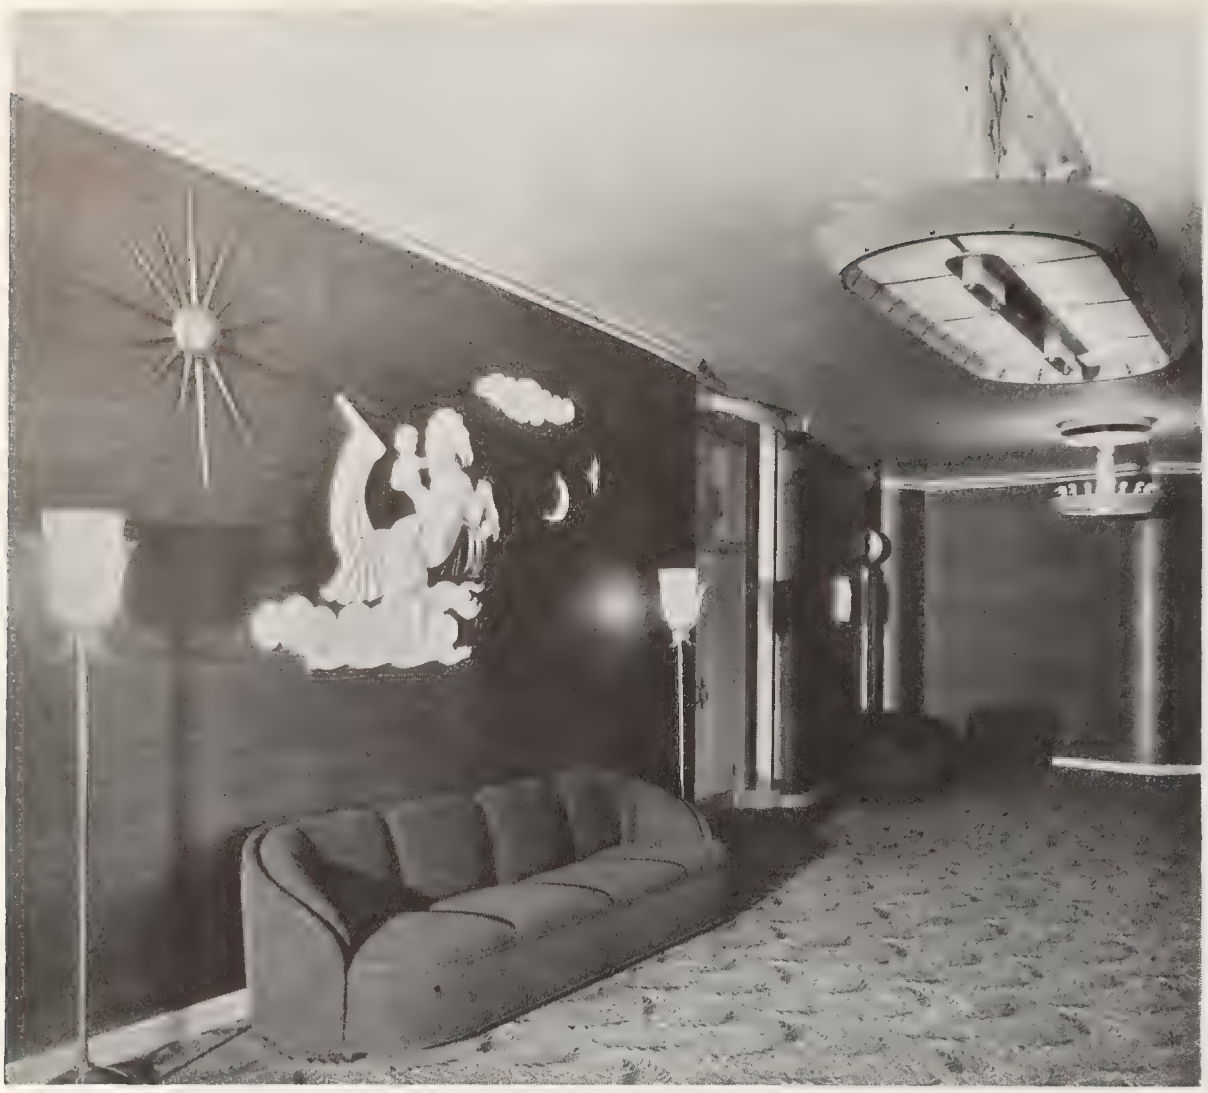
FRONT and LOBBY: Faced in cement plaster, with cement base brushcoast, the front of the La Reina is even an exaggeration of the unconventional form that a theatre facade, to achieve pronounced distinction from neighboring buildings, is allowed to take. All front elements are integrated—note how marquee completes the architectural motivation begun behind it, then is joined to the broad, deep vestibule, or lobby, itself—and this integration is directional, toward the box office and entrance, with this movement of line accentuated by a dynamic use of light. At the turret-like structure behind the marquee begin, on copper fins, strips of zeon tubing (fluorescent tube "neon"); these continue to the fascia of the marquee and turn to cross the marquee soffit, which is integral with the lobby ceiling, converging at the entrance doors. The entire display is colorful as well as animate—the vertical sign is painted cream, rose, green and gold, and lighted in green zeon on face of letters with red and blue flashing zeon border; marquee is similarly painted and carries three name signs in green zeon against lines of gold zeon, while the marquee itself is bordered in red and blue flashing zeon. Supplementary marquee soffit lighting consists in 36 recessed 150-watt floodlight lamps, and an outer border of 25-watt regular incandescent lamps. The vestibule walls, curving eccentrically to the doors leading directly into a foyer, have built-in chrome-framed display cases lighted on four sides with lumiline lamps. The doors are of wood painted blue with rose trim and paneled in etched glass. The ceiling is of plaster painted pale green, the floor of terrazzo in a two-tone pattern radiating from the doors. The ticket booth has a rose taranelle marble base with chrome snap-on mouldings. Marquee letters are of the flashed opal glass raised letter interchangeable type on opaque panels.



AUDITORIUM: This is treated in plain surfaces and solid colors. The side walls are finished in Acoustipulp laid in furred panels, the edges of which conceal light coves. These panels are painted burgundy red, and every other one is ornamented with plaster allegorical figures in ¼-inch relief; the figures are painted white with gray shading, which makes the relief appear deeper. Similar reliefs, representing Venus and the Muses, form an ornamental ceiling group just in front of the proscenium opening. The ceiling, of hard plaster, is painted sage green with darker stripings edged in gold. Both emergency and running light sources are in the five coves on each side, each cove containing 40-watt incandescent lamps on 4-inch centers, wired on three circuits—white, blue and red—with dimmer control. The rear of the auditorium is additionally lighted by six ceiling boxes, recessed flush and covered with opal glass panels, each containing one 100-watt floodlight lamp. The rear wall is divided into sections in different planes (each having specific directional characteristics with respect to sound reflection); these sections are finished in Acoustipulp on wire lath with rock wool blanket behind. The screen image is 18 feet wide; distance from the screen to last row is 116 feet, to first row 21 feet. Rows are spaced 36 inches, except at rear, where spacing increases to 38 inches. Chairs are American "Bodiform," with end standards finished in an aluminium shade with bronze stripes, and are upholstered in turquoise mohair.

PROJECTION and AIR SUPPLY: The projection room is 22 feet wide, 12 feet deep, 9 feet high; adjoining it is a room 6x14 feet for current supply and control equipment. The angle of projection is 5°. . . . The La Reina has an evaporative condenser cooling system. Heating is by auxiliary units only.





FOYER: The foyer, entered directly from the vestibule, or open lobby (see floor plan), has walls finished in an African wood veneer (Sapeli), applied with its ribbon-like grain running horizontally. The only other wall treatment consists in white plaster relief figures, and a metal star, on the wall opposite the entrance. The ceiling is of plaster, painted powder blue with terra cotta trim. The foyer carpeting, which is continuous with the carpeting of the lounge area and the auditorium (extending, as the auditorium pictures show, up the stage steps to the apron of the stage), is a Crestwood Velvet in modernization of a traditional wreath pattern, with the figures in gold against a green ground, which harmonizes in color with the light brown shade of the wall veneer, yet balances the relatively solid coloration of the entire wall surfaces. Lighting is by direct-indirect type suspended ceiling plaques of brass and opal glass, and by pedestal torchiers with bowls of gold powdered glass set between "plumes" of Lucite (the new synthetic Dupont material which curiously "bends" light). Foyer furniture is of hardwood frame construction, overstuffed, and completely covered with high-pile wine-colored mohair.

LOUNGES: Off one end of the foyer, giving access to both men's and women's rooms, is an oval-shaped general lounge with walls of Sapeli wood except for corner panels of fluted wood, painted white, which joins with white wood base and cornice mouldings to form a frame for the light brown African veneer. The ceiling is of plaster, with a moulded cornice forming a slightly stepped border, and is painted three tones of terra cotta. Lighting is by four opal glass ceiling bowls suspended on brass in groups of two. . . . The women's section off the main lounge includes a powder room, with walls finished in a light blue paper with silver figures. The ceiling is plaster, painted rose. Illumination is by a ceiling fixture consisting in an opal glass cylinder set into an etched glass bowl, ornamented with cut glass "plumes" painted coral. Cosmetic tables are of metal construction with green Formica tops; metal chairs are upholstered in red leatherette. . . . Entrance to men's toilet is through a small anteroom.

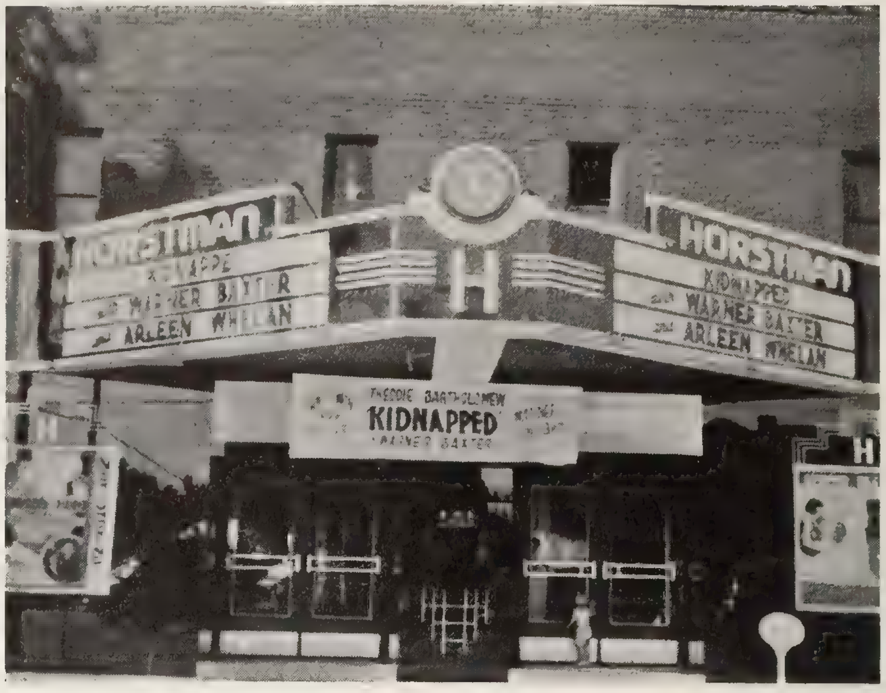
In Showbusiness Since Age of 11, She Runs the Theatre Now



"I believe I can challenge anyone of my age, which is 28, that I am about the youngest manager to have been in the business seventeen years," writes Mrs. Bernice Montgomery of Chaffee, Mo., sending pictures of the Horstman theatre which she manages. The picture of herself came later, on request. The theatre is shown before and after the recent remodeling of the front, which was given a new marquee of triangular shape with neon lighting in blue, red and two shades of green, and entrance facing of black Carrara glass. Mrs. Montgomery adds, "Chaffee has a population of 3,500 and is a railroad terminal. My father. Charles Horstman, bought the old Pullman theatre in 1921 and I sold tickets, so I have been brought up in the business. My father passed on and I have been manager for eight years."

houses in Dequeen, Ark., and the Pine at Dierks, Ark. It is planned to remodel the Gem and the Arrow theatres.

FRED MINTON has been appointed city manager for the Jefferson Amusement Company theatres in Port Arthur, Texas. Mr. Minton is succeeded as city manager for the six Beaumont houses, by IRVING COHN, who in turn is succeeded as manager of the Jefferson in Beaumont by HOLLAND SMITH, formerly manager of the Paramount at Marshall, Texas.

The Majestic in Algoma, Wis., is being remodeled into an 800 seat house with a new front, marquee and lobby. The theatre is owned by LOUIS HASSBERG.

H. J. FENTRESS, operator of the Quanah in Fletcher, Okla., recently had his theatre reseated by the Oklahoma Theatre Supply Company.

HARRY SCHWARTZ of Lexington, has reopened the National theatre in Louisville, Ky., which has been dark for some time.

The Northern Amusement Company has opened the Shasta theatre at Yreka, Calif.

The Schafer theatre in Edgerton, Mo., has been reopened by ABE SCHAFER after being dark for the past few months.

The Tivoli theatre in Chattanooga, Tenn., has reopened after being renovated at a cost of $50,000. The theatre is operated by Eastern Theatres, Inc., and is managed by EMMETT ROGERS.

D. P. BOWMAN, head of Bowman Theatres, Inc., has reopened the 320 seat Oakland in Marion, Ohio. It has been closed since last summer.

HAL HOWARD, manager of the Saenger and Rialto theatres in Hope, Ark., has gone to Milwaukee, where he has become associated with the Standard Theatres Company.

SAM PASQUA has opened his new Pasqua theatre at Gonzales, La. He has another house there, called the Gonzales.

O. L. KIRKLAND plans to remodel his Ritz theatre at Vivian, La. Cost of the project is placed at $8,000.

C. C. RHOADES, operator of the Roxy at Warsaw, Mo., has opened the New Buffalo at Buffalo, Mo.

MINNIE ROSENFELT of San Francisco, has sold the American in Portland, Ore., to EDWARD LEWIS of Salem, Ore. The new owner plans to remodel.

SAM PECHNER, for three years manager of the Warfield theatre in San Francisco, suddenly died recently on a train near Watsonville, Calif., while enroute home from a meeting of theatre executives at Los Angeles. Mr. Pechner was 56 and had been identified with the amusement business most of his life.

C. A. MACDONALD has remodeled his Southland theatre in Columbus, Ohio. Included in the remodeling was the installation of new seats, a new screen, acoustical treatment and new decorations. The floor pitch was also changed to give better sightlines. The new seating improvement involved a completely upholstered seat and back rest in rust colored Mohair. The Theatre Division of the F & Y Building Service, Columbus, had charge of the work.

S. E. PERTLE of Jerseyville, Ill., plans to renovate his Gem theatre in Beardstown, Ill., including moving the proscenium arch back to provide space for 160 additional seats. Also planned are new lobby displays, ticket booth and new furnishings.

GLEN KLOCK has opened the Klock theatre at Fredonia, Kan. The new house seats 400. Mr. Klock also operates a theatre at Neodasha, Kan.

The Fanchon and Marco interests plan to close the Mikado theatre in St. Louis, for complete modernization. The cost is put between $40,000 and $50,000. This organization recently opened the Union in the same city after the house had been closed for renovation.

JENSON VON HERBERG has opened the Liberty in Seattle, following installation of a new front and redecorating of the interior.

W. D. FULTON and others have formed the 3838 Woodland Corporation to operate the Colonial, new suburban house which replaced a theatre destroyed by fire a year ago. E. E. WEBBER, who has been running the theatre, will continue in the management of the house.

KENNETH KING, city manager for Commonwealth Theatres at Searcy, Ark., has completed remodeling of the Rialto. The changes included new auditorium seating, new carpeting throughout, installation of modern lighting fixtures throughout, and toilet facilities.

HORACE STANLEY, owner and operator of the Beebe theatre at Beebe, Ark., has installed new seating and projection equipment in that house.

COLONIAL THEATRE

RECONSTRUCTION after fire in accordance with the principles of modern architecture gained for the Colonial Theatre, Farrell, Pennsylvania, an enlarged seating capacity, far better sight lines, more efficient utilization of space available and elimination of handicaps previously imposed by unfavorable sidewalk grades.

Originally constructed for Pete Wellman of Girard, Ohio, the Colonial, now operated by Lampros Brothers, took fire December 14th, 1938. Architect Alvin Seiler of Greensburg, Pennsylvania, and John J. Sefing, a New York engineer, planned the reconstruction. Cost was $26,000, plus $20,000 for equipment. The new theatre was ready for opening after 59 working days.

Walls left standing by the fire were demolished nearly to the foundations. These, concrete piers and footings remained, and on them a steel frame, product of Pitt-Desmoine Company, was erected, and brick curtain walls added. The roof is a Robertson steel deck, finished with built-up 5-ply 25/32" asphaltic insulation board.

In the new design, space was gained by transferring the entrance from the center of the front wall to the corner, and removing the rest rooms to the basement, where they flank a comfortable lounge. An increase of seating capacity from 400 to 500 was realized by abandoning the former stadium arrangement, which gave poor sight lines and poor acoustics, in favor of a small balcony and a Schlanger reversed-incline main floor. The latter, which solved the problem imposed by steep sidewalk grades, reduced the auditorium ceiling height, and added enough ceiling height to the basement to permit installation of new heating and ventilating equipment without additional excavation.

The marquee, painted sun tan with black border, carries the theatre name in half-silhouette letters, the background for which is red, while the letters are illuminated in green fluorescent neon. A standard 8-inch two-line Wagner attraction board is used, with rose pink fluorescent neon trim and high speed flashing incandescents above and below. Incandescents are used to illuminate the soffit.

The entrance is faced with sun tan Carrara glass, black Carrara glass panels, and red glass under the ticket window, all Pittsburgh Plate Glass products, and with Alumilite trim. Alumilite and plate glass form the display cases, which are lighted on four sides with 18-inch clear lumiline lamps.

Entrance doors are of ⅞-inch wood, painted white, with plate glass panels and aluminum hardware.

The vestibule occupies one corner of the theatre to the same depth as the standee portion of the auditorium. It is rectangular in shape, with sanded plaster walls painted in horizontal bands of red, sun tan and black. The ceiling, Hushkote plaster, is painted sky blue. The floor, mat on concrete, is illuminated by a baby spot with color frame. A lighting cove, constructed of wood, wire lath and plaster, runs around the edge of the vestibule ceiling, concealing fluorescent rose pink neon to a total of 800 watts and four 18-inch lumiline lamps.

Patrons passing through the vestibule enter directly into the standee portion of the auditorium.

Auditorium and Standee Area

The standee section, and auditorium aisles, are carpeted in Mohawk Axminster, dark red, with yellow-tan, green and black figures. The stair balustrade is sanded plaster laid over wood, and covered with Pantasote leather. From a landing of the balcony stairs, an iron Jacob's ladder leads to the projection room.

The women's lounge is finished entirely in Craftex, stencilled green, with ceiling of sky blue. The auditorium carpet is used in this lounge. Lighting is provided by a ceiling fixture and two brackets. Furniture is metal; cosmetic tables, also metal, are topped with black glass.

The men's lounge is walled in sun tan glazed tile, and has a sky-blue plaster ceiling illuminated by a ceiling fixture.

Side walls of the auditorium are light green sanded plaster on wire lath, with brown Craftex wainscoting; the rear wall is Kalite, the ceiling Hushkote. All wall color schemes are brown and light green; the ceiling is painted blue.

Baby spots working on dimmers and equipped with color wheels illuminate the side walls; additional illumination is provided by exposed incandescents located along the fascia of the balcony parapet.

Chairs, box spring, plywood back, by American Seating Company, are 20 inches wide, spaced 30 inches back-to-back, arranged 430 on the lower floor, 70 in the balcony. Seat fabric is red Pantasote. End standards are finished in red, green, white and blue.

The auditorium standee rail is wire lath and plaster, covered with Craftex, and with a Pantasote leather arm ledge. The glass wind-breaker has been given Alumilite trim.

The projection room, 16 feet by 10 feet by 8½ feet, is walled with light green Hushkote, and has a ceiling of blue Hushkote. The floor is covered with green linoleum. Toilet room and rectifier room are located at either side. Projection angle is 8° to an image measuring 12 feet, nine inches by 17 feet, 7 inches.

IF THERE ARE ALWAYS VACANT SEATS IN YOUR SHOWHOUSE...

WE'D BETTER HURRY OR WE'LL HAVE TO STAND IN LINE

you need an L·O·F Theatrefront

Unless you're the only "movie" for miles around, you've got to fight for your share of the crowd.

Good pictures alone won't win "turn-away" audiences. Your theatre must stand out—must have the light and color and swank that reaches out and attracts the crowds. It must be a stopper.

Alert theatre operators everywhere are increasing audience-appeal with L·O·F colorful Theatrefronts of Glass & Metal.

These smart, modern ensembles of Vitrolite, Vitrolux and Extrudalite offer almost unlimited latitude for colorful design and interesting lighting effects. They are alive with the showmanship and eye-appeal that attracts theatre-goers.

Being entirely glass and metal, L·O·F Theatrefronts do not rust, rot or decay. There is nothing to peel or require paint. And they may easily be kept like new for years at lowest maintenance cost.

Dress up to win your share of the crowds. Find out how easily an L·O·F colorful Theatrefront can be designed to suit your needs and installed in old or new construction. Send for latest literature and the name of a nearby L·O·F distributor. Libbey·Owens·Ford Glass Company, 1310 Nicholas Bldg., Toledo, Ohio.

4 FACTORS OF A MODERN Theatrefront

1. VITROLITE—the colorful structural glass for easily cleaned, modern wallfacings, exterior and interior.
2. VITROLUX—the new L·O·F color-fused, tempered plate glass for luminous color, signs and illumination.
3. EXTRUDALITE—the modern L·O·F decorative storefront metal with patented sash that minimizes glass breakage.
4. L·O·F PLATE GLASS—famous for finer finish and clarity—for undistorted window displays.

Make certain your Vitrolite installation is made by a Franchised L·O·F dealer.

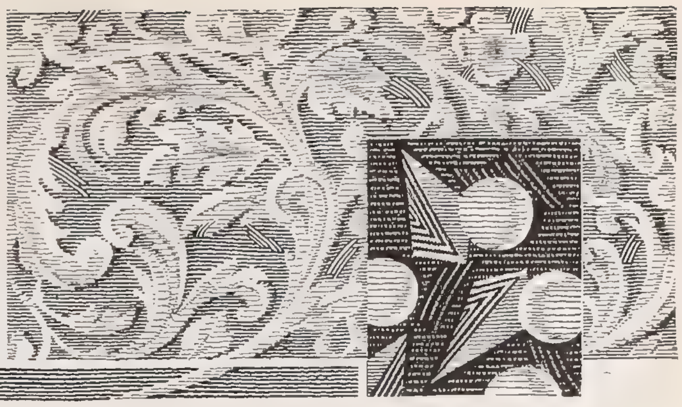
CARPET Selection & maintenance

Foyer and lounge floors, and stairways, are always conspicuous—keep them well groomed.



Basic Pattern and Color Factors

Continuing a discussion of the more practical considerations in design selection

By NORMAN PATTERSON

IN DISCUSSING this business of choosing the proper carpet design for your theatre the writer made in the April 1st issue, some general observations that were intended for theatres whose interiors had been re-altered without leaving any particular decorative style for basic guidance. Of necessity, the actual choice of carpet pattern was left to the theatre owner himself.

In those theatres that are definitely of a modern style, or can be reasonably identified with some recognized style of interior decoration, be it American Colonial or Spanish, Georgian, French Empire, etc., selection of the proper design in carpeting is comparatively simple in competent hands. It would be so in the caseof many a theatre operator or manager. However, for those not having some natural or acquired talent in interior decoration, and some knowledge of fabrics, the writer advises that the advice of the theatre architect, the carpet mills' experts and designers, or interior decorators with authentic theatre experience, be sought and given the fullest consideration before final choice is made.

It may seem odd to the average theatre operator, but English Regency and French Empire period styles, with their crystal chandeliers, etc., are again finding favor in interior decorating circles. Theatre owners with relatively old theatres styled in these modes and seemingly hopelessly out of date, may find comfort in the knowledge that should the above trends continue, there is no reason why they should not take advantage of it and, with a few minor changes, renovate their foyer and lounges in the original decorative scheme, without making extensive structural changes. The carpet manufacturers have the correctly colored and designed fabrics already available to fit these periods, and in foyers and lounges the floor covering goes a long way to effect a remodeled appearance.

¶ Range of Patterns

There are, literally, hundreds of carpet patterns in production, and thousands of designs in the files of the carpet mills, employing pattern themes that have originated in many earlier periods in history and thus providing an almost limitless range of selection.

These basic pattern motivations were and are constantly being modified to meet the tastes and requirements of certain period treatments persisting everywhere, and still to be found among motion picture theatres (for that matter, many of our strictly modern carpet patterns have been inspired by these earlier styles). The carpet patterns shown in Figure 1, for example, is anciently classical in ultimate origin, but it could be used to excellent advantage in some of our older theatres done, say, in the Empire, Regency or late Georgian style of design (either of which is readily recognizable as, in general, an ornate, heavily elegant style very popular for theatres of all kinds almost up to the time when modernism took over). This type of pattern, because of its boldness, is at its best in a large theatre and is shown here primarily as being indicative of the periods mentioned.

In Figure 2, on the other hand, we have a modernized classical design that is both dignified and exclusive in feeling. It lends itself easily to directional effects and works out very well in "class" theatres. Although apparently simple in design, its

Strictly Modern Designs

And now the definitely modern: Figures 3 and 4 are designs which are abstract and are intended for use in theatres of the latest style. Their inherent character requires that they be properly co-ordinated and harmonized with the whole interior treatment, otherwise their value as a decoration becomes severely minimized.

Both have motivations based on our modern industrial civilization and are the products of designers famous for their artistic interpretation of the tempo and temper of today.

Modernization of Traditional Forms

Modern, too, are the patterns shown in Figures 5 and 6. But here we have modifications of traditional design sources that make these carpetings well adapted to both modern and older interior styles. It is plain that such modernized-traditional patterns are peculiarly suited to theatres which, while remodeled (perhaps with a completely modernized front), still retain characteristics of their older style.

It may be noted that in the case of such partial modernizations, the pattern in Figure 5, would fit particularly well into an interior scheme originally Georgian which, while "cleaned up" a bit, yet has some of the "flavor" of its original style. Properly used, this pattern is an excellent example of a type which presents an appearance of graceful movement and, let us say, refined cordiality.

The pattern in Figure 6 presents a modern allover leaf design that is currently popular in many fields. It is unusually effective as a background where a tasteful quietness is desired without, however, creating any "dead" or "flat" floor appearance. Its use is not confined to any particular decorative method; it has extraordinary merit in the subdued and balanced arrangement of its design.

The qualified selector by indicating the period, style and color carpet pattern he desires, provides the manufacturer or supplier with enough definite knowledge to enable him to present a sufficient number of designs that will reasonably approximate the theatre's particular needs. Sometimes a slight revision in the ornamentation of color tints are required, and in certain instances an entirely new design may be developed and furnished, at no extra cost, providing the yardage specifications run 250 or 300 yards in that pattern.

It should be pointed out that different designs and colors can effectively carry the impression by use of harmonious basic styles, of a harmonious whole from one section of the theatre to another and at the same time meet the individual space, functional and lighting requirements of each area involved. The same pattern, in many instances, while effective in the foyer, is too large for proper balance in the aisles, lounges or mezzanine. On the steps occasionally, the larger patterns tend to become either dissipated or distorted, contrary to the total effect desired. These difficulties can sometimes be overcome or minimized by such use of different designs and colors in the same style family. Other methods of meeting these difficulties are:

A—To use the same design on a smaller scale for the steps and smaller areas.

B—To use the same patterns, large or small, in stronger or softer shades of the same colors to meet the effects of the different lighting encountered within, respectively, lounges, mezzanine, foyer, promenade, and auditorium proper.

Light Effect Considerations

Since in theatre practice, darker colors are often employed for the background, with lighter colors to bring out the design, the relative intensity of color under light must be considered at the outset. It is a real decorating problem in the theatre where lighting conditions vary substantially from area to area. Different colors and levels of light naturally influence the ultimate coloration of the carpet, and the coloration is the medium by which the design is formed. Variations in color shading that are important factors in the decorative and emotional effect of the carpet may become either lost or over-emphasized; the design itself may become unbalanced. The selection of carpet pattern and colors, and the determination of the lighting scheme, therefore should, in each instance, be co-ordinated.

FURNITURE • for lounge & foyer

The New Cottons Can Take It

FOR NEW OR for reupholstering modern lounge and foyer furniture, cotton fabrics now being offered are more practicable than ever.

In the new designs, rough textures and simple stripes predominate for use with modern type furniture. The patterns are not developed by differences in color alone. In most instances the contrasting color is woven into the fabric to form a different texture, and spun rayon is included in the figuring colors to "highlight" the design against its rough-textured background.

Several of the cottons offered derive their appeal through combinations of weaves and textures all in the same color, with and without additions of spun rayon, and the relief caused by the variations in surface serves, through this self-texturing, to create a natural pattern.

Texture effects in themselves are not ideal in the darker shades, owing to the fact that their natural relief pattern is lost in the relatively subdued lighting of the theatre lounge. However, where the lounge furniture is upholstered in dark solid fabrics, life and variation are provided by using a light-textured fabric such as the spun rayon in cotton chenille shown in Figure 1. Although ordinarily considered too light for theatre use, it has value when used as an accent piece.

For general purposes in a foyer or lounge in which the darker colors are used because they do not readily show dirt, the homespun cotton with simple textured horizontal stripes, as shown in Figure 2, is practicable both in wearing qualities and design.

In "class" houses employing the intimate type of modern lounge, the fabric shown in Figure 3, is satisfactory, since the medium background recognizes the usual soiling problem without sacrificing smartness.

THE WELL PLANNED STAGE

2. PROVISIONS FOR RIGGING

- The second article of a series dealing with the planning and construction of the stage of the motion picture theatre to meet all program requirements for regular or for occasional stage shows

By C. E. TOMPKINS

IN THE PRECEDING article the proscenium opening, stage floor and walls were dealt with. In continuing our discussion of the general plan of the stage area, the writer wants to refer at this point to the fact that many theatres are equipped with paint frames that hang close to the rear wall, in which case it is necessary that the rear wall be free from columns or projections that will interfere with the raising or lowering of the frame. The hanging of the paint frame does not exclude the placing of doors in the lower part of the rear wall inasmuch as the frame, when not in use, will fly above the doors and be out of the way

Height and Rigging

The height of the stage is a matter of real importance and one that is not always given sufficient consideration. Since the advent of movable scenery in the Dorset Garden Theatre in London in 1660, every conceivable method of handling has been tried, and the only method to become popular and stand the test is the perpendicular hoisting, or counterweight method, by which everything goes up and out of sight. To do this sufficient space above the stage must be provided which, in itself, is a profitable investment since this method of handling curtains adds years to their life.

By this method, the curtains always hang straight and are not wrinkled or creased, eventually producing holes, and do not drag on the floor to pick up slivers and dust. By this method they are also less susceptible to moths. Practically all theatres equipped for stage shows use this method. Where it is impractical to provide suitable headroom, a rather attractive stage can be created by the use of draw curtains on suitable tracks. Numerous attempts have been made to adapt the counterweight method to such a stage, but this always results in failure insofar as drops are concerned, since it does not permit the required changes, while the use of tracks does.

It is possible to counterweight the borderlights on such a stage, but this is hardly necessary since such a stage is usually small and the borderlights are short and light in weight and can usually be hoisted by hand, making counterweight equipment a wasteful expenditure.

To provide for stage performances a gridiron should be installed. The height of the gridiron above the stage floor is closely related to the height of the proscenium arch. Where the arch is extremely high, the curtains must be correspondingly high, and it will require equal height above the arch to fly the curtains out of sight of the audience. Many architects, however, prefer to build the arch high, especially on a wide stage, to give it a more graceful effect, then hang a wide valance in the archway to cut the proscenium opening down to a suitable height, a system that produces a very pleasing effect. When this system is used, the height of the gridiron in many theatres is based on twice the actual height that the curtains are to be raised, plus from 3 to 5 feet.

This will apply generally to all curtains except the asbestos curtain, which, to comply with the underwriters' specifications, must cover the arch proper and extend at least 2 feet above the arch. Consequently much greater headroom is required for the asbestos curtain, which is provided by placing the asbestos curtain blocks on brackets, on channels placed in the proscenium wall sufficiently higher than the gridiron to provide the required lift, the curtain passing upward through a slot in the gridiron. Since there should always be 5 or 6 feet of headroom between the gridiron and the roof, no additional expense is involved—in fact, a saving is effected, as by so doing 3 or 4 feet in the height of the building can be eliminated. By this method the weight of the asbestos curtain is carried by the proscenium wall instead of the gridiron.

The roof over the gridiron should be high enough to permit a man to work on the main gridiron, but the headblock beams may be set close to the roof, allowing only sufficient space above same to take care of the height of the blocks, plus about 6 inches. The roof must conform to the underwriters' specifications calling for ventilators, etc., and the ventilators must be equipped to operate in accordance with such specifications. The matter of conforming to the rules of the underwriters and to local fire ordinances and safety regulations is one of the utmost importance and should be entrusted to an architect, otherwise much annoyance and higher insurance rates are likely to be the result.

Fly Galleries Today

In the days before modern counterweight rigging reached its present state of perfection, all theatres were equipped with manually operated rope sets, usually consisting of three or four single lines that tied off on a pin rail. The pull end of the lines were of equal length sufficient to reach to the pin rail and tie off when the curtain was in a down position. Obviously with this system huge coils of rope would lay on the floor when the curtains were raised, and largely to get this rope out of the way and off the stage, fly galleries came into use, such fly galleries being a sort of balcony, several feet above stage, on the prompt side. Here

This sketch shows a well proportioned stage for the average theatre that has to be built between two other buildings. The wide arch is adapted to maximum seating capacity, and all space between the side walls has been used—space has not been wasted, with halls running front to back parallel to the stage. The asbestos curtain is indicated as clearing the arch when in the up position. Some States permit hanging a valance in front of the fireproof curtain, in which case the curtain need only clear the bottom of the valance. When this is permitted, the height of the auditorium can be lowered at least three feet from that otherwise required, with corresponding saving in construction and interior treatment.

the "flyman" of other days toiled and tugged with the ropes and heavy scenery in the dust and heat, always with pride in his work and bending every effort to obtain satisfactory operation. Unknown and unseen by the audience these men contributed much to the success of every production, and are entitled to much credit.

With the perfection of modern counterweight rigging, the fly gallery has almost become a thing of the past, except in the larger theatres where they are occasionally installed for the purpose of tying off secondary lines not intended to be used during the performance. The cost of construction is another contribution to the rapid disappearance of the old fly gallery, the elimination of which will more than offset the difference in the cost of modern counterweight equipment, and since modern counterweight rigging, occupying a minimum of space will handle the heavy modern scenery, borderlights and sound horns almost without effort, and can be operated from the stage floor, it is obvious that the days of "the fly gallery" are limited.

On large and modern stages, where frequent changes in counterweighting is required, it is customary to build a small and narrow platform known as a loading platform, which is attached to the gridiron for the convenient changing of counterweights and the storage of excess weights when not in use.

Planning Entire Stage

In planning a stage it is necessary to develop an individual plan for that particular stage showing the location of the asbestos curtain, switchboard, borderlights, draperies, sound horns, picture screen and, in fact, all other equipment that is to be used on that particular stage. Such plan should also show the location and type of all rigging and provide suitable space in which to install properly such rigging to obtain correct operation. The gridiron plan should also be developed at this time and should be laid out to fit such particular stage. The weight of all material hanging from the gridiron should be computed in pounds, as well as the side pull exerted by such weight, and this should be taken into consideration at the very beginning of the designing of the gridiron.

In other words, the plan should provide space and proper location for all stage equipment as it will actually operate and fit in the particular stage for which it is designed, as well as a properly laid-out gridiron.

There is a mistaken belief that a plan used on some other stage can be adapted to all stages. This idea has led to inconvenience, added expense and inefficiency of the completed stage in cases too numerous to mention. The reason for this is very obvious as there are two things that affect the design of any stage or gridiron, and that is the size of the proscenium opening and the depth of the stage. Any change in either of these two features immediately causes a complete change in the layout of the stage equipment and the gridiron and in the general construction of the stage.

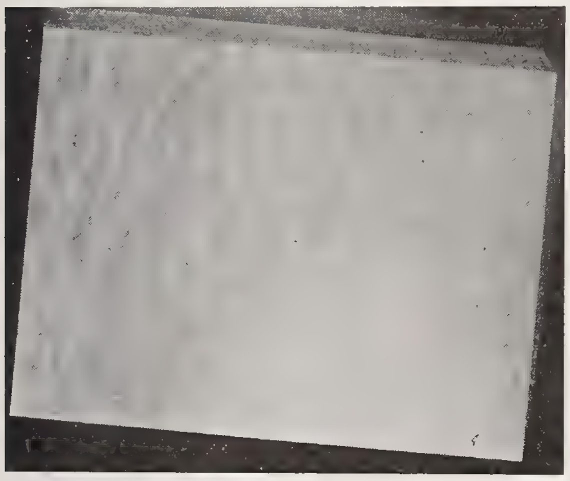
MODERN Architectural & Decorating MATERIALS

NU-WOOD STA-LITE

A NEW TYPE of wood veneer, called Sta-Lite because of the response of the surface to light, has been developed by the Wood Conversion Company of St. Paul, Minn., manufacturers of the grained Nu-Wood veneers that are widely used in the interior finishing of theatres. The new product is, indeed, called Nu-Wood Sta-Lite, being in basic composition of the same family.

Sta-Lite has a light reflection factor of better than 70%. The surface treatment is the result of a special coating, an interesting feature of which is that this extremely light surface actually turns lighter with exposure. Tests on samples exposed to sunlight and Fadometer show that the surface after exposure is enough lighter to be easily seen by the eye, according to the manufacturer. Tests made in a standard Fadometer show that exposure, the equivalent of two years, results in a definite increase in whiteness.



Sta-Lite is available in tile, plank and board, as are the other types of Nu-Wood. The product maintains the distinctive texture of Nu-Wood, and also offers a considerable amount of sound absorption and insulating value. Both in texture and color, Sta-Lite is designed to harmonize with tan and vari-colored Nu-Wood.

Additionally, a special new type tongue and groove joint is furnished on Sta-Lite tile and plank. This joint has a slightly shallower bevel which gives the board an improved appearance in design. The tongue and groove joint has been designed to give greater support in construction to adjacent pieces. Leakage of air through the joint has been practically eliminated, and slight movement is said not to be noticeable on the finished job.

Nu-Wood Sta-Lite can be cleaned with a sponge or cloth. In extreme cases, a wall paper cleaner or damp cloth may be used. If another color is desired, the surface acts as the priming coat. This, together with the mat texture, offers a surface which is easily covered with paint without showing brush marks.

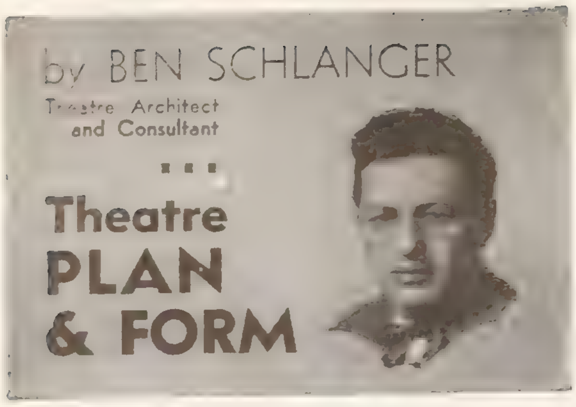
PERMACOUSTIC

A NEW ACOUSTIC treatment material of the ceramic tile type has been brought out by Johns-Manville under the name of Permacoustic, the characteristics of which include surface texture suitable for interior finishing, as well as sound absorption. Permacoustic is a combination of rock wool and clay, and this material is baked at an extremely high temperature.

Permacoustic is furnished 1-inch thick in sizes 12x12 inches, 9x9 inches, and 9x18 inches, combinations of which permit a wide variety of patterns. The 9x18-inch size is particularly applicable for wall work. The exposed edges of each size have a ⅛-inch bevel, though square-edged tile is available on special order.

This material is furnished in one standard color—the cream buff of the natural material itself—but the surfaces of the tile may be primed and spray-painted without appreciable reduction of the sound-absorbing properties, according to acoustical tests.

Light reflection tests made on Permacoustic, in its natural color, have shown a reflection factor of 60%. Moisture has no deteriorating effect since it is a ceramic product. It may be cleaned by means of a brush, vacuum cleaner or damp sponge. The use of a calcimine brush with soap and water is also successful.



THE TYPES OF theatre floor slopes which can be designed to function so as to provide unobstructed and comfortable vision of the motion picture vary as follows:

- A. Downward only.
- B. Downward and then upward.
- C. Very slightly downward and very slightly upward (essentially flat).
- D. Upward only.

The slopes in all cases are non-uniform, having a change of rates of pitch for every row and the total amount of slope will vary according to the seating depth. Quite a few motion picture theatres have now been constructed in which it has been proved that it is entirely unnecessary to resort to use of the completely downward type of floor slope. Listed below are many considerations affecting floor slope design which, when studied, show the advantages of floor slope types other than the completely downward type:

1. The existing levels and contours of the property.
2. Whether or not, upper levels of seating are to be incorporated in the plant.
3. The total number of rows in the seating depth.
4. Degree of clearance of view of the picture (first- or second-row vision).
5. Placing of seats in stagger or non-stagger system.
6. Minimization of degree of floor pitches to conform with building laws and to avoid hazardous access to seats.
7. Effect of floor slope on total cubic volume of structure as it may help to reduce construction costs.
8. Advisability of keeping the seating area from rising to an extremely high level relative to the height of the screen.
9. Ability to work within limited vertical dimensions in existing structures.
10. Control of vertical dimensions to best suit the requirements of acoustics.

A theatre having all the seats on one floor, with a limited seating depth of twenty rows, and with the ground sloping rapidly away from the street building line, may without any serious disadvantages have a completely downward floor slope, but a theatre requiring a greater seating depth, an upper level of seating, to be erected on ground which slopes upward away from the street, or to be built on flat ground, need not have a completely downward slope to permit good sightlines—indeed, in my opinion, the floor under these latter ground conditions should not have a completely downward slope if certain disadvantages are to be avoided.

These columns are regular features of Better Theatres dealing with methods by which the theatre may be planned as efficiently as possible for the exhibition of motion pictures. Both Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Potwin are consultants on inquiries from readers seeking counsel on the planning of theatres.

Chair Back Factor In Spacing of Rows

MANY inquiries recently received refer to the question of proper back-to-back distance between rows of auditorium chairs. Building laws, in most instances, state the minimum for this measurement. A distance of 30 inches is the minimum stipulated in some cities, but one of 32 inches is the more common distance required by building codes.

Where back-to-back spacing of 30 inches is permissable, and the exhibitor chooses to use such a minimum spacing, it is necessary to be sure to do two things: (1) To limit the thickness of the back of the chair to ¾-inch or less, and (2) to use a minimum tilt for the back of the chair.

Use of thicker or more titled backs with 30-inch spacing, makes it most difficult to pass between rows. Yet the tilt of chair back required for 30-inch spacing is insufficient for comfortable posture, so 30-inch spacing should be avoided whenever possible.

Even when 32-inch spacing is used, it is advisable to keep chair back thicknesses down to 1 inch, and use a maximum chair back tilt of 16½° off the vertical plumb line. If chair back thicknesses and tilts greater than those just mentioned are used, the back-to-back measurement should increase equal to the amount of the extra chair back thickness and to the amount of extra overhang to the tilt.

There probably has not been enough general study of this matter, inasmuch as the back-tilt factor is not taken into consideration, as a rule, when row spacing is determined. Inquiries from exhibitors show this consistently. After all, row spacing merely refers to what provisions we make for convenient passage of patrons in front of those seated, and how far the chair-back comes into this area must affect our calculations.

Back-to-back measurements ought to be increased above 32 inches when seats are placed on sharply pitched floors or on stepped platforms, as on a balcony or mezzanine, owing to the fact that the overhang of the chair backs in these instances occurs at a low and encroaching position.—B.S.

WE SHALL interrupt the acoustical study of rear wall design, temporarily, to discuss a question which has characterized quite a few inquiries of late. This question, in effect, is: "What shall I buy in acoustical materials?"

Every theatre presents its individual problem in acoustical treatment as well as in acoustical design. For this reason, no one type of material will fulfill the needs of every case. Acoustically, the selection of materials will depend upon:

(1) The construction of the theatre (whether the surfaces are of furred or solid construction.)

(2) The cubic-foot volume per seat.

(3) The sound absorption qualities of chairs, carpet and other furnishings.

The distribution of material is primarily a function of shape. In many theatres requiring treatment, the best results are obtained by grading the sound absorption in efficiency, with materials used for the rear surface having a relatively high acoustical value, and those used for the side walls and ceiling having a more moderate value. Of course, both materials should combine in total efficiency to fulfill specific needs.

In selecting materials, do not compare their sound absorption qualities merely on the strength of their coefficients at 512 cycles per second, nor on their average noise reduction values.

Today sound systems are efficient in their response over an extremely wide range of frequencies; consequently, in order to avoid "boomy" effects at the low frequencies, or the bass, and "kickbacks" of the "s's" and the "th's," or the very high frequencies of speech, the materials selected for treatment must have the correct amount of absorption for all frequencies.

Do not be guided by appearance alone and select a material principally because it seems to blend well with the decorative scheme you have in mind—that is, if acoustic considerations are of first importance. That material may not have either the type or quality of absorption required.

First, compare the acoustical, structural and decorative qualities of several different materials, then base your final decision on the material or combination of materials which affords all, rather than only a part, of the acoustical and decorative result you desire.

of the editor

GIVING NEW LIFE TO THE THEATRE THOUGHT TO BE HOPELESSLY OUTMODED

MORE than a few theatre owners have quite a cost problem to play with in contemplating remodeling. These especially are those who have houses chock full of decorative doodads and gilt so integral with the interior construction that an attempt to modernize the theatre at a reasonable cost seems hopeless. Moulded panels and ornamented pilasters, heavy cornice structures, domed ceilings, et cetera, some of them by now all mixed up with acoustic materials put in when sound came along to change (like the city slicker who sold Pa his first car and stayed to marry the daughter) the simple ways of us moving picture folks. The "atmospheric" theatre particularly has left its hangovers. "A night in Spain, with twinkling stars overhead"—in Kalamazoo, this was, or maybe Keokuk! Only half the show was on the screen. (And did that stuff cost dough!)

The only effective treatment for many of these hangovers is a strong purge—rip them out. But the worst of the erstwhile gorgeous scenes can usually be got rid of for little money; then let the rest remain. The walls may not be in a condition to make mere painting feasible; then cover them with a material like wood veneer, in as simple, as neutral a treatment as possible. Install new auditorium seating, new aisle carpet, a few plain lighting fixtures, and you will probably find that the hopeless case is sitting up and taking nourishment.

But here's the point: In trying to salvage a theatre of this character without spending more than its location warrants, one cannot be guided by the idea that to make it attractive today one must go violently "modern" (or do you prefer moderne?). The public isn't much interested in the details of theatre style. It is the whole environment that counts. If this is cheerful, stimulating to the senses (without, however, administering an overdose), clean, tight at the seams, easy to get around in, comfortable to see a show in, you have about half the bill filled.

The other half, when the situation means spending either relatively little money or none at all, can often be pretty well supplied—certainly enough to keep the property in fairly profitable operation—by cleaning out the excess decorative rubbish, covering up with paint or veneers the holes thus made, and installing furnishings in a style more or less neutral—that is, of forms, materials, colors, patterns that do not clash with the original style of the interior. Carpeting, foyer and lounge furniture, lighting fixtures are readily obtainable in styles and materials that are beautiful in any age. After all, a roast of prime ribs was delicious before we knew it had vitamins, and we're still having wars.

Catalogs, if they are more than mere mailing pieces, have definite value to the person who has use for the products they describe, and a file of them will often prove a time-saver. (And of course Sears-Roebuck has amused a nation.) It is not a regular thing, however for a catalog to be something of a text book, and that is why we take this occasion to refer to the booklet on cooling equipment, and related apparatus, issued by the National Theatre Supply Company. The writers of this catalog have attempted much more than a recital of the virtues of certain equipment. They have sought to give the layman some understanding of the principles of air cooling, dehumidification and many a related matter.

We particularly like the way they have gone about defining terms used in air-conditioning engineering, dealing with matters sometimes regarded (though obviously not by us) as much too tech-ni-cal "for the intelligence of motion picture theatre operators." What is meant by "wet bulb" temperature, "dew point" temperature, and so on, is explained with a full appreciation of the fact that the theatre operator and manager do not specialize in air-conditioning technics, yet want to know enough about its fundamentals to buy smartly and supervise efficiently the equipment involved.

We began browsing through the National catalog in an idle moment. The moment was not spent idly. The theatre executive and engineer should find it a helpful source of information which, on some occasion, can stand them in good stead.

Just What Are We After In Theatre Air-Conditioning?

¶ The first of a series of plain talks on the meaning and attainment of "breathing comfort"

LET'S TAKE a man in Boston. The month is July, and the day has been particularly uncomfortable. At 5 o'clock he leaves his business for home, and on the way he buys a newspaper. Everyone is saying, "Whew, isn't this a hot one?" and the man we are hypothetically observing at the moment looks in his newspaper for the official weather report. He finds his suspicions emphatically confirmed—it is a hot day! At 3 o'clock the official temperature was 92°, let's say.

Let's also consider a man in Dallas, Tex., on the same day. He finds, we can logically suppose, that the official temperature in Dallas at 3 o'clock was 102°. Need that mean he was more uncomfortable on this day than the man in Boston? Not at all.

Temperature and Comfort

In point of fact, the official temperature reports are really meaningless. They are ordinary thermometer—dry bulb—readings. Down through the years we have become accustomed to thinking of temperature by itself, whereas it is only one aspect of actual air conditions affecting our comfort. Alone, it is totally without meaning so far as comfort is concerned. Inasmuch as the general public is interested in temperature reports only in terms of physical comfort, there is no good reason for newspapers to print them. Ordinary thermometer—dry bulb—temperatures have significance only when considered, and re-valuated, in relation to the amount of water vapor in the air, and the rate of air motion.

It is quite possible—and, indeed, this often has happened—for our man in Dallas to be far less uncomfortable with the official temperature 102° than our man in Boston at 92°.

To appreciate just what we are after in theatre air-conditioning, we must think of comfortable temperature only as that temperature which is determined by the amount of sensible heat in the air, the amount of water in the air, and the amount of motion the air has. No one of these factors means anything, so far as comfort is concerned, by itself. All three must be figured together.

And it is to create a certain air condition with respect to all three—with all three of these factors co-ordinated—that we install and operate air-conditioning equipment in theatres.

These factors and their relationship are well known to theatre engineers, of course; but in general they appear to be fumbled around a good deal despite elaborate discussions of them. As a theatre operator knows what he is after in projection, and essentially how to get it, so he should have a clear understanding of just what he is after in his efforts to give his patrons "breathing comfort."

Body Action and Air

What do we mean by "breathing comfort"? Let's look at the human organism in its relation to atmospheric conditions, for it is the human body that we are dealing with when we buy and operate air-supply and air-treatment apparatus.

Our bodies are engines which run on certain chemical substances (food), water and air. The combustion of this fuel is heat. Heat is energy. This heat is partly used up in living (in children a lot of it is required for growing). Some of the heat—the amount depending upon the amount of fuel we have taken in and the amount of our activity—is stored up in the body. When we have more heat than we need, we get rid of some of it.

At least our bodies want to get rid of this surplus heat. Whether they can or not depends upon the condition of the air we are in—its condition as determined by its temperature, its water content, its motion.

If air conditions are right, our bodies can get rid of the surplus heat by carrying it to the surface of the skin, where it escapes (1) by radiation—it is attracted, so to speak, by the layers of air next to our body that are cooler than our skin is; and (2) by evaporation—the moisture from the pores of the skin is evaporated, and evaporation uses up heat; and both of these processes are promoted by air motion.

To carry this description a step further: The efficiency of the body (and our comfort is, in general, merely a reflection of that efficiency) is determined, so far as its breathing is concerned, by the difference between our specific internal heat of combustion (using up our fuel), which is 98.6° Fahrenheit, and the external average of the skin temperature, which is something like 88° F. for the whole skin surface. This is the prime level of surface body temperature at which we have the greatest bodily efficiency, and for our purposes here it may be called the comfort zone of the skin.

For example, if the air has the proper warmth, in balance with proper water content in direct relation to that degree of warmth—relative humidity—and similarly in balance with air motion, we can go practically nude and be comfortable. Unfortunately, from the point of view of "breathing comfort," custom in most parts of the world decrees that even on the hottest summer day, we must wear some clothing when we emerge from our homes. Even the lightest summer clothing will equal from 6° to 8° retention of bodily heat. To be comfortable, we seek air conditions that balance this heat retention.

Since we are most comfortable when the skin has an overall temperature of about 88°, an ordinary thermometer temperature of from 80° to 82°, or thereabouts, is indicated to overcome the heat retention of even the lightest summer clothing. But, as we have seen, mere provision of such a temperature gets us what we want only to the extent that there is a proper amount of water in the air, and proper amount of air motion, for that particular temperature.

In other words, what we want to produce in the theatre is a specific effective temperature.

Effective temperature will be dealt with in following articles.

Boiler Maintenance Methods

SPRING IS AN excellent time of year for heating plant inspection. How has it come through the winter? What repairs will have to be made before it is ready to resume operation in the fall? Such inspection is in order now whether the plant is to be entirely shut down or held ready for occasional operation as air-conditioning may require.

This is particularly the time of year to get rid of all boiler scale. If the plant is being shut down, scale which has accumulated during the season should not be allowed to remain.

Scale should be kept to a minimum amount at all times, of course. Scale forming solids normally found in boiler water are divided into two classes, those with a low solubility and those which are highly soluble. In the first group of low solubility solids are found calcium sulphate, calcium carbonate, calcium phosphate, calcium silicate, magnesium silicate and the aluminum silicates. The most common and most objectionable is calcium sulphate. This causes a hard flint like scale which thickens until tube failure occurs.

Calcium carbonate and calcium phosphate do not usually deposit on the metal, but instead form a sludge, which may debut instead form a sludge.

Most boiler scale is comprised of various combinations of solids. Therefore it represents a complex problem. To try to treat the water chemically in an attempt to remove scale strictly through the action of chemical compounds, would require, as can readily be seen, a group or combination of chemical compounds, would require a combination of chemicals to offset this complex group of solids.

In the large plants of power stations, etc., where softeners, deaerators, evaporators, etc., are in use, and where there is normally a chemist assigned to run the feed water control system, the greatest part of the scale problem is overcome by the external treatment of the water in the various equipments with which these plants are provided. But for those of us who do not have such equipment and who must rely on internal treatment of the water, there are a few simple rules to keep constantly in mind if we are to check scale formation.

Reducing Scale Formation

First, the intelligent use of the blow-down (blowing out of the sludge and solids at the bottom of the boiler by steam pressure, with which heating plant engineers are familiar). Proper blow-down means that concentration of solid matter is kept to the lowest amount possible and better steaming results. Excessive blow-downs, however, are expensive, while inadequate blow-downs mean accumulation of solids, the possibility of foaming, and reduced evaporating efficiency. A regular standard blow-down schedule is therefore a first rule.

Second, a regular schedule of boiler washouts. Boilers permitted to remain in service too long lose efficiency. A definite schedule should be followed, and the length of time between washouts will depend to a great extent on operating conditions. Even though scale does not present a major problem in your plant, regular scheduled washouts and inspections enable you often to apprehend trouble.

Third, in conjunction with the above, regular inspections should be made at each washout in addition to your regular insurance inspection. Faulty tubes, sludge deposits, small burns can always be corrected are neglected.—A. W. Pugsley.

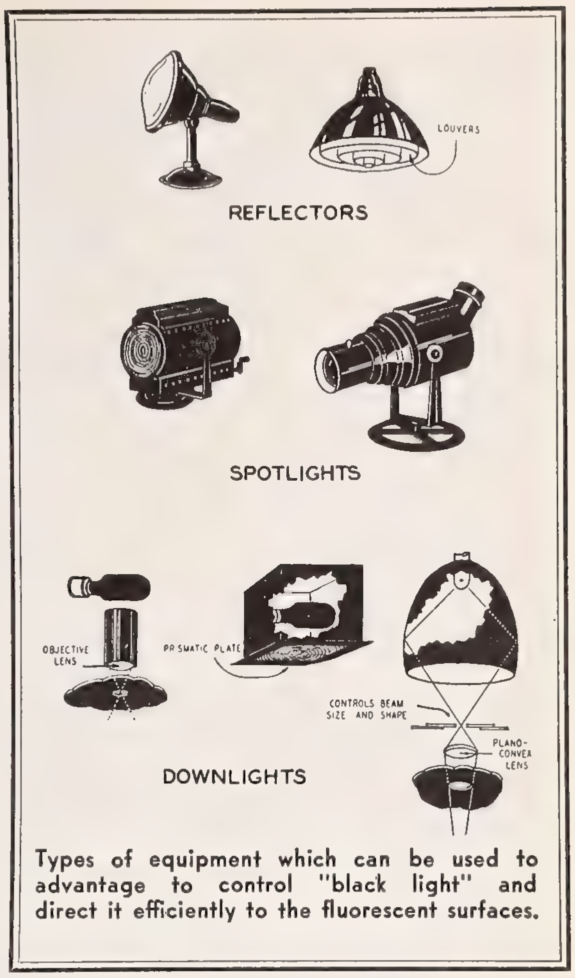
LIGHT

FOR VISION DECORATION AND SELLING

"... light is a first tool of showmanship."



Types of equipment which can be used to advantage to control "black light" and direct it efficiently to the fluorescent surfaces.

"Black Light": Another Tool of Showmanship

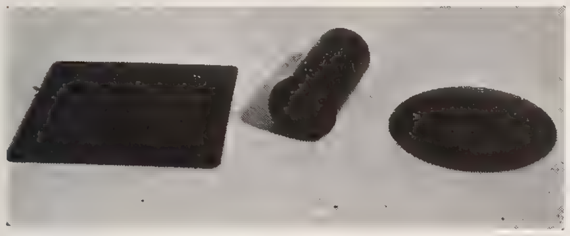
factory "black light" renditions varies considerably with the equipment used, whether it directs the rays directly and efficiently to the fluorescent materials, or whether they are spread to the surroundings and absorbed. The argon glow lamp is suited only to energizing of areas of 1 to 1½ square feet at 1½ to 2 feet distance. The table below gives an approximation of the required watts per square foot (provided by mercury sources) needed for various applications based on efficient utilization of the "black light":



Types of red-purple "black light" filters to screen out visible light.

Watts Per Square Foot for "Black Light" Applications

Advertising effects with considerable surrounding light	5 to 10
Advertising effects with fairly dark surroundings	3 to 6
Decorative treatments	2 to 4
Auditorium treatments for "picture" lighting	1 to 2

Lobby and Foyer Poster Displays

Processes have been developed for applying fluorescent materials to standard theatre posters such as the 40x60-inch size so popular for theatres. One of the accompanying illustrations shows a free-standing display unit developed to use these posters to good advantage. The lighting equipment for these luminous posters consists of the following:

1. A 250-watt capillary mercury lamp in a semi-concentrating oxidized aluminum reflector with sleeve-type UV filter and transformer.
2. A semi-concentrating type reflector designed for 150-watt filament lamps and fitted with medium orange gelatine color filter, operated by an "on-and-off" flasher.

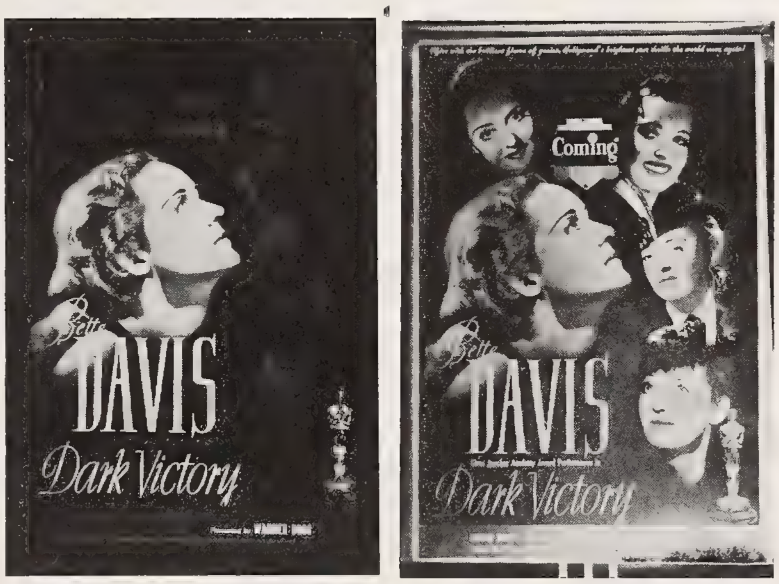
Lighting Fluorescent Poster

The operation is as follows: The mercury lamp is kept on at all times, for it takes time to start and warm up. The incandescent lamp is flashed on and off at intervals of approximately one second. This cycle is more or less critical, depending upon "spilled light"; as this spilled light increases, it is essential to have a short fluorescent "on" period with a quickly read message. This does not permit the eyes to adjust themselves to the spilled light and the fluorescent message stands out accordingly.

When the filament lamp is on, it washes out the "black light" effect and illuminates the complete poster in a warm inviting color. When the filament lamp goes off, the "black light" effect stands out in startling relief; usually just the most important illustration and message of the poster is treated with fluorescent materials. For lobbies, the 150-watt lamp is desirable, possibly even with the color screen removed. For foyers 60-, 75-, or 100-watt lamps (with a socket extension) are quite adequate.

Luminous Murals

Because the ultraviolet is invisible, equipments for illuminating murals on the side walls of the auditorium can be placed to much better advantage than it would be possible to place conventional equipments producing visible light. Filament sources are usually required to be concealed in restricted spaces near the mural, with the result that the mural is so unevenly lighted that it often loses its identity. Brightness near the light sources also gets out of hand and may become glaring.



Example of a poster treated with fluorescent materials, shown (left hand) with "black light" only, and with visible light washing out the fluorescent effect. This poster was displayed in Warner's Hippodrome theatre in Cleveland. Such fluorescent posters are adapted to foyers and standee areas as well as lobbies, for they have a striking effect.

Light Sources and Their Application

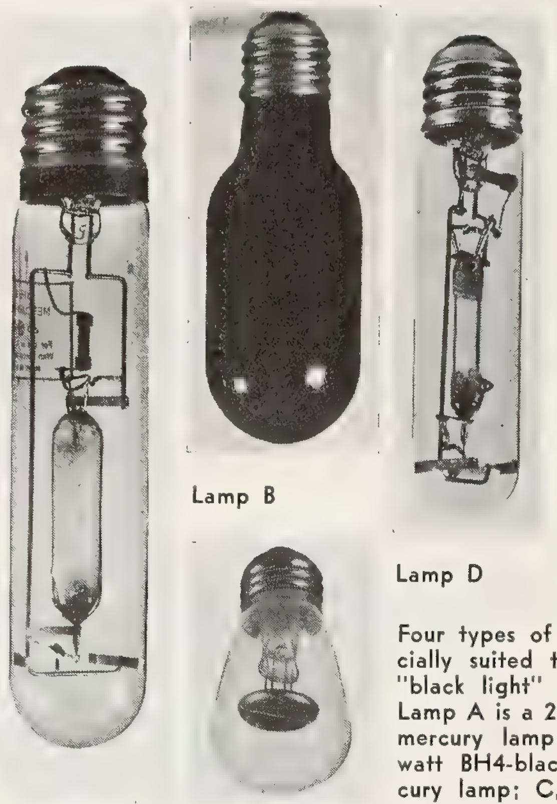
For fluorescent lighting, concentrating equipments of the downlight type, equipped with 100-watt or 250-watt mercury lamps and ultraviolet filters, may be placed in the ceiling at a distance out from the mural of approximately one-third its height. One to two watts per square foot should provide a satisfactory brightness, which can produce adequate illumination throughout the auditorium for "picture" presentation.

The murals may be treated in almost any color, though a moderate use of color is likely to prove most satisfactory. Extreme contrasts should be avoided, and the murals should preferably be completely luminous. This is exactly the opposite procedure to that which proves effective for advertising. In this case, too, the murals must be treated so that they will still appear pleasing when the regular auditorium lighting is brought up during intermissions. It is, of course, practicable to have a fluorescent design superimposed on the mural, making it possible to obtain entirely different decorative effects under the two types of lighting.

There has been much discussion regard-

Example of a "black-lighted" mural effect (this one in a restaurant, but indicating the possibility of such applications to theatres). In this display, Nicotubes were used throughout to supply the "black light".

ing the advisability of having some illumination around the screen to lessen the harsh contrast so that the screen light will be more comfortable to the eyes. To accomplish this with filament lighting is somewhat difficult because of the possibility that some light will spill onto the screen itself. Here again the projection of invisible ultraviolet to the screen surroundings which have been treated with fluorescent materials has the advantage of being free from visible light. One watt per square foot should be adequate for this purpose, providing a slight luminous effect that should prove an aid to screen vision.



Four types of lamps especially suited to controlled "black light" applications. Lamp A is a 250-watt AH5 mercury lamp; B, a 100-watt BH4-black bulb mercury lamp; C, a 2½-watt argon glow lamp; and D, an AH4 mercury lamp.

The 2½-watt argon glow lamps may be placed in the end standards of the rows of seats to provide ultraviolet aisle illumination by activating fluorescent materials painted on the end standards.

Decorative Treatments

For decorative treatments in general, at the rear of the auditorium, in the foyer, rest rooms, etc., ultraviolet has many possibilities. Some of them are as follows:

Fluorescent figures, free standing or in niches.

Fluorescent flowers that glow in colorful beauty.

Painted fluorescent designs of various kinds, walls, sky ceilings, coves, etc.

Fluorescent glassware worked into displays.

Fluorescent cloth, drapes, etc.

Painted fluorescent advertisements that appear and disappear.

The utilization of these "intriguing" effects to advantage depends upon the ingenuity of the theatre owner, manager, display man, architect. Fluorescense offers an interesting new tool, but like all tools it must be handled skillfully to get the best results. A small beginning, a simple effect here and there, will reveal the versatility of this new medium and suggest innumerable ways in which "black light" can be used for beauty and profit.

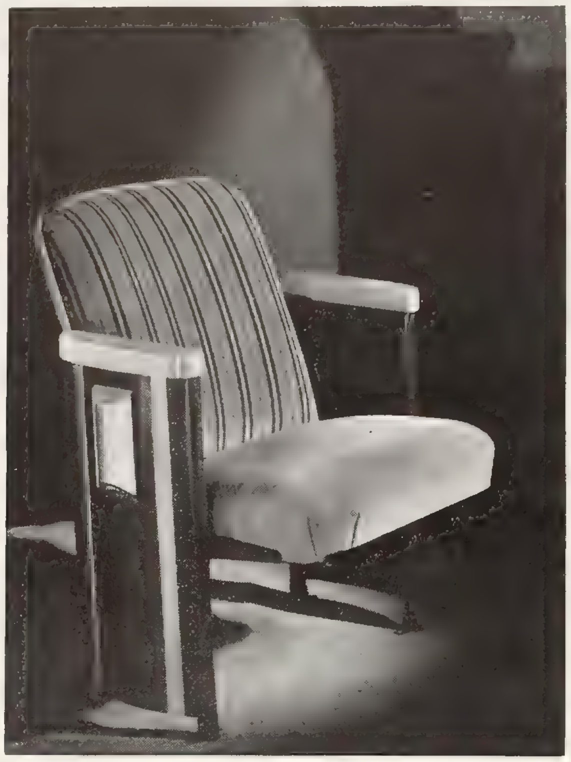
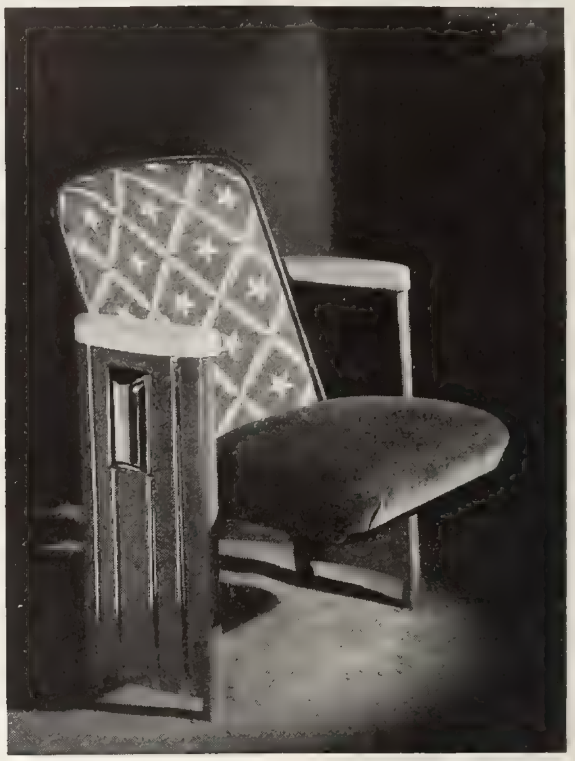
NEW MODELS IN LOWER PRICE GROUP





PICTURED above are auditorium chairs made in two of the standard designs now available in new Heywood-Wakefield models which have been developed especially to interest the theatre operator whose new project or remodeling must be carried out on a modest budget.

All of the models in this new group are of the same general design, but eight end standard treatments have been provided. The standards in each case are stamped from cold-rolled steel (the center standards also are steel) and have rounded edges.

Seat bottom panels are of steel, smooth finished, and hinges also are steel.

The chairs shown are representative of the available designs. In the left-hand chair the stripes toward the sides of the standard are raised ribs of the stamping itself, given a light satin finish, while the aisle box is similarly treated. The standard of the right-hand chair, however, has bright metal pieces attached to the stamping. Arm rests follow the curvature of the standard in streamline effect. The steel back panels are edged in a rounded metal piece welded to the panel so as to be substantially a part of it.

Either spring or padded backs are available, while seats are of coil spring type.

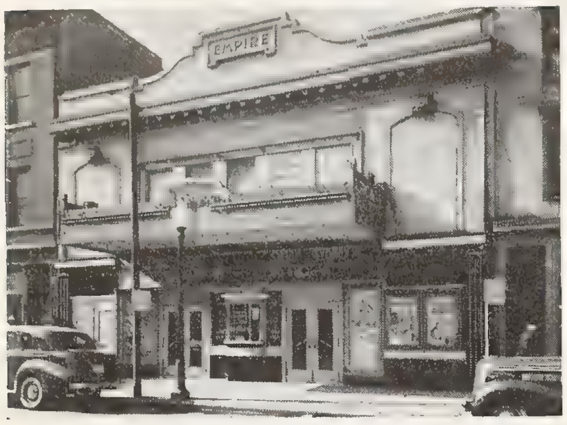
Empire in Cincinnati before and after remodeling.



A REMARKABLE transformation of a shabby, antiquated front is that made recently by Charles E. Fine in remodeling his Empire theatre in Cincinnati, which is pictured above before and after the installation by the Artkraft Sign Company of Lima, Ohio, of porcelain enamel facing, extruded aluminum display cases, and a modern marquee with Artkraft silhouette-letter attraction boards.

The color scheme is dark and light blue, gray and orange. The squares in the checkerboard center panel are dark blue and gray, the side panels are gray, horizontal stripes alternately light blue and orange, and vertical stripes dark blue. The base is dark blue porcelain enamel, while the display cases are bordered in light blue.

Vertical sign letters are centerlined with "sunset gold" neon, and the sign has a rear piece trimmed in k-2 green neon. Yellow incandescent lamps form directional lines down the front fascia of sign and marquee, against an orange ground. These lamps are operated on a chaser flasher with flashing starting at the top of the vertical, descending over the nose of the marquee, then continuing back to the building.

The marquee soffit is of white ripple porcelain enamel, into which are set in a border and circle pattern 10-watt lamps in Climax reflectors.

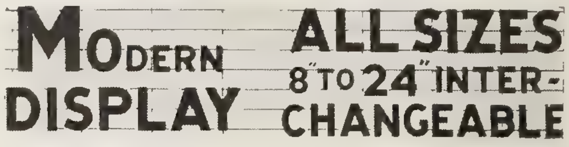
"Typographical" Treatment of the Attraction Board

THE DEVELOPMENT of attraction boards designed for multiple lines of copy, with letters of various sizes interchangeable so that lines are not confined to letters of a single height, and so that the lines themselves are not confined to the same vertical spacing, has released attraction board displays from the restrictions of a simple, monotonous placard. The attraction board can now approach the character of a true advertisement, with title player names, selling copy, all composed in an arrangement that is typographical.

Various arrangements of this kind have been worked out by the Adler Sign Letter Company of Chicago, in connection with the new "locked-in-line" construction of their multiple-line attraction boards, which take silhouette letters of both slotted and lug type in 8-, 10-, 12-, 16-, and 24-inch sizes, all interchangeable in the same opening when the opening has sufficient depth.

The locking device is on the back of the attraction board frame, leaving the face unobstructed; it is designed to hold the frame units in constant alignment for the purpose of enabling the letters to slip easily from frame to frame. The 10-, 16- and 24-inch letters are designed to line up across the bottom when in combination.

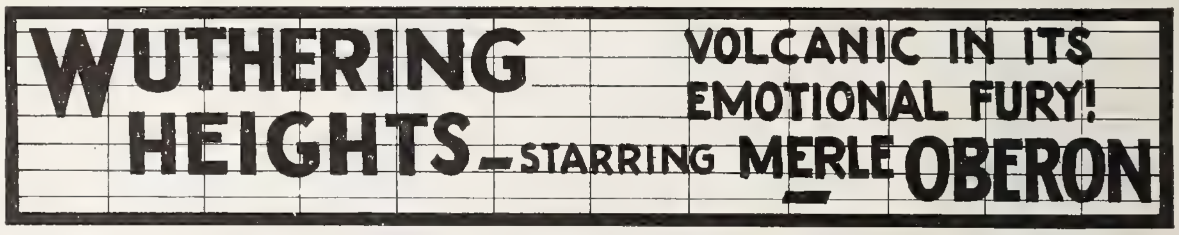
Accompanying drawings show possible arrangements of letters in lines and blocks of "type" illustrating the principle of typographical treatment of attraction board copy. Not only does the typographical method permit greater variability in the appearance of the display, but it allows considerable adjustment to length of titles, number or importance of player names, and so on. Additionally, selling copy can be introduced prominently, yet without interference with the title or player names. The typography can also be designed to give emphasis to certain words of a title, or to certain star names, or to certain words of a descriptive message, and so on.



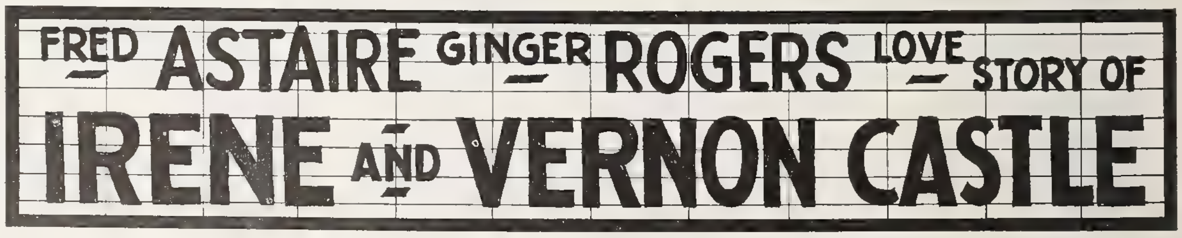
Some examples of Adler combination letters.

Changing physical appearance is also advantageous. Instead of being a mere sequence of words forming static, uninteresting lines, monotonously the same week after week, with the announcement of a new picture looking exactly like that of the preceding attraction, the typographical display can be made to look as fresh as the new show.

Example of copy with long picture title having two words that carry punch. Remaining space makes use of fame of Dumas as author of exciting stories, with this fame interpreted in two prominently displayed words. Stars of significance, but may be less so in specific communities than title and description.



Example of copy with short title which may not have much significance in itself to the community, making selling description desirable, along with name of fairly important star.



FRED ASTAIRE – GINGER ROGERS – LOVE STORY OF IRENE AND VERNON CASTLE

Example of copy with strong star names, extremely long picture title. The word "love" thus added to title typographically, but not actually, provides legitimate description.

CLEANING AIDS & METHODS

■ ■ ■ including
DEODORIZATION AND SANITATION

The Cleaning of Toilet Rooms

IN NO PART of a theatre is dirt more objectionable than in connection with its sanitary facilities, and in no part is it nearly so conspicuous. The retiring rooms are not dimly lighted. Their fixtures are specifically designed to show up the least trace of dirt. And imperfect cleanliness in toilet rooms does not make itself evident to the eye alone; it is alarmingly apparent to another sense even where hidden out of sight.

There is a lamentable practice of covering up wash-room odors with a different and stronger odor. Let the manager who still uses that method ask himself how many housewives, among his patrons, would consent to that method of dealing with an objectionable smell in their homes. Or how many male patrons would approve of their wives keeping house that way. It is the wrong practice. The thing to do with an objectionable smell is not to cover it over with a "sanitary" one, but to get rid of it. For this, complete cleanliness is all that is necessary, and with proper methods is very easily achieved.

For removal of temporary, unavoidable odors, the proper remedy again is not production of another and different odor, but use of an ozone generator. Ozone oxidizes the offensive chemical material taken up by the air, and converts it into other forms which are odorless.

For thorough cleaning the necessary utensils are simple: suitable cleaning compounds, suitable disinfectants, and clean mops and rags. The mop or rag used for wash-room operations, if put away uncleaned, will smell badly. Its presence constitutes an unsanitary condition. The last act in cleaning should be the thorough washing out of all rags and mops, with hot water, soaps and disinfectants.

Disinfectant Action

A disinfectant is only one thing, and that is not a substance with a "clean" smell. It is a germ-killer, and nothing else. A large part of toilet room odors are the result of putrifying action exercised on organic material by various forms of bacteria. The disinfectant is a substance that kills the bacteria. It usually has a pungent smell of its own, often added by the manufacturer as a proof of its effectiveness, and meaning nothing. Many highly effective bug-killers are wholly odorless.

Not all disinfectants are safe for use in the theatre. Some are poisonous, and dangerous to the employe using them. Some corrode metals, and some will stain and discolor porcelain. There remains a wide range of inexpensive compounds that have none of these disadvantages.

The disinfectant used on marble or tile fittings should not be one that is of crystal-forming nature, for as the water in which it is dissolved evaporates, crystals will form and grow in the pores of the material cleaned, and by their growth may pit or otherwise damage the surface.

Cleaning Floors

Wash-room floors are generally tile or terrazzo, seldom rubber. Asphalt tile is occasionally encountered, and if properly laid could be used more widely than it now is. These surfaces are injured to greater or less degree by water containing crystal-forming substances, either because it is hard water, or because of the nature of the disinfectant, the water softener, or the cleaning compound added. The materials used for cleaning must be selected accordingly.

After sweeping to remove loose dirt and rubbish, the floor is lightly sprinkled with soft water, or water properly softened, to which a suitable disinfectant has been added. A properly chosen cleaning compound is then scattered over the floor in the proportion required by the dirtiness of the surface. Water and cleaning compound are worked up with the mop into a fairly stiff paste, which is then worked over and over with the mop until the dirt has all been taken up by the paste. It is not necessary or desirable to cover the entire floor with paste at the beginning of the operation. A relatively small section can be cleaned, and the paste then carried forward to the next section to be treated by means of a squeegee. Using a different mop, which is repeatedly wrung dry, the section that has been cleaned is rinsed as many times as necessary until all the remaining dirt and cleaning paste have been thoroughly removed.

Cleaning Bowls

The yellow material that deposits on bowl fixtures is softened by means of a bowl cleaner to minimize the messy and unpleasant job of scrubbing it away. It is a coating of calcium, as a rule, that holds this stain in place. The bowl cleaner softens the coating. Since it should be present in concentrated form, excess water is removed from toilet bowls by means of a suction rubber cup plunger before the left standing for perhaps 15 minutes, and the deposit is then scrubbed away with a stiff brush. The remains of the bowl cleaner are then thoroughly rinsed by flushing.

Since the bowl cleaner attacks calcium compounds it will disintegrate marble or tile floors or partitions. The process is accompanied by gassing. Should marble or tile be accidentally wet by even a drop of bowl cleaner, repeated rinsing with clear water is necessary to prevent damage; continue until gassing ends.

Cleaning of Drains

Drain pipes accumulate all sorts of rubbish, from cigarette butts to shreds of fabric, and also grease by which these odds and ends are cemented to form an obstruction. Drain cleaners consist partly of lye, which dissolves grease, but somewhat slowly in cold water. They are more effective with hot water, and some kinds (dangerous to use, but more effective) provide their own heating. They contain, in addition to lye, scraps of sodium metal. One of those scraps, dropped on water, will burst into flame and burn while floating on the surface. The chemical reaction between sodium and water, by which sodium becomes lye, produces great heat. A drain cleaner containing this metal generates its own hot lye solution at the point of obstruction, and the grease is partly melted, and partly dissolved, until the obstruction is clear, and the miscellaneous rubbish, no longer held in a lump, flushes away. The janitor who uses this substance, however, must be careful of his hands, for their moisture will generate serious heat, and triply careful of rubbing any of the stuff into his eye or even his mouth or nostrils.

Small quantities of drain cleaner should be used weekly to clear away growing obstructions before they become serious. Where this is done regularly, and the plumbing is in first-rate condition, mere hot-water-and-lye solution may be used. This is less dangerous, but still easily caustic enough to cause trouble under the finger nails, let alone in more sensitive portions of the body. Employes should be cautioned accordingly.

The wire screens that keep larger rubbish from getting into the drain pipes need frequent cleaning. They constitute serious sources of objectionable odor. Scrubbing them with a strong and hot solution of drain cleaner, at least twice a week and preferably oftener, will keep them in good condition. If a second set is available, the cleaned screens may be exposed, on the roof or elsewhere, to sunlight and fresh air.

Toilet seats should be scrubbed daily with soap and water to which disinfectant has been added. Seats that tend to turn yellow under this treatment can be whitened by rubbing them down once a month with fine pumice powder.

Vermin Extermination

Objectionable vermin include flies, roaches and water bugs. Flies are the most dangerous to health, and during warm months should be eliminated by use of insect spray at least once a day before the theatre opens, and oftener if necessary. Roaches and water bugs, less dangerous, are by many found more repulsive. They can readily be controlled by scattering suitable powders or liquids. A most necessary step in the control of vermin, however, is not to feed them, and soap is good vermin food. It should not be left exposed.

● The first of two articles on black-and-white and color projection suggested by a developing trend toward preference for pictures relatively large

By F. H. RICHARDSON

DURING NEARLY all the time that I have been connected with motion picture projection—and that time began in 1904, when I became projectionist at the "Electric Theatre" in North Clark Street, Chicago—I have consistently objected to screen images exceeding 18 feet in width, save in the comparatively few huge "palaces" that have sprung into existence these later days. In them, since in extreme cases the viewing distance is in excess of 150 feet, it is agreed that a 20-foot screen image may be advisable, or even necessary because of the out-of-proportion effect set up by smaller dimensions.

Concerning the out-of-proportion effect Mr. Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect who has made special studies of projection in relation to auditorium size, shape and lighting, has prepared the following statement for this discussion:

Screen Area Treatment

"In many instances a comparatively small screen image will provide adequate visibility from all sections of the seating space, assuming that the screen is correctly illuminated. Notwithstanding this fact, very often exhibitors use a larger picture than is requisite to adequate visibility. Naturally the question arises, why is this done? The answer most frequently is to the effect that a picture of smaller size would seem out of proportion to the auditorium. This may be quite true, but only because the surfaces surrounding the screen are within spectators' field of vision, and have been treated in a manner which emphasizes the smallness of the picture.

"Among those various factors contributing to favorable results upon the screen is reduction of size of the screen image itself so far as this is compatible with comfortable viewing from rear seats.

"Secondly, surfaces surrounding the screen and falling in the audience range of vision while the picture is on, should be so designed that the viewer has no sense of the actual relative smallness of the picture. In an auditorium of given dimensions it is entirely within the range of possibility to have a picture 20 feet wide that would appear too small; conversely, a picture only 12 feet wide can be made to appear of ample size.

"This may only be done, however, by treating the screen area with fundamental consideration of the screen image size most desirable from the point of view of good vision and image quality. The surfaces in this area—their shape, color and texture—should be so treated that they will blend with the picture, contributing to the illusion instead, as too often occurs, emphasizing the fact that it is a picture.

"Broadly, the treatment calls for complete elimination of all architectural mouldings, ornaments, urns, floral decorations, etc., from the screen area. The exact character of surface treatment should be determined by the manner in which light from the screen will be reflected from them. Such reflected light must have a neutral effect, to the end that the immediate screen area be subtly drawn into the image itself.

"My view of the whole matter is that there is a very decided advantage in keeping the screen image just as small as good vision will permit, provided always that possible out-of-proportion effect be eliminated by proper design of its setting."

of an image that has detail and consistent clarity throughout its entire area—in short, pictorial beauty and dramatic conviction. When these factors are not provided for, the picture as viewed by most of the audience cannot be of a calibre compatible with the position of the motion picture today. Anything contributing to such a lowering of the position of the motion picture as a theatrical medium is definitely undermining the foundations of the business, and its effect can be reduced to box office terms.

Consider an undistorted screen image 23 feet wide in which an out-of-all-reason magnification of 11,171 to one occurs, since the present standard 35-mm. projector has an aperture measuring 0.825 x 0.600-inch and the 23-foot-wide screen undistorted screen image has area equal to 11,171 such aperture areas: considering this, it becomes evident that under such terrific magnification, every imperfection in the film photograph, every scratch mark thereon, every particle of dust or dirt adhering thereto, as well as every misplacement or movement of the film frame over the projector aperture, must be very much more visible upon the screen than would be the case were the image smaller.

Screen Illumination

Secondly, there is the screen illumination factor. As any projectionist may easily prove to his own satisfaction by a simple, easily applied experiment (that I propose later on to describe in detail), there is a distinct, well defined limit to the amount of light it is possible to supply to the screen through a standard 35-mm. projector aperture, using the most powerful illumination now available for motion picture projection. While the moment precise figures escape me, the absolute limit is reached at something less than 150 amperes. Beyond 125 amperes the gain in screen illumination drops sharply. At between 140 and 150 amperes there is no further gain. Accordingly, 1,000 amperes would supply the screen with no added light unless the projector aperture were enlarged.

This factor may be later changed, but only in the event that (a) a light source of greater power per unit area be made available for projection, or (b) the projector aperture be enlarged.

For best screen results with black-and-white projection, the present demand is for approximately 15 foot-candles incident upon the screen center, which of course means much less at its outer edges. Without this illumination, authorities in general agree that the finer photographic details of the film frame will not be visible upon the screen. Since these details are necessary to the beauty of the picture and to realization of the full potential value of the motion picture as a theatre art, their loss is serious today.

Each projection lens receives a certain, definite amount of light. Each lens distributes that light upon a certain, definite area of screen surface. The screen will be bright in exact proportion to the amount of surface that the light from the projection lens is spread over. Visibility is the product of area and brightness, up to the point where brightness becomes so high in value that glare is encountered.

As matters now stand, it is impossible to obtain or to maintain 15 foot-candles of incident light at the center of a screen 20 feet wide, except with the most powerful light source available; it might be done with a source of less power were the screen width reduced to 18 feet. Each square millimeter of aperture area sends to the projection lens a certain definite amount of light. All that light must reach an exactly correspondingly, though enlarged, area of the screen, otherwise there can be no definition in the screen image. This being true, it is evident that as magnification is increased, screen brilliancy is correspondingly decreased, which decrease may easily be such that desired results cannot be obtained.

Vagueness and Distortion

Still another objectionable feature of excessive screen image dimensions is the fact that, insofar as concerns the forward end of the auditorium, if a motion picture of larger size be viewed too closely, a loss of sharpness occurs. For good vision from the front rows of seats there must be sufficient space between them and the screen either wholly to avoid this effect, or at least to reduce it to an acceptable minimum. With each increase in screen image size, the required distance is rapidly increased. I have inspected theatres in which a screen of large dimensions was located so close to the seating space that the picture was not acceptably clear until the twentieth row.

There is also the factor of eye fatigue. Because of lack of screen image sharpness for those close to the screen, as picture size is increased, the eye muscles are subjected to added strain because of the larger area over which moving objects in the picture must be followed. This strain is of course reduced with a smaller screen image. Too, the larger the picture, the greater the side distortion of all objects appearing on the screen, which, since they seem of less than natural width, also appear absurdly tall.

The size of the screen image is, of course, determined by a number of factors which include the distance from the screen to the last row as well as vision from the forward seats. It is plain that the problem is rather complex and calls for careful adjustments of auditorium seating area dimensions, auditorium form, lighting and surface treatment, and screen illumination. On the whole, however, our efforts should be toward holding the screen image in, not "blowing it up."

The foregoing is offered as an indictment against large screens in black-and-white projection. But all of the arguments against a large screen image for black-and-white projection are emphasized when we consider color, which is daily becoming more important. Color projection in relation to screen size will be discussed in a following article.

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

GIVING THE FLOOR TO ONE WHO FAVORS ONE-MAN ROOMS

WELL, LET'S HEAR the other side. We needn't agree, but there are advocates of the one-man projection room, and they have their arguments. Moreover, all fair-minded men realize that in hundreds of small-town and village theatres there is not sufficient patronage available to enable the exhibitor, regardless of his willingness to do so, to employ two projectionsists and pay them adequate wages. At any rate, I submit the arguments of Marion B. Stout, projectionist of Petersburg, Alaska. He writes:

"The article in the February issue of BETTER THEATRES concerning the two-man projection room, and Brother Prater's reply in the March issue, were both very interesting, but the disadvantages the two-man room presents have not been pointed out.

"First, there is lack of size in many small theatre projection rooms. There are rooms so small that two men could not possibly remain therein constantly without great inconvenience and discomfort. In such rooms only the projectionist should be present, except when some immediate duty demands the presence of an apprentice or helper. Of course, if one man remains at the projector, another must attend to rethreading, carbon trim and such other duties as are imperatively necessary, during which time he should remain silent and not disturb the projectionist. In such rooms the constant presence of a second man will inevitably work harm. [We could dispose of that, of course, by saying that such rooms have no right to exist. Every projection room should have ample dimensions —the building that will not admit of it is unfit to be used as a theatre.—F.H.R.]

"The second objection to the two-man room is that, regardless of the size of the room, two men will inevitably engage in conversation, or do other things serving to distract their minds from the work of projection, which same demands, and for maximum excellence, must have constant and keen concentration. The projectionist who knows his work thoroughly and desires to deliver maximum performance and thus be true to the principles of his craft, to his employer, to the producer and artists whose product he reproduces, and to the public he serves, will have a certain definite routine mapped out for himself, which he will follow, not only from day to day, but from hour to hour.

"There are certain minor details that one man alone, his mind fixed wholly upon his work, would be very unlikely to forget, whereas two men, each more or less depending upon the other, and at times engaged in conversation, would be quite apt to overlook. With things running smoothly in a one-man room, the projectionist is at perfect ease. Should anything, no matter how small, go haywire, he would observe or hear it instantly and would be able to reach the seat of trouble just as quickly as could the second man, were he present. I can truthfully say that most of my errors (Oh, yes, I make them once in a while!) have happened when someone was in the room and conversation was in progress.

"What I consider the perfect set-up is maintained in this theatre. Either my apprentice, Mr. Stedman, or the manager, Mr. Charles Whyte (who is an expert in projection), is constantly on the floor. Should assistance be required in the projection room, a prearranged signal brings one of them immediately. This seems as efficient an arrangement as is possible where, for good reasons, only one projectionist is employed.

"However, don't misunderstand me. I most emphatically approve of the two-man room wherever space makes it practicable, or patronage justifies employment of a second projectionist. Unquestionably it does make for improved general results, provided it be understood that the one not in charge of the working projector finds something to employ his time other than in reading a newspaper or novel or in some other activity wholly unrelated to his work. There always is something to do at all times where a man is on any job, provided the man really wants to find it. If nothing else there is study. There is not one projectionist in all North America that might not benefit both himself and his employer, to say nothing of the public, by study."

This is a reproduction of a film report form which, while designed for a circuit, is applicable to individually owned theatres. It is one of the best I have ever examined, providing in condensed form all essential data. An accumulation of such reports should have real value in dealing with distributors. This one is made in duplicate, one white and one colored yellow. Made in triplicate, there would be one for the manager's office, one for the exchange, and one for the projection room file. This reproduction is three-fifths the size of the original.—F. H. R.

TESTS FOR MEASURES AGAINST FIRE HAZARDS

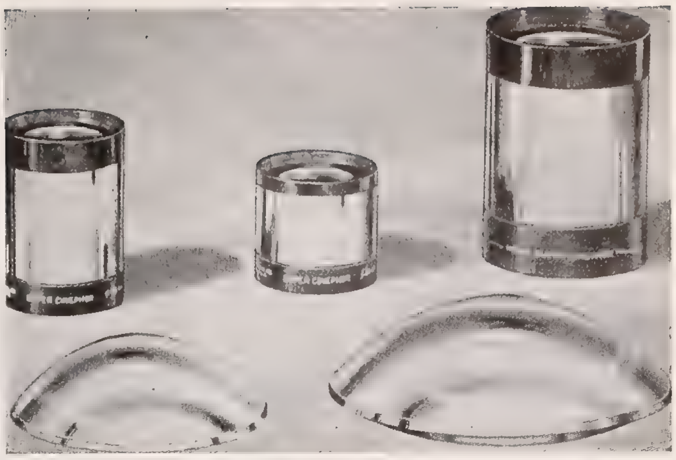
RECENTLY I WAS invited to attend tests of three types of film cabinets before New York fire and insurance authorities. It proved to be an impressive demonstration of the care and skill that goes into efforts to reduce to an absolute minimum all fire hazards in the motion picture theatre today, right down to the last detail. Among others present besides myself were executives of the New York City bureau of explosives and Fire Insurance exchange; N. D. Golden, chief of the Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Department of Commerce; E. R. Morin, chief theatre inspector for the State of Connecticut; Oscar Neu, head of the Neumade Products Corporation, whose film storage cabinets were being tested; and his aides.

A cabinet pictured through the flames after the fire had subsided sufficiently to disclose it.—F. H. R.

In the cabinet were placed five full reels of film. Then the cabinet was closed as it would be with regular usage in a projection room, and on it and around it were piled paper, shavings and pine wood. Over this material two gallons of kerosene were poured, then it was ignited. The fire, which, believe you me, was as hot as even the worst of us are likely to encounter "later on," lasted in each case approximately five minutes. And when the cabinet was opened, we found that the reels in the cabinet were merely warm to the touch, while the film itself showed no sign of damage.

Inspector Mojarrieta of New York fire department, and yours-truly examine film after fire.—F. H. R.

In following tests the reels were inserted in two of the cabinets that were equipped with ventilation stacks, and the reels themselves were ignited, the cabinet being then shut and the reels allowed to be wholly consumed. These tests were for the purpose of exhibiting the high gas pressure generated and the sturdiness of the cabinets to withstand it, which it did in each case. Finally, reels of film were placed in the third cabinet, which had no ventilation, and one of them was ignited. Enough pressure was thus developed to bend the door of the single-reel cabinet, but the unignited reels were undamaged.



AN UNBEATABLE PROJECTION COMBINATION

When you want the finest image quality available, choose the Super-Cinephor lens and condenser combination.

The Super-Cinephor anastigmatic lens with its reserve covering power, superb color correction, and maximum definition, and the Super-Cinephor condensers which effect more than 50 per cent greater illumination will give your pictures the image quality your patrons like to see.

Only one more patron a day will pay for a Super-Cinephor in a year. For complete details on these lenses, condensers and reflectors, write to Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., 679 St. Paul St., Rochester, N. Y.

Microphone with 3-Unit Features

A NEW MICROPHONE for all-around use, being designed to associate the characteristics of three types of microphones in one instrument, has been developed by RCA. Located handily at its base is a switch by which uni-directional, bi-directional or non-directional characteristics may be emphasized. It has thus been developed for public address and sound reenforcement as well as radio and studio recording having a variety of microphone requirements.

With the control switch in the uni-directional position, the instrument picks up only sounds reaching the front, or "live" side. As a bi-directional microphone, it performs like an ordinary velocity instrument, being responsive on only two sides. In the third position, the control switch permits sounds coming from any angle to be picked up.

The microphone is described by the manufacturer as actually two microphones in one—a bi-directional velocity microphone, and a non-directional pressure instrument. The output of each comes down to the control switch, which cuts in one or the other, or both. When the two are connected in series, they give the uni-directional response.

It is small, (2½x8½ inches), and weighs 2 pounds. The directional characteristics are rated as uniform at all frequencies as a result of the use of ribbon units for both the velocity and the pressure sections. Sensitivity is rated at –62 decibels for a ten-bar signal in consequence of the structure design and the use of new magnet material. Frequency response is rated as uniform from 40 to 10,000 cycles.

Amplifier Designed For Stage Sound

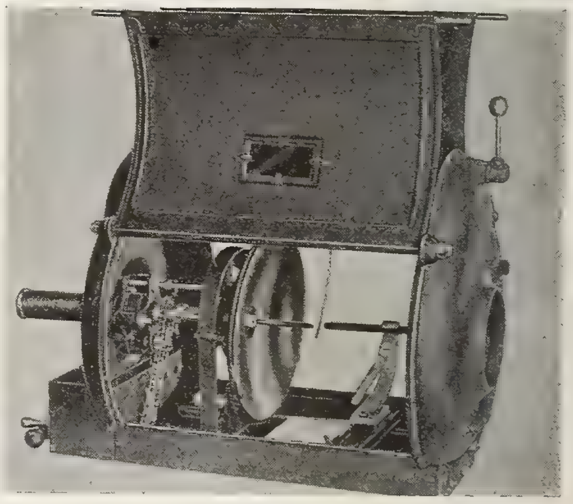
AN AMPLIFIER of 34-watt output, designed primarily for sound reinforcement, has been brought out by the Amplifier Corporation of America, New York. This amplifier, and others of the line, can be obtained on special order with provisions for emergency photoelectric cell operation.

The 34-watt model illustrated utilizes two 6L6G output tubes to provide a rated power output of 34 watts (48 watts peak). Frequency response at normal equalizer setting is held to within plus or minus 1 decibel from 20 to 20,000 cycles. Equalizer adjustment gives any degree of nine different forms of frequency response to suit individual conditions of acoustics and operation. Volume expansion, volume compression and inverse feedback are included in the circuit, together with provisions for remote control, which can be added.

Two high-impedance output channels give 135 decibels gain, each, and a third 100 decibels gain. Inputs are combined by electronic mixing.

New Low-Intensity Projection Lamp

A LOW-INTENSITY lamp projection arcs pulling between 16 and 42 amperes, has been developed by The Ballantyne Company of Omaha, Nebraska. The lamp is of the reflector type, using a 12-inch mirror. The carbon feed assembly utilizes chain drive for the negative jaw, with worm drive at the positive side. Independent adjustment of the position of positive and negative carbon holders is incorporated for the purpose of permitting the burning of carbons to short length.



Vertical and lateral adjustments of the mirror and of the negative carbon are made by means of controls externally located at the rear of the lamphouse. An "arc position indicator" facilitates renewal of carbons. An ammeter is also provided.

The impulse to return is born inside the theater, not on the marquee

● "I dropped into the Majestic the other night. There's where I'm going after this when I want to really enjoy a show. I've never seen better theater lighting. I found my seat without stumbling and groping. My eyes didn't get tired and I figured that was because there was no sharp contrast between the screen and the walls around it. It was a color feature and I've never seen more natural color on the screen."

Patrons do comment in this manner on theaters they visit and their friends respond to their impressions. When people desire to see a particular feature they go to a theater they know will present it properly and in comfortable surroundings. Such presentation means just one thing—high intensity projection.

Simplified High Intensity projection costs little more than obsolete low intensity projection. But it does give your patron the impulse to return.

ACOUSTICAL PRODUCTS AND ENGINEERING

ACOUSTICAL treatment for the motion picture theatre auditorium is usually necessary, in some degree.

Acoustic materials are available not only to suit every acoustic defect, but to fit into most any decorative scheme, and to meet requirements as to labor costs under varying circumstances. Materials most frequently used are sound absorbent tiles, acoustic plaster, rock wool and similar products, while some wood and synthetic veneers are sound-absorbing as well as decorative. Which to use partly depends on the natural acoustic characteristics of the auditorium (size, relative dimensions, and forms) and the decoration desired.

AIR-CONDITIONING AND VENTILATING EQUIPMENT

METHODS OF supplying air to the theatre may be divided into two general classifications—simple ventilation and air-conditioning.

Ventilation, as commonly referred to in the theatre, involves merely the supplying and exhausting of air. A ventilating system may therefore consist only in provisions for drawing fresh air into the building and, by means of fans, propelling it into the auditorium, and expelling it from the theatre by means of fans, with other parts of the theatre receiving air from the auditorium or directly from outdoors. To such a system, however, may be added a humidifier for winter use, or cooling apparatus such as a cold-water spray chamber for extra cooling in warm weather. In no case does ventilation mean air-conditioning.

Air-conditioning requires a positive method of distribution, usually ducts, and mechanical apparatus providing complete, automatic control of fresh air and return air mixtures with respect to temperature, motion and relative humidity. At least some measure of mechanical refrigeration is necessary (unless water below 56° is otherwise available in sufficient quantities), and for cold season air-conditioning, heating facilities are an integral part of the system.

Some cooling effect may be achieved in simple ventilation in several ways. There are a few theatres in which a slight cooling effect has been attained by fans capable of introducing fresh air (with proper distribution arrangements) at extremely high velocity. Any kind of controlled positive cooling, however, demands that air come in contact directly with a cooling agent, which may be either chemically refrigerated coils or water. Mechanical refrigeration is frequently used for cooling water and then the air brought in contact with the cold water. Where well water is available at a temperature not higher than 55°, this water may be used without mechanical refrigeration. How mechanical refrigeration may be applied depends upon local and State regulations, and its effectiveness depends upon the design.

Air Filters, consisting in a dust-collecting material such as paper, steel wool, or glass wool, or other type of fabric or mesh on rollers or fixed in a metal frame, are designed to filter dirt out of the air before the air is introduced into the theatre through the ventilating system.

Ventilating grilles, which are located at the wall openings of air ducts through which the air is introduced into or removed from the interior of the theatre, are to varying degrees ornamental and thus prevent these openings from being unsightly. A scientifically designed grille gives direction to the air flow, diffuses the air stream and regulates the quantity of air passing through. There is a type of air distributor designed for downward distribution which is particularly well adapted to incorporation with light sources.

AIR PURIFICATION: OZONE

OZONE is a specific, unstable form of oxygen which rapidly breaks down into the ordinary form, but in so doing produces oxidation (cold burning) of impurities in the air, especially those which are characterized by unpleasant odors, which for the most part are readily dispelled with oxidation. Ozone is also deadly to many forms of microbe life.

Ozone generators for theatres, which are of electrical discharge type, are available in various sizes, suited to lounges, toilet rooms or an entire theatre. Small units are inexpensive. Larger and more costly ones have blower and filter apparatus, while still others are designed for use in connection with ventilation systems.

AMPLIFYING TUBES

THESE ARE electronic relays in the amplifier of a sound reproducing system by means of which the weak electric currents created by a photocell, phonopickup or microphone, operate to control a stronger current, moulding it to an exact, but more powerful duplicate of the original. This process is continued through a train of tubes until a duplicate of the original sound current is obtained, which is strong enough to operate the loudspeakers.

TRUE STORIES FROM ALTEC FILES

NED (DOC) RAFALSKI,
General Manager of
Bland Bros. Theatres,
Chicago, Ill.

Exhibitor Finds Quick Diagnosis "Plain Miracle"

CHICAGO—"We were playing to a good business on a Tuesday matinee in the Olympia Theatre, when for a reason we couldn't find, the sound went dead on our No. 1 machine," said Doc Rafalski, General Manager of Bland Bros. Theatres.

"We called Altec, and C. G. Bosworth promptly arrived at the theatre. He immediately discovered there was no voltage in the photo-electric cell, resulting from a broken connection in a coupling unit.

"Bosworth had the No. 1 machine functioning normally in a few minutes. It was only necessary to double up on the No. 2 machine twice from the time he got to my theatre.

"The uncanny way the Altec man instantly puts his finger on what is wrong may be the result of engineering ability, but it's just a plain miracle to me."

THE SERVICE ORGANIZATION OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

AMPLIFIERS

AN AMPLIFIER, as part of a sound reproducing system, is the arrangement in an electrical unit (panel or cabinet) of electronic relays (see Amplifying Tubes) with suitable controls.

Amplifiers today contain their own power supplies, needing only connection with an a.c. or d.c. power line, and dispensing with all auxiliary batteries, generators or rectifiers; and in addition commonly supply polarizing voltage to photocells, and sometimes current to exciter lamps and loudspeaker fields. Modern pre-amplifiers and monitor amplifiers commonly draw this operating power from some other amplifying unit of the sound system.

Very small, low-power amplifiers may be mounted on the projector or on the wall of the projection room, deriving their operating power from the main amplifier. They provide preliminary amplification of the weak photocell current before it reaches the main amplifier.

ARCHITECTURAL MATERIALS AND DESIGN SERVICE

PROGRESS in chemistry and in manufacturing technique have made available a wide variety of decorative materials to supplement or supplant the familiar marble, stone and terra cotta. Glass, and the plastics known as phenolics, are now obtainable in almost infinite variety of colors and patterns. New manufacturing methods provide marble in thin slabs that are translucent. Porcelain-enamelled metal is applicable to fronts, particularly in refinishing old buildings at low cost. Masonry blocks are also obtainable in porcelain enamel finish. Veneers and fireproof materials having the appearance of wood are offered in large number of grains and colors. Glass tiles are available in a wide range of colors and a number of patterns, while glass has been further applied to architectural purposes in the form of structural blocks. The latter particularly lend themselves to architectural illumination schemes, with color if desired.

Also available for friezes, medallions, etc., are plastic figures and bas-reliefs reproduced from authentic works of art.

which this energy causes to glow. It provides decorative effects of a character peculiarly associated with the theatre, and is also applicable to advertising matter, such as posters.

The fluorescent materials are available in powder and paint forms. There is a lacquer-enamel which may be readily applied with either brush or sprayer. A variety of colors are obtainable. A pint of the lacquer-enamel will cover about 600 square feet.

The radiant energy required for "black light" effects is not the true ultraviolet used, for example, in the tubular fluorescent lamps developed for illumination purposes, but is near the visible blue portion of the spectrum.

Filament lamps give off some ultraviolet energy, but only sources of the higher wattages are really practicable, and their heat is such that their use should be limited to temporary application in which economy is a major consideration.

Mercury dicharge lamps are best for "black light" effects. The type of lamp most proper depends upon the nature of the application.

Ultraviolet sources usually give off some visible light also; the visible light should be screened out with plates, sleeves or roundels of some filtering glass such as nickel-cobalt.

CARBONS, PROJECTION

MOTION PICTURE projection carbons are required for projection in most motion picture theatres (all except those using incandescent projection lamps). The type and size of carbons required depends upon the type of arc, and in this connection the reader is referred to the several articles in The Buyers' Index on projection lamps.

CARBON SAVERS

THESE DEVICES, which permit use of carbons down to a very short stub, consist in a metal rod that is clamped into the carbon jaws of the lamp house, one end of the rod being provided with means for holding a stub of carbon that is too short for use in the normal way. There are several methods of attaching the stub to the carbon saver, some of them permitting use of the carbon down to one inch.

CARPETS

SELECTION OF carpeting for theatres merits care and expert counsel with respect to the following considerations: (1) Adaptability of pattern and colors to the style of the interior treatment and local taste, (2) durability relative to specific traffic conditions, and (3) the floor plan (which effects both yardage and laying costs).

Carpets considered suited to theatres are (to name them alphabetically) Axminster, Broadloom, Chenille (an expensive weave feasible only in rare instances in which a superior carpet of special shape is required). Patent-Back (a special type consisting in sections cut in prescribed shapes and attached to a backing), Velvet and Wilton. The last two named are the weaves most widely used in theatres.

CARPET LINING

CUSHIONING beneath carpeting not only contributes added resilience (therefore the sense of luxury), but adds to the life of the carpeting itself. Types obtainable include pads of vegetable fibre interlaced through a burlap backing, of animal hair felted under pressure, and of a rubber composition. Rubber linings have also been found practicable for theatres and are available in several thicknesses.

CHAIR FASTENING CEMENT

THE METAL pieces to which theatre chairs are bolted are firmly fastened to the floor by special cement made for that purpose, which hardens in approximately ten minutes. CHAIR CUSHIONS OF FOAMED LATEX SPONGE

CUSHIONS FOR auditorium chair seats and backs (or other chairs, settees, etc.) are obtainable in a porous material made from the milk of the rubber tree and called foamed latex sponge. Such cushions take the place of padding and springs, the fabric being fitted directly over them.

This material may be moulded to fit any chair dimensions or design formation. Except for hollow cores, the cushion appears solid, but actually has access to air throughout its structure in consequence of the porosity of the material.

CHAIRS, AUDITORIUM

CHAIRS AND general seating arrangements are chosen to provide the optimum compromise between six requirements; maximum seating, maximum comfort, facility of entrance and exit, proper sightlines, local building regulations, and acoustics.

Upon the last point, the ideal chair is one that has precisely the same sound absorption as the human body; in a theatre thus seated it is not necessary to adjust sound volume continually to variations in the size of the audience. Veneer chairs should never be used.

The importance of well designed chairs to the comfort of the theatre patron—and all possible comfort must be provided—advises careful selection of chairs in the first place, expertly supervised installation, constant maintenance and periodical reseating. Much scientific research with respect to posture and materials has gone into the designing and production of modern theatre chairs, and a similar, painstaking attitude toward seating is indicated on the part of the theatre owner. It is to be noted that the average width of chair being used is greater than formerly. A width of 20 inches may be regarded as a minimum consistent with the present standards of comfort.

Chairs may be procured with full spring construction, or spring-edge seats, and with padded backs. Row end standards may be obtained in special designs to suit a particular decorative scheme. Coverings, of course, are always selected according to the interior treatment of the auditorium (see also Upholstering Materials).

CHANGE MAKERS

OCCUPYING little space in the box office, modern change making machines prevent annoying errors in offering change to a patron and loss to the theatre through mistakes. The correct change is automatically determined upon manipulation of the proper keys, and is delivered into a metal cup, from which it is easily scooped. Not only greater accuracy, but greater speed in handling a line of patrons make change-makers more or less a box office requisite.

CLEANING EQUIPMENT, MECHANICAL

VACUUM-CLEANING equipment is necessary for the proper maintenance of carpeting (proper maintenance of carpeting in theatres calls for vacuum-cleaning daily), while the vacuum method is also the most convenient as well as the most effective one for cleaning upholstery, drapes and other fabrics.

When carpeting loses its luster and resilience, shampooing will do much to restore these qualities. It is not necessary to remove the carpeting, for there are services which shampoo the carpet on the floor, employing special machines.

For vacuum-cleaning, heavy-duty machines are those most generally employed in theatres. Central vacuum systems, with pipes leading to various locations, are indicated only for very large theatres. Both types are frequently supplemented by small vacuum cleaners of the domestic type for use where other equipment cannot be conveniently applied.

CURTAIN CONTROL MACHINES

SMOOTH AND silent opening and closing of curtains are effected, either from backstage or from the projection room, by automatic machines that operate at the touch of a button. The curtain may be stopped at any point along the stage, or its motion reversed as desired.

The equipment consists of a motor, a track and a cable, as well as snaps to which the curtain is fastened. The motor may be placed in the grids, which makes it possible to fly the entire mechanism, curtain and all. Special models for small theatres are available at relatively low cost.

Also obtainable is a slack-rope takeup device designed to eliminate slackness of curtain ropes and cables, with attendant whipping and starting jerk.

CURTAINS AND STAGE DRAPES

CURTAINS USUALLY required for motion picture theatres in which stage performances are not regularly presented, are of the traveller type made up in such fabrics as velour. Asbestos fireproof proscenium-opening curtains are required in some States and all the larger cities in theatres having full stage facilities.

Drapes are commonly indicated for the sides, and across the top of the proscenium opening; the extent to which they are needed is of course dependent upon the design of the proscenium area. Velours are indicated for such drapes also, but rayon-cotton mixtures and similar fabrics are also suitable.

Companies capable of supplying these materials are also excellent sources of drapes for other parts of the theatre.

CUTOUT MACHINES

EXPLOITATION cutouts for lobby and marquee displays are easily made by tracing the desired pattern on wall board and then guiding a cutout machine along the pattern. A small electric motor driven by power from a lamp socket does the work, and by substitution of cutting edges the machine may be used as an ordinary saw to build the frame and supports for cutouts or any other display.

DIMMERS

THESE electro-mechanical devices for controlling stage and auditorium illumination permit fading out of any desired set of lights and fading in of others. They are necessary to the gradual changing of color tones in auditorium lighting, and to the production of stage lighting effects commonly desired; in addition, they are highly desirable for raising or lowering house lighting before and after performances.

Dimmers are available in a wide range of capacities and types, from small portable spotlight dimmers to multiple banks controlling a large number of circuits, interlocking and fitted with master controls.

DISPLAY FRAMES, POSTER

FRAMES for posters and stills, either for mounting on or recessing in the wall, are available in stock models and also may be (and commonly are today) obtained in special designs. They are most frequently of wood ornamentally tooled and painted, but chromium-plated and porcelain-enameled metal, certain synthetic materials available in colors, and stainless steel are also effectively used.

EFFECT MACHINES

PATTERNS AND scenic effects with or without animation (such as moving clouds, flames, etc.) are ingeniously obtainable with these special light projection machines, essentially stereopticons, employing various types of effect slides and gelatines.

Backgrounds for stage shows, in color, can be projected and changed at pleasure, or the opening of a feature picture be framed in color or given a superimposed, changing pattern.

EXPLOITATION MECHANISMS

VARIOUS DEVICES are available for the presentation of scenes from a current attraction or special advertising stills or motion pictures in the vestibule or lobby of the theatre, or in stores and other locations for which suitable arrangements can be made. The simplest type provides for the automatic display of a series of stills or advertising cards.

More impressive is the showing of motion pictures by means of an automatic projector mounted for the rear projection of advance trailers or other advertising films on a small screen. Such equipment may be obtained either with or without sound reproduction facilities.

FILM CABINETS

METAL FILM storage equipment is available in models ranging from cabinets on pedestals with fusible-link sprinkler protection and vent pipes, to single-reel holders which may be attached to each other as new holders are added, forming a unit. Available types also include cases of holders, making up units of from five to twelve single-reel compartments, each with its own door and variously designed to give convenient access to the reel wanted, and a high degree of protection from fire and heat.

FIRE EXTINGUISHERS

THERE ARE several types of fire extinguishers suitable to theatres—the carbon tetrachloride extinguisher, the soda-and-acid mechanism, the foam type and the portable carbon dioxide hand type. They should be distributed throughout the theatre in accordance with the directions of fire department officials, care being taken that any extinguisher likely to be used in the presence of electrical apparatus is safe for that purpose, and not capable of electrocuting the man who uses it.

FIRE SHUTTERS, PROJECTION ROOM

FIREPROOF shutters for projection room ports isolate the projection room in an emergency (by melting of fusible links in case of fire), operating either automatically or manually. They minimize the chance of panic and lower insurance rates, and are practically always required in theatres by fire regulations.

A special switch is available for tripping the port shutters by electro-mechanical action, instead of by means of fusible links, and at the same time actuating an exhaust fan to draw the fumes into the projection room ventilation duct.

FLASHERS

THESE AUTOMATIC "switch" devices for interrupting intermittently the flow of current to light sources, supply attention-arresting animation to electrical displays that is commonly desirable for marquee decorative schemes and exterior signs, and especially so when the theatre front has to compete with electrical displays immediately surrounding it.

There are three principal types of flashers: drum type (which has been generally superseded by the following later types), mercury contact type (which was found to be especially effective for marquee and sign travelling borders), and the induction disc type, which is regarded as readily adaptable to any type of display.

Ladder Accidents

You won't worry about ladder accidents when you use Dayton Safety Ladders in your theatres. They are custom-built for extra safety and durability. Workmen know that they can perform those "high up" jobs as swiftly and confidently as though standing on the floor or ground. And yet, because Dayton Safety Ladders last much longer than ordinary ladders, they reduce ladder costs as well as accident costs.

FOUNTAINS

ORNAMENTAL fountains are sold as units for installation in lobby, foyer or lounge, alone or in conjunction with statuary. Drinking fountains are offered in plain and decorative types, recessed or pedestal.

Two types of automatic drinking fountains are available; one operating by means of a photocell (the head of the person stooping to drink interrupts a beam of light, which interruption actuates the water valve); the other operates upon the principle of electrical capacitance, the approach of a human head upsetting the balance of a critical electrical circuit, and thus actuating the water valve.

FURNITURE, LOBBY AND LOUNGE

CHAIRS, SOFAS and tables of durable materials, suitable to the hard use of the theatre lounge, lobby and foyer, can be had to match any decorative background.

Metal furniture that is entirely comfortable, yet easily and inexpensively maintained, is especially indicated where a modern interior design suggests its use. Coverings may be obtained in many fabrics, designs and colors, and in imitation leather.

Chairs and sofas of wood construction and the simple lines of modern styles are regarded as sufficiently durable for most theatres when fully upholstered with tough coverings, such as ribbed and herringbone fabrics, mohair pile, frieze and (chiefly in men's lounges and lobbies) imitation leather of good grades.

HEARING AIDS

THESE RECEIVING instruments (phones) either of air conduction or bone conduction type, to assist patrons whose hearing is impaired, may be regarded as standard equipment for motion picture theatres today, with from five to ten outlets (two seats served by one outlet) usually considered sufficient. The receivers are plugged into suitable outlet boxes permanently mounted and wired in selected seating locations. Individual volume controls which the patrons can adjust at will, may be provided either on the outlet boxes or on the cord leading to the receiver.

Sound may be taken from the main theatre system, either directly or through an auxiliary amplifier, or may be picked up via microphone from the screen speakers and passed through a low-power amplifier that is part of the hearing aid system. Because of the relatively large number of people who do not hear well, and their varied influence on theatre attendance, group hearing aids are to be regarded as regular equipment for the motion picture theatre.

HEATING SYSTEMS AND ACCESSORIES

HEATING SYSTEMS used in the theatre present different requirements from those of other public buildings because of the concentration of occupants in the auditorium, and the wide variation in the number that may be present at any given time.

Heat distributing systems are of two general kinds, those using standard steam radiators and those circulating masses of warmed air through a ventilating system. The latter may of course be part of a complete air conditioning system, and must be so operated for cold season air-conditioning (See Air-Conditioning).

Oil and gas are preferable as the fuel where automatic control is provided in the system. With coal, automatic stokers reduce labor and insure efficient use of fuel.

INTERIOR DECORATION SERVICE AND MATERIALS

THEATRE DECORATION has evolved into a specialized branch of interior decoration. For at least the finer work, designers and artisans should have had considerable understanding of the functional peculiarities of all divisions of the theatre, and be experienced in the decorating methods advised by illumination factors, acoustics, screen considerations, etc.

Statues and bas-reliefs based on classic, patriotic and other themes, are available in stock reproductions, many of them relatively inexpensive and well adapted to theatre interiors of modern as well as traditional style.

are divided into two classes—the type generally known as Hi-lo, and the so-called low-voltage high-intensity arc. The Hi-lo type may be regarded technologically today as having been superseded (except for existing installations) by the low-voltage high-intensity arc, which employs a relatively new type of copper-coated carbon of small diameter and with a core of rare-earth elements, and is further distinguished by the horizontal position of both carbons and non-rotation of the positive.

Development of the low-voltage high-intensity projection arc has brought to the small as well as the medium-sized theatre, as a result of its moderate operating cost, screen illumination of a quality equal to that of the larger theatre using condenser type high-intensity equipment operated at 120-130 amperes and 65-70 volts.

Low-voltage high-intensity arc are operated at currents ranging from 35 to 65 amperes, and 31 to 40 volts at the arc. Carbon combinations are 6 mm. positive, 5 mm. negative for from 35 to 40 amperes; 7 mm. positive, 6 mm. negative for from 42 to 50 amperes; and 8 mm. positive, 6.5 or 7 mm. negative for from 56 to 65 amperes.

LAMPS, INCANDESCENT FOR PROJECTION

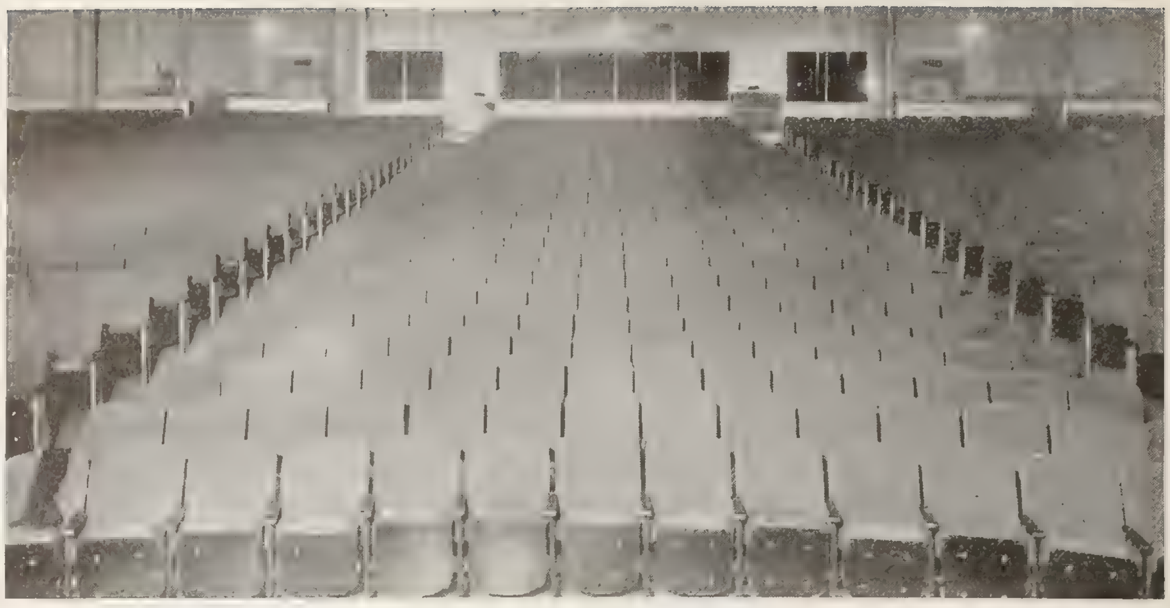
INCANDESCENT lamps for theatre motion picture projection are characterized by a high degree of source concentration and relatively high wattage. The most effective lamp for this purpose—namely, the 2,100-watt, 60-volt T-24 bulb lamp—is designed for lower voltage to secure additional source concentration. Hence a transformer with voltage-regulating characteristics is required. This lamp provides relatively acceptable illumination on screens up to 16 feet wide and throws not to exceed 100 feet.

There are also available 1,000-watt prefocus base, and 1,500-watt bipost base, 100-120 volt, T-20 bulb lamps employing the biplane filament construction. This construction makes possible relatively high source concentration for lamps operating at ordinary circuit voltages and thus saves the cost of auxiliary apparatus.

The 1,000- and 1,500-watt lamps are frequently employed in projectors of the semi-portable type.

For portable 35-mm. motion picture projectors there are the 500-watt monoplane-filament, and the 750-watt and 1,000-watt biplane filament lamps in T-20 bulbs with medium-prefocus bases. The 750-watt and 1,000-watt lamps require forced ventilation.

A newer type of 1,000-watt projection lamp is designed to burn base down and as a result of a new method of internal construction and of burning the filaments at higher temperature the lamp increases by 50% the light available from incandescent sources of this wattage. Because it maintains screen illumination at so high a percentage of the original intensity, this lamp does not require the inclusion of anti-blackening electric grids in the internal construction.



One of more than six Loew theatres in the New York metropolitan area which have recently been reseated. Pictured is the auditorium of the Dykman, which, like the others, was reseated by the General Seating Company of New York. Chairs have spring backs and seats, and are upholstered in rust mohair.

For stereopticon projectors there are the 500-watt short T-20, medium-prefocus base projection lamp, and the 1,000-watt long T-20 bulb, mogul-prefocus base lamp. Both are of the 100-120-volt type and employ monoplane filaments.

LAMPS, INCANDESCENT FOR THEATRE LIGHTING

GENERAL SERVICE lamps—available in sizes from 15 to 1,500 watts—serve the majority of lighting applications in and around theatres. Except for the tubular bulb bipost lamps, all are designed for burning in any position; all are available with inside-frosted finish to diffuse the light, to eliminate filament striations, and to produce a smoother lighting effect. The frosting absorbs little light—in fact, inside-frosted and clear lamps (clear lamps are regularly available in sizes above 100 watts) have the same rating in light output.

Inside-colored lamps for sign and decorative service: The general service lamps mentioned above are suitable for enclosed lamp signs and luminous displays where protected from rain and snow. For outdoor exposed applications, a line of vacuum lamps from 6 to 50 watts is available in frosted and inside-colored types, which are intended principally for use where the lamps themselves are visible and form the pattern of the display. Natural-colored lamps, available in four sizes and four standard colors, are more expensive than coated lamps, but produce colored light at a higher efficiency.

Outside-colored lamps: Several sizes of outside-colored lamps are also listed in round and flame-shaped bulbs adapted to many decorative and ornamental fixtures. They are not advised for outdoor use.

Lumiline lamps: Available in colors and in 30 and 60 watts (length 17¾ inches) and 40 watts (length 11¾ inches), these tubular lamps have, by their physical shape, introduced new concepts of decorative lighting design. They may be used exposed or in narrow reflecting and shielding equipment. The outside-coated lamps are not recommended for exposed outdoor use. The standard colors are delicate pastel shades in white, straw, orange, moonlight blue, emerald and surprise pink.

Fluorescent lumiline lamps: These are much more efficient than the filament-type lumiline lamps, and are particularly recommended for color lighting, since the color is not created by the glass of the bulb, but in the light itself. The lamp is of the electric discharge type, using mercury vapor as the medium for sustaining the arc. Ultraviolet radiation is produced in the tube, which acts upon certain chemicals (the nature of which varies according to the color or tone of white light desired) with which the interior of the bulb has been treated. The reaction of the chemical to the electronic bombardment produces visible light. These lamps are available in three lengths—18, 24 and 36 inches, and in two diameters. Being arc lamps, they require a special control unit. Nominal wattages in which the lamps are available are 15, 20, and 30.

Reflector incandescent lamps: These are of a special type adapted to display lighting, having a pressed glass reflector and light-redirecting cover lens as part of a funnel-shaped bulb. It is available with two types of cover lenses, one for wide beam, the other for narrow. It fits the conventional socket.

LAMPS, LOW-INTENSITY

LOW-INTENSITY projection lamps are reflector type projection light sources operated at from 15 to 42 amperes. The low-intensity arc is relatively inexpensive in both carbon and operating cost and produces illumination which has been regarded as sufficient in intensity for small theatres, but crater burning characteristics are such that the light has a yellow tint, instead of being the snow-white light produced by high-intensity type arcs. In fact, a high-intensity arc may be regarded as necessary to the satisfactory projection of color films in theatres.

LENSES, PROJECTION

THERE ARE two general classes—the condenser lens, which focuses the projection light on the aperture (See Condensers); and the objectives. The latter are commonly referred to as the projection lenses; they focus the light upon the screen. They are made in four standard diameters, with focal length as determined by the size of the screen image desired, and its distance from the projector.

Knowing these factors, the supply dealer or the lens manufacturer readily determines the focal length required. In ordering projection lenses, one should also name the type of light source, projection angle and the make and model of the projector.

Stock focal lengths are usually in quarter sizes from 3 to 7 inches, 7½ and 8 inches.

LENS ASSEMBLIES, SOUND

OPTICAL UNITS are composed of lenses, and include either a slit opening or a wedge-shaped prism, by means of which the exciting light of the sound system is focussed on the sound track, and reduced to the height determined by the highest frequency to be reproduced.

LETTERS, ATTRACTION BOARD

CHANGEABLE sign letters permit rapid change of marquee advertising. Such letters have been made of various metals and compositions as well as glass. Usually, however, they are either of cast metal or glass. Glass letters are commonly in panel form, with the letter translucent (opal glass) and the surrounding panel area opaque.

The so-called silhouette marquee letter has generally supplanted other types in attraction boards. It reverses the visual character of the glass translucent letter, being itself opaque, while the surrounding area is illuminated. The silhouette letter is of cast metal and is attached readily to rods or wires in front of translucent glass panels, which latter cover a metal lamp box. The lamp box fits into the structure of the marquee so as to be integral with it.

Attraction board equipment adapted to the combination of silhouette letters of various sizes permit a "typographical" treatment of the announcement, which gives it freshness and advertising values not obtainable with unvarying lines of letters, physically identical for every program.

LIGHTS, SPOT AND FLOOD

ARC AND incandescent lamps are available for use on the stage, in the projection room, in coves, and in banks of incandescents that flood the stage from the wings. Arc lamps will burn from 25 to 140 amperes, and incandescents up to 2,000 watts. Most spotlights can be used for full flood as well. Spot and floodlights of incandescent type are designed for wattages of from about 75 to 2,000.

MARQUEES

A MARQUEE is to be regarded as essential to the motion picture theatre. There are exceptions, due to location and form of building, but not many. Its function as a means of protection for patrons from rain and snow has become of less importance than its function as an advertising medium. It advertises the theatre and the program, by distinguishing the building from other commercial establishments on the street, by the theatricalism of its lighting, by announcing the features of the performance.

Marquees today have become more closely associated with the general architectural form of the theatre front than they originally were. They are frequently constructed according to specifications supplied by the architect, who has designed the marquee itself, along with other display and sign elements of the front, as a part of the facade.

Another later development is unit construction of marquees, providing prefabricated marquees to fit most any theatre entrance, complete with all attraction board equipment, and also with theatre name sign (vertical or otherwise), if desired.

Most marquees have been rectangular in shape, but because the greatest amount of announcement space on such marquees cannot be read up and down the street, particularly on the side on which the theatre is located, other shapes have come into vogue, notably one combining rectangular with triangular forms.

Marquees are generally of sheet metal construction, with soffits of metal or glass illuminated by incandescent lamps or lighting troughs. There are, of course, many variations in pattern and illumination; however, the design should provide for Attraction Boards (which see) as integral parts of the structure.

MICROPHONES

THE THEATRE has many uses for microphones, from ballyhoo work on a sound truck, or in connection with the front display, to reinforcement of stage performances, announcements of election returns and sporting events, or emergency talks to pacify an audience in time of trouble. Microphones can be used with separate amplifying and loudspeaker equipment, or can in most cases be operated through the existing sound installation.

The early type of carbon granule microphone has been almost completely replaced by later and superior instruments, the crystal magnetic and velocity microphones. The condenser microphone used in early sound recording is also obsolete. The crystal microphone, and the various types of magnetic microphone (including a combination instrument utilizing both magnetic and velocity principles) have come into general application to theatre uses.

PHOTOCELL MECHANISMS FOR DOORS AND FOUNTAINS

MECHANISMS FOR the automatic operation of drinking fountains and opening of doors, with the mechanism actuated by the interruption of a beam of light trained on a photoelectric cell, are obtainable alone or as part of such door or fountain equipment. (See Fountains.)

Doors that open automatically merely upon the approach of a person, increasingly being used in hotels, restaurants and bus and railroad stations, have similar application to the theatre for passage from vestibule to lobby, and from lobby to foyer.

PHOTOELECTRIC CELLS

ALTHOUGH IT has a number of applications in many fields, in the theatre the photoelectric cell functions principally as a vital "organ" of the sound reproduction system, transforming the light of the exciter lamp, after it has passed through the sound track of the film, into the electrical energy which, amplified, actuates the loudspeakers.

PROJECTOR PARTS

THE WEAR to which projectors are subjected requires close observation of all parts and prompt replacement or repair before any that have become defective injure others that must work with them. It is also to be borne in mind that mechanical faults in the projector are usually "picked up" by the sound system.

PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEMS

PUBLIC ADDRESS and sound-re-enforcement systems may provide any one or all of various services. They can be designed for amplifying stage sound, for managers' announcements, for ballyhoo.

In the theatre the public address system may consist of microphones suitably connected to the standard sound installation, or an entirely separate system, with its own amplification, wiring and also speakers, may be employed. RECTIFIER TUBES

VACUUM AND gas-filled tubes used to convert alternating current to direct current are made in many ratings. The smaller sizes are commonly thought of as being in the category of radio or amplifier tubes. But while there is no distinction in principle of operation, the larger sizes, having current capacities of from 2½ to 30 amperes, are by custom classified separately.

These are often described by their best-known trade name as "Tungar" tubes. In the theatre such tubes are used to provide rectified direct current to arc lamps and to sound exciter lamps.

RECTIFIERS AND POWER UNITS

RECTIFIERS are devices that employ rectifying tubes or copper compound rectifying assemblies (dry type) for the purpose of converting alternating current to direct current. The larger sizes are fan-cooled, and supply direct current to the projection arc.

The smaller sizes are of somewhat different design electrically, incorporating electrical filters to insure smooth d.c. output, and to supply power to exciter lamps, speaker fields, tube filaments and other parts of the sound system.

REELS

REELS NECESSARY for takeup magazines of projectors and also otherwise constantly utilized in the projection room, are available in a number of sizes and types of construction. The standard reel in the United States (since September 1, 1936) has a diameter of 14½ inches, and a 4½-inch hub for the accommodation of the film lengths up to 2,000 feet. Reels are also available in the former American standard size (diameter 10 inches, hub 2 inches) while another available size adapted to the standard American film length of 2,000 feet has a diameter of 15 inches. REFLECTORS FOR INCANDESCENT LAMPS

METAL RECEPTACLES for incandescent lamps, having a reflecting inside finish and with a curvature calculated to make most efficient use of available light, are obtainable in several types adapted particularly to marquee trim and soffit lighting, to sign letter lamping, sign borders and similar uses.

There are several types and sizes of reflectors designed for low-wattage lamps, equipped with a glass roundel, or cover, which not only protects the lamp and reflector, but provides color if desired without use of colored lamps.

Other types of reflectors have swivel mounting, readily permitting reflection of the light in any direction.

REFLECTORS, PROJECTION ARC

THESE ARE made in numerous sizes, and with different curvatures, spherical and parabolic, for mazda projectors, reflecting arc projectors and spotlight projectors.

In addition to reflectors made of optical glass, a metal type of reflector is now available.

REFLECTOR SHIELDS

GLASS SHIELDS, or guards, are obtainable for the protection of reflector arc mirrors against pitting (which is produced to a relatively pronounced degree by the low-voltage high-intensity arc). The shields themselves are pitted in the course of operation, but since they are much less expensive than reflectors, their use reduces maintenance costs.

REWINDERS, FILM

FILM REWINDERS are available in two general types, open and fireproof enclosed. The open type is offered in a number of different models, either as a single unit or as two separate units that are clamped to the work bench, or bolted in place. The enclosed type is a single unit.

Both open and enclosed types may be hand-driven or motor-driven, may have sleeve bearings or ball bearings, may accommodate either 1,000- or 2,000-foot reels, or both, and may have either one or several driving speeds.

Some of the motor-driven types incorporate accessories by means of which the same motor can be used for general machine work, such as grinding and polishing.

RHEOSTATS

THESE ARE devices that introduce an electrical resistance into any circuit, the value of the resistance being variable at will. There are several methods of varying resistance, one being to move a contact lever over a series of switch points, one being to move a slider over the coil of the resistance wire itself, and one being to compress carbon or graphite discs or powder.

SCREENS

THEATRE SCREENS of the types generally regarded as suitable for theatres are classified according to construction, surface and reflective characteristics. Four general types are available—solid, porous, perforated (consistently perforated to all edges), variably perforated (perforated only at speaker area), and translucent (the latter for rear projection).

Surfaces (except for the translucent screen) may be diffusive or specular. The latter is specified for narrow, relatively deep auditoriums since the light is concentrated upon seats directly in front of the screen. Wider theatres must use a semi-diffusive or highly diffusive type. In surface treatment screens are white, silver ("metallic") or beaded (glass). Specular screens have either of the latter two types of surface.

SIGNS (ELECTRIC) FOR THEATRE NAME

ELECTRIC SIGNS (metal framework with illumination provisions) are available in a wide variety of designs more or less closely associated with the architecture of the theatre front. While they are commonly especially designed by the architect or sign construction company, there are also stock designs adaptable to the theatre front. Gas tube (neon) and incandescent lamp illumination has been found effective for these signs in combination as well as alone, and either type of lighting can be flashed.

Horizontal name signs have normally been more closely associated with the marquee than the vertical sign has, but often the vertical sign can be effectively related to the marquee and entrance by continuing the sign illumination scheme down to the marquee and even across its soffit. It is to be noted that a prefabricated type of marquee is available complete with theatre name signs either vertical or horizontal and all electrical facilities.

SIGNS, DIRECTIONAL

DIRECTIONAL SIGNS, including exit signs, those designating men's and women's rooms, lounges, balcony stairs, etc., are now available in a wide range of stock designs, while they may be made up in special designs at relatively low cost. Instead of being more or less confined to plain metal lamp boxes, such as were particularly employed at one time for exit signs, stock types now are obtainable with decorative shapes, fluted chromium finish, etched glass, etc., in colors and also with appropriate figures.

SLIDES, PROJECTION

SLIDES FOR the projection of song lyrics, advertising and effects are made either of glass or other material suitably transparent. The more elaborate slides, carrying pictorial matter or designs, are usually of glass, while a flexible transparent material permits the ready preparation of an announcement slide on a typewriter, the blank material being kept on hand and, when written upon, inserted into a frame.

SOUND EQUIPMENT, COMPLETE

SOUND SYSTEMS have followed a steady evolution toward simplicity and compactness since their first inntroduction. Only the larger theatres now use sound power supplies dissociated from the sound amplifier; in smaller equipment the two commonly constitute a single unit, or at most two units in a single compact cabinet. The majority of modern systems consist of a single amplifier-power supply unit, two sound heads, and suitable loudspeaker assembly.

More elaborate apparatus may include an amplifier rack mounting decibel meter and other accessories, and an emergency amplifier.

SPEAKERS AND HORNS

TO CONVERT the electrical product of amplification into audible sound, speaker "units" are available in considerable variety. The practice now is to use two types of speakers to reproduce different bands of sound frequencies.

Speakers are available in a.c. types, in a great variety of d.c. types, and in the new permanent magnet types that need no field excitation.

Baffles are required with every speaker. The simplest is flat board, behind which the speaker is mounted, large enough to provide baffling for the lowest frequency to be reproduced. In many auditoriums, however, the "folded" baffle provides a longer sound path, and therefore better "loading," for the low-frequency speakers. Directional trumpets or baffles are used for high-frequency speakers or tweeters, consisting of clusters of small trumpets operated by a single tweeter being favored. These arrangements secure better distribution of the high frequencies, which have a normal tendency to travel in straight lines, over-supplying some seats and missing many others entirely. Clusters of directional baffles applied to the tweeters correct this tendency.

UPHOLSTERING MATERIALS

MANUFACTURERS of auditorium seating, and furniture for lobbies, foyers and lounges can supply upholstery coverings in a great variety of materials, patterns and colors, but the hard usage such furnishings normally get in the theatre makes durability a prime consideration.

Among the better fabrics suited to auditorium chairs are mohair (which is obtainable in the low-pile type used in automobiles, as well as in luxurious deep piles) and velour. Imitation leather (which, as produced today, is indistinguishable from real leather to most people) is also well adapted to auditorium chairs.

You wouldn't use kerosene lamps in a Modern House

But are you using an old-fashioned sound system on modern movies?

Here's an important fact to remember—Hollywood is now producing finer sound than ever before—because movie fans demand good sound. To properly reproduce it—and build up your business—install —available at Low Cost to Theatres of Every Size!

RCA Photophone Magic Voice of the Screen

LET'S LOOK AT FACTS. You can show the finest pictures in the world—but you'll have empty seats in your theatre if the sound is poor. Because nowadays movie fans know good sound from bad—and patronize the theatre where listening is as much fun as looking.

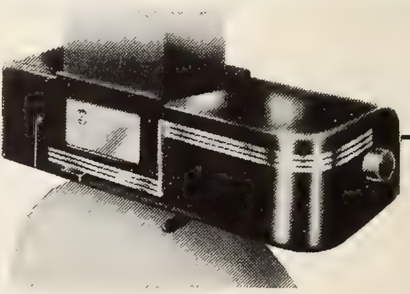
Hollywood knows this and that's why Hollywood puts such excellent sound on its films. But how about you—are you letting an outmoded sound system hurt your takes?

It will pay you to find out about the new RCA Photophone Magic Voice of the Screen. For here's the equipment built for true reproduction of modern movie sound. It's the tonic your box office needs. And its low cost will surprise you, just as its many new features will delight you. Full details from your RCA Photophone representative.

Better sound means better box office—and RCA tubes mean better sound.

RCA Photophone's service organization has a low cost theatre service plan in which you'll be interested.

Obsolete equipment costs you money in more ways than one!



Only the New Magic Voice of the Screen offers all these Features!

This splendid new equipment gives you full assurance of constant film speed by adding the amazing new Shock Proof Drive to the famous Rotary Stabilizer! Besides this great feature, the new Magic Voice brings you new styling, new protection, new convenience, new added reserve power and many other outstanding proofs that it's the best value you've ever seen! Ask your RCA Photophone representative for complete information.
